Is VAC even available for the iPad? More importantly, would you need it on the iPad?

I often just use the iPad mic and put it near a portables speaker, but you can use the line in also. If I am going to do more than that, work with line level audio from any of the radios, for example, I am on a PC, not the iPad.

OK, checked it this morning, and 12180 kHz is indeed the Vietnamese jammer. Or at least, it is on the same bearing as the siren jammers that are, at the same time, attacking Radio Free Asia's Vietnamese service. Since those jammers hit the Vietnamese service, the DF cut is right through Vietnam, and Vietnam is known to use this type of jammer, I am going to call it Vietnamese.

I have read about people trying to use VAC with the iPad usually without success.

I use an i5 laptop with the Excalibur and VAC, MMSSTV and a PSK decoder I don't recall at the moment. All work, but it is a headache to switch software and connections. VAC makes it a lot easier but can still be tough if you are trying to catch a pirate or clandestine.

Does DRM stand for dead radio method or dropouts really miserable?

Unless you want to listen to Disco Palace or Vatican Radio, I see this disappearing instead of expanding. What happens when Sackville shuts down - does DRM lose this relay site also?

This is a case of supply / demand where you have neither. Why not reduce the license fee. Maybe that will spark some interest and make a DRM radio cost effective to manufacture.

Weekly Highlights and Forecasts
#
Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
28 May - 03 June 2012

Solar activity was at very low to moderate levels during the period. Very low levels were observed from 28 - 29 May. An increase to low levels was observed from 30 May - 02 June as Region 1493 (N15, L=209, class/area Dso/170 01 June) and Region 1496 (N16, L=199 class/area Cso/120 on 01 June) rotated onto the visible disk. Another increase to moderate levels was observed on 03 June as Region 1496 produced an M3 x-ray flare at 03/1755 UTC. Associated with this event were both a Type II radio sweep (estimated shock speed of 1077 km/s) signature and CME supporting imagery from the LASCO C2 imager. After analysis, this CME was determined to not be Earth directed. Region 1493 was the most active region during the period producing 8 C-class x-ray events.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at high levels on 28 - 29 May and then decreased to moderate to normal levels for the remainder of the period.

Geomagnetic field activity was at quiet to minor storm levels during the period. Quiet conditions were observed from 28 - 29 May. Late on 29 May, solar wind speeds, as measured by the ACE spacecraft, increased from 350 km/s to around 450 km/s. Solar wind speeds remained elevated till late on 31 May. In conjunction with these elevated solar winds, quiet to unsettled levels were observed from 30 - 31 May with isolated active and minor storm levels at high latitudes. A return to quiet levels was observed from 01 - 02 June. Late on 02 June, an isolated active period was observed due to prolonged negative IMF Bz measured by the ACE spacecraft. On 03 June, an increase from quiet to minor storm levels with major storm periods observed at high latitudes was observed. This increase in activity was associated with a continuation of sustained negative IMF Bz from 02 June.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
04 June - 30 June 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at low levels with a chance for M-class activity from 04 - 15 June.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at normal to moderate levels during 04 - 05 June, 13 - 19 June, and 26 - 30 June. High levels are expected during 06 - 12 June, and 20 - 25 June.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be at active levels with a chance for minor storm levels on 04 - 05 June as a coronal hole high speed stream (CH HSS) becomes geoeffective. Quiet to active levels are expected on 06 June as CH HSS effects persist. A decrease to quiet to unsettled levels is expected on 07 - 08 June as the CH HSS wanes. Predominantly quiet levels are expected from 09 - 17 June. Quiet to active levels are expected from 18 - 20 June as another CH HSS becomes geoeffective. A return to mostly quiet levels is expected for the remainder of the period.

I tell you who's royalty, DD.

The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net.

Those high level discussions are just downright .. MAJESTIC.

Where else have you ever heard topics like ..

Clinton's a crook
Bush is a crook
Gore is a crook
Biden's a crook
They're all crooks

Kings of the airwaves, DD, that's what we know about The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net. Radio Royalty for sure.

I found my old rinky dink oil filter wrench. Now, tomorrow I needs to go buy some Valvoline motor oil and a Wix oil filter. On the other hand I just might go to Acey's auto shop on McDowell Road and let them change it for me, fuel filter too.Ergo my old beat up gravel and dirt driveway, there isn't enough room for me to slide under my van. Van has a single I beam front axel and a lonnng aluminum running board on both sides. I don't think I feel like jacking up all four wheels on my big ass full size van. If you put it on according to the directions you don't need a wrench to get it off. I have been hand-tightening oil filters for almost 50 years and haven't lost one yet. I only need a wrench if I let the idiots at the dealership change my oil.

Hello,

Had to reinstall a new hd as my old one crashed.

I had a very nice GMT clock on my desktop that I would sure like to get again for this re-install.
I just cannot remember the name of it; looked via Google, but just cant seem to find it.

Was a small rectangle, that displayed (only) the GMT time.

Anyone know where to find this one, or something similar perhaps ?

Thanks,
Bob

And then Dhia said:

> Mississippi is a Right To Work State. Damn Unions!!! I Hate Unions!!!

Well, unions are just organizations of people and they are prey to the same possibilities of corruption and cruelty that other organizations, like corporations, are capable of.

Both corporations and unions have discovered that a fast way to advance their agendas or their power is to get special privileges through legislation, sometimes including monopolies or near-monopolies.

Example 1: "We are the only employer here (unless you want to scratch a turnip crop out of the poor soil), we own the town, we own the only store in town, we run the police, and we own most of the houses. You do what we say or starve -- no other choice except uprooting yourself from family and friends and leaving." Add to that a dollop of false imprisonment if you 'make trouble,' or broken kneecaps or a bullet if you _really_ try to change things.

Example 2: "This union looks out for you. So you've got to join. Fail to join and you lose your job -- that's in our contract; you have no choice. And you must pay us money too: again, no choice -- even if the money goes to things of which you totally disapprove. And try and work when we say there's a stoppage, and you're lookin' at a couple of broken bones, Charlie."

This kind of bullying and corruption seems to be part of the human condition, unfortunately.

My position is that, in a natural and virtuous society, we should be free to form or dissolve any associations, whether businesses or unions (or employment or friendships), with complete freedom. People who use pretended law or violence to prevent that are outlaws themselves.

Instead of having a sense of community, though, and just plain being honorable and respecting the other fellows' freedom, both sides have sometimes resorted to violence and corruption -- and, worst of all, getting laws written to give their side more power.

Entangling ourselves with endless laws and regulations and inserting a third party (whether a thug or a policeman or a legislator) into agreements that ought to be just between two parties -- is _no_ substitute for honor.

With my best,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

"...ALL due to the unions" you say ???

You seem to have conveniently overlooked the years of poor quality of the American cars and the fact that the Asians ate our lunch for years.

You further overlook all the people that Henry Ford (the First) brought to Detroit in the early 1930s that populate "the ghettos" -- well before the birth of the unions.

A reasonable person would certainly consider those factors.

If you want to get rid of unions, well, fair enough. But what is your "Plan B"? With no unions, please tell us who will watch out for the working man's wages, hours worked, health care and protection from management abuse.

When all is said and done, I bet you still like having Saturdays and Sundays off and only having to work 8 hours a day -- thanks to the unions.

I just heard on WLS 890 that Bob Welch, once associated with Fleetwood Mac, has died due to a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

RIP Bob, and thanks for the music.

World War Two Switzerland was milking both sides, building and repairing equipment for the Allies and the Axis powers. How about Sweden? America lost over 450 Army Air Force Soldiers bombing two ball bearing factories in Germany. Volvo (the name means, I Roll) took up the slack supplying ball bearings to the Nazis. Neutral, my ASS!!! They had a good reason to help Adolph.

Don't overlook the fact that the US had plans to destroy England's Navy and Commonwealth structure, back in the 1930s.

http://www.damninteresting.com/americas-secret-plan-to-invade-canada/

When they discovered they could get Germany to do the work for them, it only made sense to send money. The Germans could get to be the villains and the States look like saviors. All the money sent to Germany was an investment in post war profit.

The Americans let it go on long enough to let England get in a real bind. People will sign anything when they see oblivion coming.

Once all the backroom deals were made, the US entered the war.

The States got access to all the Commonwealth for trading purposes and hundred and fifty year long dirt cheap leases on all the military bases in England that they wanted. As far as I know, the taxpayers in both countries are still paying off that war.

It took over a hundred years to pay off the Napoleonic wars.

Also keep in mind that General Motors got billions paid to them by Germany after the war because of lost profits. GM wanted the money they would have made had THEY been manufacturing arms for the Reich and the World controlling court dictated the payment.

"Three critically-endangered Sumatran elephants have been found dead in an oil palm plantation in western Indonesia and are believed to have been poisoned, an NGO said Saturday.

Villagers found the dead animals on Thursday in a government-owned oil palm plantation in the eastern part of Aceh province. They were estimated to be four and five years old, local environmental group Fakta said.

“We suspected that they died after consuming bars of soap laced with poison we found near the carcass,” the group’s chief Rabono Wiranata told AFP." Story continued at http://www.globalanimal.org/2012/06/05/endangered-sumatran-elephants-poisoned/75808/

I don't think so. The roots of the Second World War started many years before the general rise of nationalism (shockingly in several places) in Europe.How about the so-called'Great Game'? And Communism really existed in the stone age,btw. I just cannot imagine hunting mammoths or sabre-toothed tigers alone...

I don't know why, but a lot of people nowadays don't think that we need unions because they don't think we have anything to fear from powerful corporate interests.

Just look at the healthcare debate. Lots of folks are uncomfortable with government sponsored healthcare, the requirement to buy health insurance and so on, yet they are completely comfortable to remain at the mercy of big health insurance providers----despite the fact that those providers stand to profit directly and immediately from denying people the healthcare they need, and despite the fact that health insurance providers have a long, well-documented record of cheating people out of their healthcare at the moment when they need it most. I'm completely on board when people say they don't trust the government. You'll get no argument from me there. But I'm afraid you lose me when you assume that corporate interests are going to exhibit a deep and altruistic concern about little ole me at the expense of their own profits. A man would have to drink one hell of a lot of kool-aid to believe that.

Obama’s Third-Party History

By Stanley Kurtz

June 7, 2012 4:00 A.M.

On the evening of January 11, 1996, while Mitt Romney was in the final years of his run as the head of Bain Capital, Barack Obama formally joined the New Party,

http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=7434
http://www.keywiki.org/index.php/New_Party which was deeply hostile to the mainstream of the Democratic party and even to American capitalism. In 2008, candidate Obama deceived the American public about his potentially damaging tie to this third party. The issue remains as fresh as today’s headlines, as Romney argues that Obama is trying to move the United States toward European-style social democracy, which was precisely the New Party’s goal.

In late October 2008, when I wrote here

http://www.nationalreview.com/articles/226029/something-new-here/stanley-kurtz at National Review Online that Obama had been a member of the New Party, his campaign sharply denied it, calling my claim a “crackpot smear.”

http://web.archive.org/web/20090730002941/http:/www.fightthesmears.com/articles/28/KurtzSmears.html

Fight the Smears, an official Obama-campaign website, staunchly maintained that “Barack has been a member of only one political party, the Democratic Party.” I rebutted this, http://www.nationalreview.com/articles/226147/life-new-party/stanley-kurtz but the debate was never taken up by the mainstream press.

Recently obtained evidence from the updated records of Illinois ACORN at the Wisconsin Historical Society now definitively establishes that Obama was a member of the New Party. He also signed a “contract” promising to publicly support and associate himself with the New Party while in office.

Minutes of the meeting on January 11, 1996, of the New Party’s Chicago chapter read as follows:

Barack Obama, candidate for State Senate in the 13th Legislative District, gave a statement to the membership and answered questions. He signed the New Party “Candidate Contract” and requested an endorsement from the New Party. He also joined the New Party.

Consistent with this, a roster of the Chicago chapter of the New Party from early 1997 lists Obama as a member, with January 11, 1996, indicated as the date he joined.

Knowing that Obama disguised his New Party membership helps make sense of his questionable handling of the 2008 controversy over his ties to ACORN (Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now).

http://www.keywiki.org/index.php/Association_of_Community_Organizations_for_Reform_Now

During his third debate with John McCain, Obama said that the “only” involvement he’d had with ACORN was to represent the group in a lawsuit seeking to compel Illinois to implement the National Voter Registration Act, or motor-voter law.

http://latimesblogs.latimes.com/washington/2008/10/debate-transcri.html
http://elections.nytimes.com/2008/president/debates/third-presidential-debate.html

The records of Illinois ACORN and its associated union clearly contradict that assertion, as I show in my political biography of the president, Radical-in-Chief: Barack Obama and the Untold Story of American Socialism.

http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/1439155089/

Why did Obama deny his ties to ACORN? The group was notorious in 2008 for thug tactics, fraudulent voter registrations, and its role in popularizing risky subprime lending. Admitting that he had helped to fund ACORN’s voter-registration efforts and train some of their organizers would doubtless have been an embarrassment but not likely a crippling blow to his campaign. So why not simply confess the tie and make light of it? The problem for Obama was ACORN’s political arm, the New Party.

The revelation in 2008 that Obama had joined an ACORN-controlled, leftist third party could have been damaging indeed, and coming clean about his broader work with ACORN might easily have exposed these New Party ties. Because the work of ACORN and the New Party often intersected with Obama’s other alliances, honesty about his ties to either could have laid bare the entire network of his leftist political partnerships.

Although Obama is ultimately responsible for deceiving the American people in 2008 about his political background, he got help from his old associates. Each of the two former political allies who helped him to deny his New Party membership during campaign ’08 was in a position to know better.

The Fight the Smears website quoted Carol Harwell, http://keywiki.org/index.php/Carol_Harwell who managed Obama's 1996 campaign for the Illinois senate: "Barack did not solicit or seek the New Party endorsement for state senator in 1995." Drawing on her testimony, Fight the Smears conceded that the New Party did support Obama in 1996 but denied that Obama had ever joined, adding that "he was the only candidate on the ballot in his race and never solicited the endorsement."

We've seen that this is false. Obama formally requested New Party endorsement, signed the candidate contract, and joined the party. Is it conceivable that Obama's own campaign manager could have been unaware of this? The notion is implausible. And the documents make Harwell's assertion more remarkable still.

The New Party had a front group called Progressive Chicago, whose job was to identify candidates that the New Party and its sympathizers might support. Nearly four years before Obama was endorsed by the New Party, both he and Harwell joined Progressive Chicago and began signing public letters that regularly reported on the group's meetings.

http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/individualProfile.asp?indid=1511

By prominently taking part in Progressive Chicago activities, Obama was effectively soliciting New Party support for his future political career (as was Harwell, on Obama's behalf). So Harwell's testimony is doubly false.

When the New Party controversy broke out, just about the only mainstream journalist to cover it was Politico's Ben Smith, whose evident purpose was to dismiss it out of hand.

http://www.politico.com/blogs/bensmith/1008/The_dread_New_Party.html

He contacted Obama's official spokesman Ben LaBolt, who claimed that his candidate "was never a member" of the New Party. And New Party co-founder and leader Joel Rogers

http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/individualProfile.asp?indid=2460
http://www.keywiki.org/index.php/Joel_Rogers told Smith, "We didn't really have members." But a line in the New Party's official newsletter explicitly identified Obama as a party member. Rogers dismissed that as mere reference to "the fact that the party had endorsed him."

This is nonsense. I exposed the falsity of Rogers's absurd claim, and Smith's credulity in accepting it, in 2008

(here http://www.nationalreview.com/corner/172668/party-without-members/stanley-kurtz and here http://www.nationalreview.com/corner/172672/bias-unmasked/stanley-kurtz).

And in Radical-in-Chief I took on Rogers's continuing attempts to justify it. The recently uncovered New Party records reveal how dramatically far from the truth Rogers's statement has been all along.

In a memo dated January 29, 1996, Rogers, writing as head of the New Party Interim Executive Council, addressed "standing concerns regarding existing chapter development and activity, the need for visibility as well as new members." So less than three weeks after Obama joined the New Party, Rogers was fretting about the need for new members. How, then, could Rogers assert in 2008 that his party "didn't really have members"? Internal documents show that the entire leadership of the New Party, both nationally and in Chicago, was practically obsessed with signing up new members, from its founding moments until it dissolved in the late 1990s.

In 2008, after I called Rogers out on his ridiculous claim that his party had no members, he explained to Ben Smith that "we did have regular supporters whom many called 'members,' but it just meant contributing regularly, not getting voting rights or other formal power in NP governance." This is also flatly contradicted by the newly uncovered records.

At just about the time Obama joined the New Party, the Chicago chapter was embroiled in a bitter internal dispute. A party-membership list is attached to a memo in which the leaders of one faction consider a scheme to disqualify potential voting members from a competing faction, on the grounds that those voters had not renewed their memberships. The factional leaders worried that their opponents would legitimately object to this tactic, since a mailing that called for members to renew hadn't been properly sent out. At any rate, the memo clearly demonstrates that, contrary to Rogers's explanation, membership in the New Party entailed the right to vote on matters of party governance. In fact, Obama's own New Party endorsement, being controversial, was thrown open to a members' vote on the day he joined the party.

Were Harwell and Rogers deliberately lying in order to protect Obama and deceive the public? Readers can decide for themselves. Yet it is clear that Obama, through his official spokesman, Ben LaBolt, and the Fight the Smears website, was bent on deceiving the American public about a matter whose truth he well knew.

The documents reveal that the New Party's central aim was to move the United States steadily closer to European social democracy, a goal that Mitt Romney has also attributed to Obama. New Party leaders disdained mainstream Democrats, considering them tools of business, and promised instead to create a partnership between elected officials and local community organizations, with the goal of socializing the American economy to an unprecedented degree.

The party's official "statement of principles," which candidates seeking endorsement from the Chicago chapter were asked to support, called for a "peaceful revolution" and included redistributive proposals substantially to the left of the Democratic party.

To get a sense of the ideology at play, consider that the meeting at which Obama joined the party opened with the announcement of a forthcoming event featuring the prominent socialist activist Frances Fox Piven.

http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/individualProfile.asp?indid=2505
http://www.keywiki.org/index.php/Frances_Fox_Piven

The Chicago New Party sponsored a luncheon with Michael Moore that same year.

http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/individualProfile.asp?indid=899
http://www.keywiki.org/index.php/Michael_Moore

I have more to say on the New Party's ideology and program, Obama's ties to the party, and the relevance of all this to the president's campaign for reelection. See the forthcoming [2012 June 25] issue of National Review.

In the meantime, let us see whether a press that let candidate Obama off the hook in 2008 — and that in 2012 is obsessed with the president's youthful love letters — will now refuse to report that President Obama once joined a leftist third party, and that he hid that truth from the American people in order to win the presidency.

Some of Marx's material is pretty compelling:

The latent causes of faction are thus sown in the nature of man; and we see them everywhere brought into different degrees of activity, according to the different circumstances of civil society. A zeal for different opinions concerning religion, concerning government, and many other points, as well of speculation as of practice; an attachment to different leaders ambitiously contending for pre-eminence and power; or to persons of other descriptions whose fortunes have been interesting to the human passions, have, in turn, divided mankind into parties, inflamed them with mutual animosity, and rendered them much more disposed to vex and oppress each other than to co-operate for their common good. So strong is this propensity of mankind to fall into mutual animosities, that where no substantial occasion presents itself, the most frivolous and fanciful distinctions have been sufficient to kindle their unfriendly passions and excite their most violent conflicts. But the most common and durable source of factions has been the various and unequal distribution of property.
Those who hold and those who are without property have ever formed distinct interests in society. Those who are creditors, and those who are debtors, fall under a like discrimination. A landed interest, a manufacturing interest, a mercantile interest, a moneyed interest, with many lesser interests, grow up of necessity in civilized nations, and divide them into different classes, actuated by different sentiments and views. The regulation of these various and interfering interests forms the principal task of modern legislation, and involves the spirit of party and faction in the necessary and ordinary operations of the government."

From Democracy Now http://www.democracynow.org/2012/6/7/headlines#677
Israel Announces More West Bank Settlements

The Israeli government has announced a new round of illegal settlement construction in the occupied West Bank. On Wednesday, Israel said it plans to build more than 500 new housing units in various West Bank settlements. Speaking to lawmakers, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said no Israeli administration has been friendlier to the settlements than his.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu: "There is no government that supports or will support settlements more than the government I lead. I also say that there is no government that withstood such heavy pressures that could harm settlement."

The new settlement building continues Israel’s stance of flouting a U.S.-backed pledge to stop West Bank expansion. In Washington, State Department spokesperson Mark Toner criticized Israel’s plan.

Mark Toner: "We’re very clear that continued Israeli settlement activity in the West Bank undermines peace efforts and contradicts Israeli commitments and obligations, including the 2003 roadmap. You know, our position on settlement — settlements remains unchanged. We do not accept the legitimacy of continued Israeli settlement activity."

Death by poisoning is a long drawn out process of pain and suffering. It is so inhumane and cruel it is unbelievable that any one would do it and then brag about it on the internet. Jaw-dropping stupidity.

But of course history has shown that he is wrong.
Literally dead wrong: http://www.GlobalMuseumOnCommunism.org

Socialist theories are not only logically incorrect but the premises they use to form their arguments are incorrect as well. The birth of civilization is due to the start of societal traditions placing importance on private property leading to expansion, trade, and eventually the modern capitalist system. Socialists are wrong because they disregard the fact that modern civilization naturally evolved and was not planned. Additionally, since modern civilization and all of its customs and traditions naturally led to the current order and are needed for its continuance, any fundamental change to the system that tries to control it is doomed to fail since it would be impossible or unsustainable in modern civilization. Price signals are the only means of enabling each economic decision maker to communicate tacit knowledge or dispersed knowledge to each other, in order to solve the economic calculation problem.

The belief that one person or group, no matter how smart, can know how best to allocate resources is a classic example of "the fatal conceit."

Congratulations you have broke the record for number of bald faced lies told in fewest words.
Lie #1. "They were on a military ship in a combat zone."
Fact: The USS Liberty was sailing at 5 knots with no offensive armament in international waters.

Lie #2. "were killed in a case of mistaken identity."
Fact: The USS Liberty was identified as a US naval ship by Israeli reconnaissance aircraft nine hours before the attack and continuously tracked by Israeli radar and aircraft with hourly overflights thereafter. The Jews then launched their premeditated attack without warning and without attempting to contact the American ship.

Lie #3. "Happens all the time in the world."
Fact: No it doesn't.

Lie #4. "You just hate Jews" Fact: No, what I hate is innocent human beings being intentionally murdered and maimed and war criminals going unpunished.

Lie #5. "and want to use the incident to incite hatred against Israel."
Fact: Israel is a terrorist state by all agreed upon international standards. Their own deplorable acts are what incites hatred against them not an individual posting facts in a newsgroup.

Sorry Sweetie but capitalism has no place in a shrinking world. We need to allocate resources on a needs-based plan; waiting for markets to catch up will result in people dying. Capitalism is OK during the growth phase, but lacks any relevance to sustainability.

Huh?

I certainly don't assume "corporate interests are going to exhibit a deep and altruistic concern about little ole me...", so I'm not sure to whom you are referring.

Do you remember when they wanted to raise the minimum wage a few years age, raise it a laughably pitiful small amount.

The howl that Business raised about that could be heard halfway to the moon.

I don't think anybody has to worry about saying "altruistic" and "Big Business" in the same sentence.

You also raise an interesting question why the average guy supports politicians that are against the better interests of the average guy.

Example: Look at all these old geezers on Medicare and Social Security and yet support Romney and Paul Ryan and their plan to gut Medicare and Social Security.

Go figure...

Allocating resources is what the USSR did so well.... ;) <SARCASM>

Because they couldn't even keep the central Government store shelves stocked with toilet paper.

Central planning is why Capitalist businesses fail and sometimes what makes them so very successful. One person or one group with all the power that makes good/bad decisions, diversity is how you limit the destructive force of stupidity.... that's why NASA puts triple redundant systems in manned space ships, you don't want all your eggs in one basket.

Socialism and communism will always fail because they have no redundant or diversity in their "one size fits all" systems and systems will fail and when they fail and your lives are 100% dependent on them. It is a fatal mistake that will create total mission/ideological failure.

That's why competition (CAPITALISM) will re-appear on it's own without any government support and yet Socialism will never start successfully without government force.

Being Eco Socialists you think Nature is good and man is bad, everywhere but in your lust for power and government control.

For many years, physicists have tried to find a unified theory of everything. They have faith that somewhere out there, there is a theory that will explain the physical properties of all things, without any exceptions. I'm not sure that dream will be realized in the scientific arena, but I think I might have stumbled across a unified theory that underlies statist philosophies, whether they are socialist or theocratic: sex.

Before you get too excited, this article isn't going to be about voluptuous women in slinky, abbreviated clothes, or scantily clad men with rippling pecs and washboard abs. Sorry.

Instead, this article focuses on the sordid, depressing, government-controlled side of human sexuality. That is, it examines sex not from the viewpoint of any given individual's particular desires, but from the viewpoint of a state intent upon gaining maximum control over that same individual.

Those of us who came of age before the 1980s, when the Judeo-Christian, Western tradition, though battered, was still ascendant, view our sexuality as a private matter. We believe that our bodies are our own property, which means that we should not be touched or controlled sexually without our consent. A person raised with this worldview inevitably believes as well that his ability to control his body is the essence of his individuality. This physical individuality is the antithesis of slavery, which represents a person's ultimate lack of control over his body.

Statist regimes, of course, cannot tolerate self-ownership, which is the natural enemy of government control over the individual. The easiest example one can find of a statist regime using sexuality to deny individuality and dominate its citizens is, of course, Islam.

A wise friend of mine once opined that Islam's entire quarrel with the West rests on its fear that Western values will undermine Islam's control over its women and, with that, its control over the men who benefit from a system that subjugates one half of the population to the control of the other half. There's a great deal of truth in that observation.

Unlike most other conflicts, Islam's quarrel with the West does not revolve around borders, water supplies, or economic control over assets. Instead, it focuses on culture -- and the heart of the Islamic cultural difference with the West, at least in the Muslim mind, is Islam's statist determination to erase a woman's individuality through control over her sexuality.

In the Muslim world, women are viewed as temptresses, and men as feeble creatures incapable of resisting feminine wiles. The only way to control the anarchy that this perceived sexual imbalance creates is for the State -- and remember that Islam and the State are indistinguishable from each other -- to exert total dominion over the women within its reach.

The best way to regulate women is to remove them entirely from view. Islam has traditionally relied upon harems to isolate women from view (and, not coincidentally, from the body politic). This practice is still used in Saudi Arabia, where women may not leave the home unless they are accompanied by a male family member.

Should the imprisonment option be unavailable, however, wrapping the women in completely obscuring, shapeless mountains of cloth is an adequate substitute. Women so enveloped, aside from losing any individuality, are relatively dysfunctional and, therefore, are entirely dependent on men.

Women who seek to express (or are suspected of or falsely accused of expressing) their sexuality free of statist constraints are subject to exceptional cruelty in the Muslim world. This cruelty often comes directly from the State. Sakineh Mohammadie Ashtiani, an Iranian woman and mother of two, was due to be stoned to death for allegedly having an adulterous relationship. When an outcry arose, the Iranian government threw in a surprise murder conviction to justify making adultery a capital crime. Ashtiani is not alone: Twelve other women and three men await the same fate for having allegedly committed an act that, in Western culture, is not a crime against the State.

Islam also sanctions private actions to control women's sexuality in the form of so-called "honor killings." These"all in the family" murders are endemic wherever Muslims live, whether in the Middle East, Europe, England, or America.

The Islamic state manipulates men sexually, too. On the one hand, it theoretically offers men the benefit of an enslaved female population. On the other hand, though, the isolation it imposes on women means that vast numbers of Muslim men are deprived of any access, normal or otherwise, to women.

This deprivation enables Islamic leadership to use the mere promise of sex to entice men into committing suicide on behalf of the state. Islam assures men that, if they engage in suicidal attacks against nonbelievers in order to advance Islam, their reward in the afterlife will be unlimited sex with the famous seventy virgins (or, maybe, they'll enjoy sexual congress with seventy raisins, a much less titillating inducement to suicide).

What's interesting is that, because the Left expresses itself in terms of "freeing" people's sexuality, many people miss the fact that it is every bit as sexually controlling in its own way as Islam is. This control comes about because the Left works assiduously to decouple sex from a person's own sense of bodily privacy and, by extension, self-ownership. If a person has no sense of autonomy, that person is a ready-made cog for the statist machinery.

The practical problem for the Left when it tries to attack individuality as expressed through sexuality is the fact that a person's sense of an inviolate physical self develops quite early,

during childhood:

Once a child individuates, he becomes aware of being his own self. ... The most basic thing one can own is one's own self, and not letting others touch that self in ways you don't like is an exercise in self-ownership. (Emphasis mine.)

The Left, therefore, needs to decouple self and body as early as possible in a person's development -- and it does this by bringing its own peculiar notions of sexuality into the realms of child-rearing and education.

Once upon a time, the radical Leftists were quite open about their agenda. In the late 1960s and early 1970s, German Leftists explicitly sought childhood "sexual liberation" as a political goal. In practice, this meant exposing children to adult sexual practices, focusing obsessively on the children's external sexual organs, speaking about sexual matters in the crudest terms, and, unsurprisingly, engaging in actual sexual molestation. The Leftists advocating this liberation framed it as a way to break free of stifling bourgeois notions of morality that enslaved people and prevented them from realizing full sexual pleasure.

Reading the Leftists' contemporaneous literature, however, reveals a more comprehensive aim than merely breaking those much-derided bourgeois sexual chains. The Leftists also intended to destroy the traditional nuclear family, with its bright lines between parent and child, and to bring down the capitalist system, which is dependent on a competitive, and therefore individualized, workforce:

For instance, "Revolution der Erziehung" ("The Revolution in Education"), a work published by Rowohlt in 1971, which quickly became a bestseller, addresses sexuality as follows: "The de-eroticization of family life, from the prohibition of sexual activity among children to the taboo of incest, serves as preparation for total assimilation -- as preparation for the hostile treatment of sexual pleasure in school and voluntary subjugation to a dehumanizing labor system." (Emphasis mine.)

Nor can the above ranting be excused as the thoughts of a radical fringe. For example, these same European Leftists infiltrated the Catholic Diocese in Mechelen-Brussels, in Belgium, creating a sickening environment that actively promoted pedophilia. In other words, this particular church's forays into perversion were not the secretive gropings of individual priests. Instead, there was a concerted effort, led by a liberal Belgian church hierarchy, to make pedophilia a routine practice within the Church.

Incidentally, Frank Marshall Davis, a radical Leftist who was Obama's surrogate father and mentor during his childhood years in Hawaii, fully supported this politically-driven hyper-sexualization, including sex with children. He engaged in and wrote about disturbing sexual practices such as bondage, simulated rape, undinism, and pedophilia (or, at the very least, pederasty). Since Obama's political ascendancy, both his poetic forays and his peculiar disassociative behavior have supported speculation that Davis, giving free rein to his personal preferences and his commitment to preventing the child from gaining ownership of his own body, may have practiced what he preached on the fatherless young boy given so unthinkingly into his care.

While the overheated Marxist rhetoric of the 1960s has died away, the Leftist preoccupation with childhood sexuality, and its relentless desire to have the state control a child's sexual development -- and, by extension, to deny the child self-ownership -- is still alive and well. The primary pathway the Left currently uses to decouple childhood sexual development from self-individuation is the gay rights agenda.

Many of us who believe that gays and lesbians should be free to pursue their personal lives free from discrimination have felt bewildered by our discomfort with and resistance to all of the homophilic programs that have suddenly invaded our children's schools. To use the language of the Left, though, we should "listen to our feelings."

Subconsciously, we recognize that these pro-homosexual programs have nothing to do with teaching tolerance, which is a virtue in a pluralistic society. Instead, the programs have everything to do with having the state substitute its goal of sexual, and therefore social, control in place of a parent's desire to inculcate his children with traditional Judeo-Christian values, values that focus on the inviolability of the individual, beginning with his body.

Examples abound of supposedly anti-discriminatory programs that, instead of focusing on tolerance, work to direct a child's sexual development away from the zone of privacy that is a hallmark of Western sexuality. Robin of Berkeley describes a group called "Gender Spectrum," which has the ostensible goal of allowing "transgender, gender bending, [and] gender nonconforming" children and teens to hang with each other and share their experiences. She rightly sees this not as an effort to promote tolerance, but as a way to make it "cool to dabble in polyamory and gender nonconformism," thereby "destroy[ing] the West by degrading traditional values."

Only four years ago, California narrowly escaped a legislative effort to pass a bill that would have required all California textbooks, starting in first grade, to include materials focusing on famous homosexuals -- with the focus not on the achievement that made them famous, but simply on the homosexuality itself. A parental outcry forced the legislature to retreat to something more in keeping with a free society, which is the requirement that children may not be exposed to material that is discriminatory to people based on their sexuality.

In Helena, Montana (Montana!), the school board is contemplating a K-12 sex ed program that repeatedly blurs the line between demanding tolerance, which should be an imperative in a free society, and advocating alternative sexuality, which is consistent with the Leftist agenda of separating sexuality from individuality. In Grade 2, children would be taught, appropriately, that "making fun of people by calling them gay (e.g. 'homo,' 'fag,' 'queer') is disrespectful and hurtful." By Grade 3, however, the focus is on breaking down traditional familial norms, as children are taught that to "[u]nderstand media often presents an unrealistic image of what it means to be male or female, what it means to be in love & what parenthood & marriages are like." And so it goes, with a proposed curriculum that veers wildly between respect and advocacy.

The relentless Leftist obsession with homosexuality and variations on traditional sexual gender roles is deeply embedded in the Obama administration. Last year, a vigilant blogger exposed the fact that Kevin Jennings, Obama's "Safe Schools Czar," as part of his leadership role in the Gay, Lesbian and Straight Education Network ("GLSEN"), aggressively promoted child pornography in the classroom. GLSEN's actions had nothing to do with creating a safe, non-discriminatory environment for young people with different sexual orientations and everything to do with using the government (i.e., public schools) to inculcate in children the notion that their bodies have no boundaries. A body with no boundaries, of course, is a body that can easily be decoupled from the individual's control and then ceded to the state.

While the gay agenda, which is cloaked in civil rights language that makes it hard to challenge, is the leading edge of the state's desire to control children's sexuality, Leftists also use the schools to manipulate heterosexual behaviors so as to destroy a child's physical boundaries. In England, parents were aghast to learn that a school was requiring its first-grade pupils to massage each other. In Iowa (Iowa!), one middle school has abandoned any pretense of traditional morality and, instead, is teaching its eighth-graders "how to perform female exams and to put a condom on a 3-D, anatomically correct male sex organ." The body is a tool, and nothing more.

Freud was right when he speculated that sex, perhaps because it is the least easily satisfied human need, may also be the most powerful physical need driving human beings. Freud, however, viewed sexuality through the spectrum of a given individual's desires. What the statists understand -- and have always understood -- is that our bodies are the first line in the battle between statism and individualism. If a person is allowed to develop a sense that his body is his own to control, he will never willingly yield to the demands of the state. Only by convincing its citizens that they have no personal autonomy, beginning with control over their own bodies, can a state completely subsume the individual to the bureaucracy.

So if you're getting an itchy feeling between your shoulderblades when you contemplate your child's hyper-sexualized reading list and gender-bending sex education curriculum, you need not fear that you have turned into a repressed, homophobic Victorian. Instead, there's an excellent chance that you are someone with a deep respect for individual freedom who resents the Leftists' efforts to co-opt your child's body as a necessary sacrifice to the State.

UPDATED

A couple of weeks ago, I did a very short post bringing to your attention some peculiarities of sexuality when it comes to the far Left. Thinking about that — and thinking about the wonderful comments you all left — led me to create a much longer post about Sex and the State. American Thinker published that post today. I have a few more things I want to add to it, things that came to my mind thanks to a vigorous and delightful conversation I had with Don Quixote.

DQ agreed with me about Sex, the State and Islam — namely, that Islam uses sex as a means of controlling its citizens (which is why adultery is a capital crime). He agreed with me about the Leftist obsessions with sex, with breaking down traditional boundaries, and with interfering with the family.

Where he and I parted ways was with my belief that the Left, by approaching sex as it does, is trying to break down individual will. His point of view is that it’s conservatives, who believe that sex should be done certain ways, who interfere more with individuality than do the Leftists. The latter, by believing sex should be boundary free seem to give more, not less, control to individuals. He has a point . . . except:

What I was trying to say in the article (and articulated much less well in conversation with DQ) is that the Leftist approach to sex implies that a person has no ownership over his body. The early German Leftist experiments had sex become a public spectacle, a notion they actively pushed onto the children in their care. Sex and the public were one.

This same notion of lack of control over ones own body is also inherent in pedophilia and pederasty. Faced with a dominant adult figure, the child is forced into “sharing” his body, whether or not that “sharing” is consistent with his individual desires.

This whole hypersexualization — this “anything goes” approach — has led to the hook-up culture that dominates American high schools and universities. Sex is unrelated to emotional relationships. It’s just something you do.

What we know from an increasing number of studies on the subject is that this culture is very damaging to girls’ self-esteem. (See this study, http://edis.ifas.ufl.edu/fy1002 for example.) They give their bodies away, not out of empowerment, but because they feel they have no control over this most personal of commodities. A girl who feels worthless, and who feels that her body is an object as to which she has no say is, to my mind, a malleable creature who will much more readily yield herself to the State. After all, by the time she's 20 or so, there's a good likelihood that she will have already yielded herself to a room full of strangers.

UPDATE: Here's an apropos quotation:

"It is the duty of parents to maintain their children decently, and according to their circumstances; to protect them according to the dictates of prudence; and to educate them according to the suggestions of a judicious and zealous regard for their usefulness, their respectability and happiness."

–James Wilson, Lectures on Law, 1791

UPDATE II: Melissa Clouthier took my idea and ran with it.

I love what she has to say. The only point where I part ways with her is her belief that second and third graders do not yet know about homosexuality, so that teaching true tolerance (as opposed to advocacy) is premature at that age. The sad fact is that, thanks to Hollywood, the kids do know about those things. TV shows (think: award shows), movies and especially music inundate these little people with sex. Although I would never have played it in my home, my third grader came home from school singing "I kissed a girl and I liked it," a song he learned from his classmates. Hollywood, of course, is a liberal place….

OK I had to cut some out of the reply to avoid so much drifting from where I was going, no doubt that sex greases the skids but power is the ultimate. That's why, if you have individual rights it means people like Obama can't have excessive power over you. That's it plain and simple, Obama wants what you have. He gets it with regulations taxes and laws and prisons and drones.

Socialism steals your individual rights, while capitalism can allow for more individual rights.

Obama isn't just Socialist by chance..... he likes the power and he likes ruling. Obama chooses Socialism because he is a sociopath and megalomaniac that is a total narcissist.

It may be partly hidden or restrained but it's there. All Socialists want to control others, that's what Socialism does. They ignore the failure of central planning and the fact that it steals freedoms or "individual rights" because it gives them what they really crave... and that is POWER OVER OTHERS .

Power to force you to wear a seat belt or to eat what they want you to eat or NOT take any medicine they dictate.

And their idio-centric desire changes form time to time, I think it's just so they can make you do something... Not for any real reason other than they like making you do what they want, it's the exercising of power over you that really floats their boat.

One day we need to drink alcohol the next it is evil and taxed, sports are good then they are evil, cars are cool then they are killing the planet, then they are cool, eat butter then butter has bad oils so don't eat it and now it's natural and better so eat it and the laws on salt and sugar and then the whole array of sexual and drug laws and regulations.... treat women like a women and open car doors but don't treat them like women (objects of our sexual desire).

They are all just ways to keep you under their boot heal and doing something that the Liberal-Socialists want you to do, and for no particular reason except it makes them feel good to see you say "how high" when they say jump.

I thought at one time the old Military drill Sargent was the ultimate in making us jump just because they could, but I see it's really the Socialists that are the sick puppies that enjoy the power game.

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

WHEN SMALL MINDS encounter open, reasoning minds, the result is often that the small minds attempt censorship. But the ï¿½gatekeepingï¿½ of editors ï¿½ and the ADL/SPLC pressure on businesses and other entities ï¿½ donï¿½t mean much on the amateur radio airwaves. So the small minds are limited to (illegally) transmitting rude noises and the like in a futile attempt to stop communications on the Liberty Net. I say futile because many of the linchpin stations of the net have very substantial signals, and participants are able to hear at least two online streams of the net via N2SAG and N2IRJ (just follow the ï¿½Liberty Net liveï¿½ links in the left column of this site) in addition to their own receivers.

Here are some excerpts from the debates and discussions that took place this week:

ï¿½ Now that itï¿½s finally been admitted that the Stuxnet virus was created by Israeli and ï¿½USï¿½ intelligence to purposely cause a nuclear disaster in Iran, how long will it be before that virusï¿½s role in Fukushima will be acknowledged? A new, even more invasive virus called Flame has also been created by the same culprits. Donï¿½t such attacks constitute acts of war? (25 minutes)

ï¿½ The mediaï¿½s blackout on Ron Paulï¿½s victories ï¿½ he won the state of Maine recently ï¿½ is near total. For some reason or other, the media owners want to hide the fact that Paul has repeatedly garnered more delegates than the establishment shills, even after shill number one was declared ï¿½the victor.ï¿½ (47 minutes)

ï¿½ The corruption in Washington has now gone so far that the regime there is actually trying to prevent states from purging dead or nonexistent voters from their registration rolls. (1 hour 6 minutes)

ï¿½ While speaking recently at a staged pro-Romney event, John McCain was challenged about the Washington regimeï¿½s cover-up of the Israeli attack on the USS Liberty. What were McCainï¿½s and Romneyï¿½s reactions to the questionerï¿½s concerns about the Americans who died on that ship? McCain called the man a ï¿½jerk.ï¿½ And Romney laughed. (1 hour 20 minutes)

ï¿½ (Over)reacting to recent voter ID efforts by the states, an official of the Congressional Black Caucus claims that there is a conspiracy to "take America back to 1900" ï¿½ a time when there were simple literacy tests for voters. Sounds like a good idea; the least informed and intelligent voters are the most easily manipulated by the oligarchsï¿½ media. (1 hour 40 minutes)

ï¿½ In Detroit, utilities and lights are being turned off in huge swathes of the city, leaving these areas essentially ruined, burned-out, lawless urban jungles where even police seldom dare to tread. Atlanta, Georgia is rapidly trending in the same direction. The reason? Itï¿½s the vastly changed genetics of the inhabitants, though few dare to mention this taboo fact. (1 hour 51 minutes)

ï¿½ What we need to do ï¿½ and what all countries who want to be free need to do ï¿½ is do what Iceland did recently, and tell the bankers that we simply refuse to ï¿½pay backï¿½ their phony ï¿½loansï¿½ created out of thin air. (2 hours 15 minutes)

ï¿½ China and Japan have now dumped the ever-shrinking dollar as the medium of trade between the two nations. Does this portend a move by the Washington regimeï¿½s military to ï¿½bring democracyï¿½ to Asia? (2 hours 56 minutes)

The Liberty Net ï¿½ amateur radioï¿½s longest-running current events discussion net ï¿½ is on the air every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time on or around 3950 kHz SSB (lately itï¿½s been higher in frequency ï¿½ often near 3967 ï¿½ to avoid interference). Youï¿½ll have to tune around, but itï¿½s not hard to find!

Remember, you can listen live and have real-time discussions via the Web whenever the Liberty Net is on the air ï¿½ just follow the ï¿½Liberty Net liveï¿½ links in the left column of this page. And, as always, you can download the net recording right here at http://3950.net and listen at your leisure.

I am an libertarian socialist and lust for no power. I am all for letting capitalist banks fail but the Socialists Bush and Obama both interfered. I am for letting petroleum stand or fall on its own 2 legs, but Congress insists on massive subsidies and PR campaigns for Big Oil, to make it look cheaper than renewables.

Socialist economics and slogans, are exposing you as a pure brain dead Socialist.

Capitalism uses what it needs... fortunately there is someone that can make a profit off of almost everything. Even trash has value. How can you say trash has value and people don't? Obviously something has created this situation. is Government meddling more in the value and cost of trash or workers?

When you demand more than something is worth..... it is no longer useful.

Government compounds that problem of things costing more than they are worth, that's why millions of people are out of work.

If a company is having trouble the workers should get an opportunity to

They have the opportunity, all they need to do is put up their own money or find someone that will loan them some money.

My taxes are NOT a venture capital pool, if I want to invest in a company I don't need the government between me and my investments.

Otherwise - bankruptcy and sell it off to the workers in pieces and or sell to others in smaller pieces.... Bigger is NOT better.

Workers don't need the entire WHITE ELEPHANT. You know nothing of business.

Yet another Useful Liberal Fascist JackAss Idiot parroting twisted Communist Party propaganda lies.

"Connexions[.org] works to connect people working for SOCIAL JUSTICE"
"We are internationalist in our orientation". - Like every good communist should be.

From Connexions Co-ordinator Ulli Diemer:

"I am a libertarian socialist. My goal is the end of capitalism and its replacement by socialism, ‘an association in which the free development of each is the condition for the free development of all.’

"Socialism is fundamentally about expanding the realm of freedom to the greatest possible extent. It requires ridding the world of capitalism, which crushes human lives and potential while increasingly threatening the planet. The malignant heart of capitalism is capital, so ending capitalism means eradicating capital.

"Social reforms, no matter how valuable and worth pursuing, cannot in themselves defeat capitalism. That requires a revolution: the overthrow of the rule of capital and the state forms through which it rules. Revolution can take many forms, but a socialist revolution inescapably means ripping off the straitjacket of capital’s political and legal structures.

"Capitalism’s contradictions are pushing us down the road to destruction. We have to end it before it destroys us.

http://www.diemer.ca/

"But the reason I still call myself a Marxist and a socialist is because I am." - Ulli Diemer

http://slumming-with-socialists.blogspot.com/2012/02/get-to-know-ulli-diemer.html

"Socialism is a philosophy of failure,
the creed of ignorance, and the gospel of envy,
its inherent virtue is the equal sharing of misery..."

-- Winston Churchill

A New America www.NewAmericaMovie.com is a documentary film that outlines the history of the Progressive movement in America over the last century. It analyzes how Progressive ideology has transformed public policy, the structures of government, and its potential impact on the country’s future. An example of historical analysis contained in the film would be the argument that the Progressive ideals employed
by FDR’s New Deal were the cause of the Great Depression, not the solution to it.

Through interviews with Constitutional scholars, authors, historians, public policymakers, and others, it reviews the original intent of
Founders, why it is important and lays out how Progressivism is in conflict with that original intent.

Anyone who is NOT a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/

Communist is a moron according to Useful Liberal JackAss Idiots.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010 complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it.
Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as
"text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews
http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan
"Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show."
This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo.
Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plain truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

LIBERAL FASCIST Left-wing roots of the Nazis:

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4758sBZLC5k

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Fa1sj0gwnuQ

"It is obvious what the fraudulent issue of fascism versus communism accomplishes: it sets up, as opposites, two variants of the same political system; it eliminates the possibility of considering capitalism; it switches the choice of “Freedom or dictatorship?” into “Which kind of dictatorship?”—thus establishing dictatorship as an inevitable fact and offering only a choice of rulers. The choice—according to the proponents of that fraud—is: a dictatorship of the rich (fascism) or a dictatorship of the poor (communism)."

"That fraud collapsed in the 1940’s, in the aftermath of World War II. It is too obvious, too easily demonstrable that fascism and communism are not two opposites, but two rival gangs fighting over the same territory—that both are variants of statism, based on the collectivist principle that man is the rightless slave of the state—that both are socialistic, in theory, in practice, and in the explicit statements of their leaders—that under both systems, the poor are enslaved and the rich are expropriated in favor of a ruling clique—that fascism is not the product of the political “right,” but of the “left”—that the basic issue is not “rich versus poor,” but man versus the state, or: individual rights versus totalitarian government—which means: capitalism versus socialism."

NAZI Origins of LIBERAL FASCISTS Global Warming - While this may sound odd to many who have bought into the Marxian propaganda over the years that the Nazis were right wing capitalistic extremists, Greens who signed up for the Nazi Party were actually very typical of the day. "Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism.

Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau's Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

"The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, 'this is mine,' and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society."

Added Rousseau: "How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!"

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term "liberalism" (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning "pertaining to a free man") first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent. Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... This is because within a year or so after a Fascist government takes power, vigorous opponents of the regime have either left the country, been killed or jailed...

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

When you hear the Liberal Fascist JackAss propaganda that THEY are the true patriots then you know the time is near. Look for it from the socialist Labor Unions such as the SEIU!
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

World Book encyclopedia gives some presidents more love than others

By Aleksandra Kulczuga

The venerable publishing company World Book, which produces a variety of popular reference materials, has released an online children's encyclopedia that is drawing fire from experts who charge that it lets politics get in the way of objective facts.

The information contained in the World Book Kids edition on U.S. presidents appears to negatively portray Republican executives while glossing over controversies surrounding Democratic ones, a review by The Daily Caller has found.

The encyclopedia's entry on former President Bill Clinton, for example, includes effusive commentary on his college days. Clinton "read a lot, joined clubs and played the saxophone in band," the entry states. The comments on Clinton's upbringing also include anecdotes about his childhood growing up in a troubled home, which the entry says taught him to be a "peacemaker" and helped him develop "skills that would help him be a good leader."

The encyclopedia calls Clinton "a hard-working student" who paid attention to "fights for justice for African Americans." But World Book makes no mention of George W. Bush's push for aid to Africa, or Ronald Reagan's fight to end the oppression of people living under Communism.

There is also no mention of President Clinton's impeachment, though the entry does state that "some people questioned his family's money deals and his morals."

By contrast, Richard Nixon's entry mentions his resignation in the very first line. And Ronald Reagan's entry concludes that "many people" felt that the Iran-Contra scandal was wrong. It also focuses extensively on what World Book perceives as his policy failures while in office:

Reagan met with Mikhail Gorbachev, the leader of the Soviet Union. They signed an agreement to get rid of some kinds of nuclear weapons. But a government group secretly sold weapons to Iran and gave the money to political groups in Nicaragua. Many people felt it was wrong.

During his first term, Reagan wanted lower taxes and more money for defense. Congress adopted most of his programs. But in 1981, companies failed and people lost their jobs. The government spent far more than it took in. In March 1981, a man tried to kill Ragan [sic].

The World Book's entry on President Obama is the longest of all the recent presidents' and goes into the details of his move to Chicago to "work for a church group that helped people in poor, inner-city neighborhoods."

But the encyclopedia's commentary on George W. Bush contains only one paragraph related to his presidency, and George H.W. Bush's entry sums up his term in office on a sobering note:

The United States also had trouble at home. Many people did not have jobs. A growing number of people were homeless. Americans worried about crime and drug abuse. Many people blamed Bush for not solving these problems. Bush wanted to win another term as president, but he lost the election in 1992.

These entries, which are geared towards children from the 1st through 5th grades, are raising concerns among experts who think they are too opinionated to be featured in the World Book, which calls itself the "number #1 selling print encyclopedia in the world."

Jimmy Wales, the founder of the popular user-generated online encyclopedia Wikipedia, said that the World Book Kids edition injects too much subjectivity into its entries.

"Wikipedia, while by no means perfect, does have a strong policy that the encyclopedia itself should never take a stand on any controversial issue – but should present all the major viewpoints accurately," Wales told The Daily Caller. "The proper goal of an encyclopedia is to give people the information they need to think about an issue for themselves – not to guide them to a conclusion. These entries you have shown me left me looking for the 'edit' link to tone down the bias."

Others more sharply condemned the World Book's contents.

"I find these entries outrageously unobjective in their accounts of the achievements and failures of the presidents," said Marsha Familaro Enright, an educator for over 25 years who founded a Montessori school in Chicago in 1990 and recently started a foundation, The Reason, Individualism, Freedom Institute, to build a new liberal arts college.

"Furthermore, these entries present a very limited amount of information to children, in a very poorly reasoned fashion – shocking for an encyclopedia which, one would presume, is meant to convey well-researched, well-presented, and well-reasoned material to children as a trusted source and an example of how to think and write," said Enright.

Enright added that biased reference materials regularly pose a challenge for her staff and students.

"This is the kind of material or worse that we face daily in choosing texts for grade school children – material which makes a pretense at quality and objectivity, yet teaches poor reasoning and biased information to its audience," Enright said. "It's no wonder students arrive at college freshman year with poor cognitive skills, ripe for the collectivist chanting that indoctrinates them more."

Calls and emails to Chicago-based World Book, Inc., which is owned by Berkshire Hathaway, went unanswered.

Well at least you admit you're stupid.....

Progress is slow with some of you, but like being an alcoholic or drug addict, the first step is admitting you have a problem.

I applaud you for taking the first step.

Any time you need to hear the truth, just post something here. I'll probably be here to give it to you.

Truly outrageous. Buzzards provide an invaluable service to the ecosystem by keeping the earth clean. But we mustn't get in the way of the gentry's pursuit of leisure must we.

How sad for all the wildlife of the world, they get it from the entire spectrum of humanity - from inbred white trash (like the special ed fellow from Mississippi) up to inbred blue bloods called "royalty" and everything in between.

The political hacks in my neck of the woods have decided to reopen hunting for wolves, whose population has just shown signs of recovering after being endangered for decades, because ranchers are whining about losing a few calves per year (which they are reimbursed for anyway). The ranchers already given carte blanche to kill wolves and mountain lions on their property without restrictions. One of the more outrageous acts of cruelty reported was that of a rancher baiting a snare with fresh deer meat which of course attracted a cougar. It was then snared by its hind paw and then hung upside suspended in air for 3 days until it died of exhaustion trying to free itself. Aren't human beings wonderful.

Seeking answers from Israel

By Cindy Corrie, 3/18/2004

A YEAR AGO this week, my daughter Rachel Corrie was killed in Rafah in the Gaza Strip. She was run over by an Israeli bulldozer manned by two soldiers. The Israeli government exonerated the soldiers, closed the case, and refuses to release to the US government the complete report on the military police investigation into Rachel's killing.
ADVERTISEMENT

Only the "conclusions" of the report have been released. In them, the soldiers are identified by their initials: Sergeant Y.F. and Sergeant E.V. Their initials are nearly all we know of them. I wonder about Y.F. and E.V. I wonder whether they will pause this week and remember.

Rachel was an unarmed peace activist trying to prevent the demolition of the home of a Palestinian pharmacist, his wife, and three children. She believed that nonviolent direct action against the Israeli occupation would make Palestinians, and also Israelis and Americans, more secure. Rachel stood there to protect a home and family in Gaza because the United States and Israel rejected a UN proposal to send international human rights monitors there. International activists went instead. Rachel stood there protesting illegal home demolitions that the United States opposes on the record yet fails to stop -- destruction that we support with billions in annual military aid to Israel for bulldozers, Apache helicopters, F-16s, and more.

Rachel wrote to me from Rafah: "This has to stop. I think it is a good idea for us all to drop everything and devote our lives to making this stop. I don't think it's an extremist thing to do anymore. I still really want to dance around to Pat Benatar and have boyfriends and make comics for my coworkers. But I also want this to stop."

On March 17, 2003, President Bush spoke with Prime Minister Ariel Sharon about Rachel's killing. Sharon assured Bush that the Israeli government would undertake a "thorough, credible, and transparent investigation" and would report the results to the United States.

On March 19, 2003, Richard Boucher, spokesman for the State Department, noted in reference to Rachel: "When we have the death of an American citizen, we want to see it fully investigated. That is one of our key responsibilities overseas, to look after the welfare of American citizens and to find out what happened in situations like these."

In Congress, Representative Brian Baird of Washington state introduced a bill calling on the US government to "undertake a full, fair, and expeditious investigation into the death of Rachel Corrie." Others warned that passage was unlikely because of strong sentiment in Congress to avoid any legislation that appears critical of Israel. Nevertheless, 56 House members have signed the bill.

Despite promises of a transparent investigation, only two American Embassy staff members in Tel Aviv and my husband and I were allowed to "view" the full document. While it refers to evidence gathered by the Israeli military police, no primary evidence is included. Commenting on the report on July 1, 2003, Richard LeBaron, US Embassy Deputy Chief of Mission in Tel Aviv, stated, "there are several inconsistencies worthy of note."

For our family, the report raises questions and fails to reconcile differences between Israeli soldiers who say they could not see Rachel and seven international eyewitnesses who say she was clearly visible. Despite lingering concerns, there has been no move by the White House, the State Department, or the Justice Department to initiate a US investigation. Some ask if a precedent exists for investigating in another country without being "invited." The Israeli government has apparently not extended such an invitation.

The London Metropolitan Police, however, are now conducting inquests into the deaths in Rafah of British nationals Tom Hurndall and James Miller. In a seven-week period in 2003, Tom, James, and Rachel were all struck down in the same area, where the Israel Defense Forces are building a high steel wall and demolishing Palestinian homes. Remarkably, the London police recently transferred the Hurndall and Miller cases to one coroner, reasoning that a series of similar deaths in a short time could indicate "a more complex systematic problem" within the Israeli military.

Our family continues to call for a US investigation into Rachel's death. As we wait, I still wonder about Y.F. and E.V. I wonder whether they, too, see images of Rachel lying before the bulldozer. I wonder whether they, too, are suffering, or whether March 16, 2003, was for them just another day on the job. I wonder.

Unfortunately, Rachel should have been standing in front of the rocket

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
04 - 10 June 2012

Solar activity was at low to moderate levels during the period. Low levels were observed at the beginning of the period with Region 1499 (N16, L=184 class/area Cao/060 on 09 June) responsible for a majority of the C-class x-ray activity. An increase to moderate levels was observed on 06 June as Region 1494 (S18, L=199 class/area Cso/160 on 06 June) produced an M2/1b x-ray flare at 2006 UTC.
Associated with this event were both Type II (estimated shock speed of 1148 km/s) and Type IV radio sweep signatures. Location of Region 1494 on 06 June and LASCO imagery suggested part of this coronal mass ejction (CME) would be Earth directed. From 07-08 June, solar activity returned to low levels. From 09-10 June, a return to moderate levels was observed as new Region 1504 (S18, L=89 class/area Dai/120 on 10 June) dominated the visible disk in total area and solar activity producing three M-class x-ray events. The three M-class events that Region 1504 was responsible for were an optically uncorrelated M1 event at 09/1132 UTC, the second event was another M1/Sf at 09/1653 UTC, and finally another optically uncorrelated M1 event on 10/0645 UTC.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at normal to high flux levels during the period. The period started at normal background levels from 04-05 June, then at high levels for the remainder of the period.

Geomagnetic field activity was at quiet to active levels with isolated major storm periods observed at high latitudes. For a majority of the summary period, Earth was under the influence of a favorable positioned coronal hole high speed stream (CH HSS). Early on 04 June, solar wind speeds, as measured by the ACE spacecraft, hovered around 350 km/s. Around midday on 04 June, solar wind speeds increased to almost 650 km/s as a CH HSS arrived. This increase in solar wind speeds helped drive the geomagnetic field from quiet to active levels with isolated major storm periods observed at high latitudes through 05 June. Predominantly quiet to unsettled levels prevailed from 06-09 June as effects from the CH HSS waned. A return to quiet levels was observed on 10 June as solar wind speeds returned to normal background levels. On 08 and 10 June, small changes were observed in data from the ACE spacecraft indicating the possible arrival of a weak, partially Earth-directed CMEs, however very little if any correlating activity was attributed to these arrivals.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
11 June - 07 July 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at low to moderate levels from 11 June - 21 June as Region 1504 rotates across the solar disk. A return to predominantly low levels is expected for the remainder of the period.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at high levels from 11-12 June, 20-25 June and then from 03 July through the end the period. Normal to background levels are expected for all other time periods.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be at predominantly quiet levels from 11-17 June, 21-30 June and 04 July through the end of the period. From 18-19 June and 01-03 July, quiet to active levels are expected due to the CH HSS effects.

When I had WebTV there were about five news groups (including rec.radio.shortwave) I had in one of my WebTV Favs folders. Any time I wanted to access any of those news groups all I had to do was click on that Fav folder and then click on whichever news group. With WebTV it was very simple and easy. Nowadays though I have to click on a search engine and type the name of whichever news group I want to get in to. I suppose I could book mark the news groups. I already have about twenty book marks and none of them are important to me. If it ever gets to where I would have to buy a new computer just to access those few news groups, hell with that noise! I will not do it.

Not surprising considering he believes the killing of 500,000 Iraqi children was a GOOD thing as well. Apparently it is his way of ingratiating himself to the feds. Ever since he was placed under 48 hour surveillance prior to and during the President's visit to Holland in April 2011 he has been attempting to sanitize his reputation.

I suspect someone informed him that were he to be convicted of a felony he would lose his federal disability payments. The threat of getting kicked off that gravy train obviously got his attention right quick. Unfortunately, for him anyway, alas the "Wit and Wisdom of Steve Lare" is forever in the files of the authorities. Gosh those hard drives are a pesky nuisance aren't they!

By the by, isn't his annual sappy "I just can't take it anymore" farewell to the newsgroup about due?

You talking about that Motorola Atrix (Android) smartphone and laptop dock I bought at the AT&T retail store about a year and a half ago. I tried it out for about a week then I took that sheet back to the store for a refund, minus $35.00 restocking fee. That laptop dock had an eleven inches screen. The only way I could read that little bitty screen was to hunch up real close to it and squint my eyes at it. My Sony Google TV screen is 32 inches, much better for me to see it.

If upward evolution is toward higher consciousness and nobility, then the cougar-hanger has just failed the evolutionary test. The lowliest squirrel is a far more worthy consumer of oxygen than he.

All of us, even vegetarians like me who try to avoid causing the death of any conscious being, inevitably evict creatures from their homes -- and some probably die -- when we build our houses. And, as Defcon points out, a few creatures may die the next time we walk down the sidewalk or path, without us even being aware of it.

This should give the more evolved among us us pause to think about what exactly we are doing with our lives on Earth, since other creatures have suffered and died to make our lives possible. How have I contributed to allay or minimize suffering? How have I advanced knowledge and consciousness? What have I done to move evolution forward and upward? What have I accomplished to help the cause of that magical anti-entropy process called Life?

With all good wishes,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

Overall I don't see much sign of this "upward evolution" to which you refer, Kevin. I guess it's the absence of "higher consciousness and nobility", especially the "nobility" part. Among the things that obscure my view of this "nobility".

Columbine
Bath salts
NAMBLA
Carbon credit scams
Obamacare
Bail-outs
Televangelists in Lear Jets
Rappers in Bentleys
The Oprah Channel
The AlGore Channel

This list could go on forever. If I'm overlooking some "nobility" and "higher consciousness", let me know.

You seem pissed off at random things with no apparent underlying philosophical reason. Lear has been Bombardier for a decade at least BTW. Building a handmade automobile requires lots of skilled labour.

Carbon credits help a little but are only a short-term band-aid. Longer term, we need to evolve again, as Kevin has so rightly suggested.

I can't see them helping whatsoever. The credits are assigned in such a way that countries producing little or no carbon dioxide get a huge number of credits.

The worst offenders now purchase these credits for next to nothing.
The donor country gets a small money handout and the recipient country can tell the world how they are doing their share, even as emissions rise greatly.

It's all smoke and mirrors used to hide the fact that nothing is being done.

Global financial collapse will slow the growth of pollutants. Capitalism has apparently "lifted out of poverty" more people than it needs;
hopefully some Chinese still know how to farm.

I was thinking of more local terms, such as at the state level. I agree, internationally, it's crap.

I tell you what evolved, DD.

The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net.

300 million years ago they were on 3950 lsb talking about

Clinton's a crook
Bush is a crook
Gore is a crook
Biden's a crook
They're all crooks

And now they're on 3967 lsb talking about

Yep .. looks like The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net is the missing link in the evolutionary process everybody's been talking about.

Well, if you believe the world is only about 7000 years old, then it becomes hard to accept this 300 million age stuff. It is funny that police can only determine when a person was killed with in 3 hours, even if that only happened a few days ago, but evolutionists can determine within a few million years when something supposedly evolved. The one thing that gets me about evolution is that it is always right on. For example, if a elephant needed a trunk on the front of its body, it got one there. If a hummingbird needed to hover, it evolved the means to do so. I need a back that can make it through the morning without giving me pain and try as I might, I can't get it to bend like I did when I was 20. (That was 40 years ago.)

Here, we don't need PETA to kill animals. The animal shelter gases them weekly by using a car exhaust fed into a metal box. They can do fifty animals at a time. It saves money and they get a bulk rate at the land fill.

The US navy is looking for ways to help with the killing, as they're no longer satisfied with only 2.8 million dead marine mammals a year. They consider that number to be 'underachieving'.

"The land based terrorist cats and Islamist dogs are in our sights.." Admiral Ace is quoted as saying during his last visit to the Holland, MI chapter of the ASPCA. His booming, manly voice carried clearly across the room in between the aperitif and fresh canine testicles and feline ovaries, which were served daintily on the Admiral's best floral pattern china.

"English Bulldog Balls, served warm, were Admiral Nelson's favourite treat. He's my hero..." claimed the rotund Admiral Ace. "Horatio liked variations on the theme..but I couldn't stand the tickling...he made me giggle."

That's the wrong way to view evolution. The mutations usually happened before the need was there. If the new freakish feature made getting food easier or the mating more likely (because the chicks dug it) then there was a likelihood that your offspring may inherit your mutancy.

Then, if they in turn had a better chance of mating, the new model was on it's way to success...usually at the expense of the parent species.
Many mutations don't work past the initial attempt, as witnessed by the so called 'Pillsbury Man' discovered in Holland MI. "This sucker was just too plump to survive" Archaeologists claim. "Note the distended stomach and severely sloping forehead...sad.." they continued.

Mike the abuse of animals extends beyond the Navy to the entire Department of Defense. As they have done with so many issues PETA has done outstanding work exposing the unnecessary and cruel practices of the DOD. See an excellent overview, a sample of which is posted below, at http://www.peta.org/issues/Animals-Used-For-Experimentation/military-testing-the-unseen-war.aspx

Of course the pettifogging rubes prefer to focus on the clever PUBLICITY stunts PETA masterfully pulls off with regularity. Perhaps one day the simpletons who get themselves purple in the face with rage at PETA will figure it all out.

The following is a sample of the wide variety of cruel, unnecessary tests that are conducted on animals:

• To test the effectiveness of body armor, the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency “dressed live pigs in body armor and strapped them into Humvee simulators that were then blown up with explosives ….” (7)
• The military funded a radiation-sickness experiment in which monkeys were given near-lethal doses of radiation; over the course of 21 days, some animals were given a drug to relieve the symptoms, while the control group suffered debilitating sickness.(8)
• At Walter Reed Army Institute, rats were forced to breathe high concentrations of carbon monoxide—which is already known to cause severe health problems and death in humans—until they died, simply because “manifestations of a brief exposure to elevated levels of CO have not been fully described.”(9)
• Anesthetized pigs at Lackland Air Force Base had their throats cut and were bled to the point of shock; after the animals had spent 45 minutes with dangerously low blood pressure, researchers attempted to resuscitate them. Those who survived the initial experiment were killed within five days so that researchers could study the effects of shock treatment on the animals’ organs and blood.(10)
• In a similar experiment conducted by the Army, rats who were fully awake and had not been administered painkillers were allowed to bleed for more than 15 minutes before they were resuscitated. Then they either died or were killed within 24 hours.(11)
• In the name of “risk assessment,” researchers at Aberdeen Proving Ground forced bobwhite quail to swallow chemical compounds that are regularly found in military munitions. Birds who were exposed to the highest doses suffered severe illness before dying.(12)
• The U.S. Navy, at its own Naval Medical Research Center (NMRC) and through grants to other institutions, has funded and conducted painful and often deadly decompression-sickness and oxygen-toxicity experiments on sheep and other animals.(13–16) The U.K. has ended similar experiments.(17)

Other military experiments include exposing animals to jet fuel, weightlessness, drugs, alcohol, and smoke. Tests are even conducted on insects and snakes in an effort to learn how to mimic their sensory perception abilities and apply them toward weapon detection.

And all these years I thought you were one of the more intelligent Pray tell... how do you come to that conclusion? Is there something logical that I'm missing in people that claim to be for animal rights, yet kill those self-same animals rather than allowing them to have a caring home?

Mind you, I'm not against EVERYTHING that PeTA believes: I agree with their basic stand against animals being used to test cosmetics. Also, I agree to some extent with their stand against circuses using captured animals. I say to some extent because as long as those animals are treated properly, they are safer in a circus than being hunted out of existence in their natural habitat.

PeTA's treatment of domesticated animals is, however, appalling. These creatures, if not allowed to remain in domestic situations, don't do well.
They fight for resources amongst one another and against feral creatures in the environment. Add to this, if they are left to their own devices in such a way, we (the imperial "we") will consider them pests and capture and/or kill them. So, is PeTA simply trying to cut out the middle man and kill them themselves?

Or, are you debating the well chronicled fact that PeTA indeed does these killings?

I await your response (I'm not one of those that simply states an opinion and then tells everyone that disagrees to f off..)

I would also make it clear that PETA's behavior toward shelter animals and pets appears to represent a minority view at this time among animal activists (myself included). There are now many groups who advocate no-kill shelters and non-euthanasia except for terminally sick and unhappy animals. Moreover, there are literally millions of individuals who work hard for either animal welfare or animal liberation no matter where the animals are what they are (myself included). Justice and fairness for all, regardless of species.

I would even guess that many (maybe most) PETA members do not share the apparent philosophy of the current leadership.

I am not saying you are doing this, but please do not lump us all into one group, and Dhia Duit, be quite aware that I am not queer, although even if I was, it would be an irrelevant issue.

Bruce Jensen, opponent of all abuse, all incarceration of animals and all unnecessary killing.

Goodness you really are rather dim aren't you. I usually don't engage individuals who use derogatory slurs against groups of people (as you did Brenda Ann) because it is just hard to respect anything that person has to say. It is like having a discussion with someone who out of the blue uses the word "nigger", it exposes an ignorance so profound no matter what they have to say thereafter is tainted.

Anyway, briefly, there are not enough caring homes in the UNIVERSE to house all the dogs and cats who deserve homes. THAT IS THE POINT! There is no more cruel fate for dogs and cats than to be homeless. If you want to see what would ensue were your Pollyanna wish come true visit the barrios of South America and see the results. The fact is the most humane solution to the very real problem of pet overpopulation is euthanasia. Your indignation is misdirected, instead of hating PETA you should hate the irresponsible pet owners that don't spay/neuter their pets.

And your observation about circus animals: "as long as those animals are treated properly, they are safer in a circus than being hunted out of existence in their natural habitat" is so patently absurd I won't even bother dissecting it. You really do seem to miss the forest for the trees a lot.

Take some advice, when you find yourself in a hole the best course of action is to stop digging. You may have the last word because I am finished with you. I've wasted far too time on you.

That would require Mr. Special Ed to get off his fat ass and actually do something so that won't happen. Anyway he already is a hero to the "sadistic assholes out there". He attained that status when he poisoned squirrels in his neighborhood - street cred Mississippi style! He was so pleased with himself he couldn't help but gloat about it in this very newsgroup.

There is way to much evidence to assume the earth is older than 7000-10,000 years. All one really has to do is go back as far as Jesus. Had Jesus spoke of man evolving, then we would have to accept that. When he fed the 5000 people from a childs basket of a few fish, he instantly CREATED fish and bread. He didn't wait millions of years for the fish to evolve. The real question then is this, did Jesus exist and if so, was what he said the truth? If you have that settled in your mind that he did, then you can't accept evolution. Read some books on creationism. Not from the view of an evolutionist, but from a creationist. Evolution is a hoax.

Duh...SDI was poinyed at Earth to take out ICBMs, not outward to blast asteroids. Trying to blow up a large incoming rock will most likely result in fragmentation, leading to multiple catastrophic impacts. If the earth is only 5000 years old, how do you explain light reaching us from galaxies millions and billions of light years away?

The PRC restricts the import of radio transmitting equipment, other than the temporary import of mobile phones. You need to ask this question of your Chinese embassy. You would need an import licence and my guess is that you will not get one.

I don't know if there are any (transmitting) licence exempt allocations, or whether they are available to non-citizens.

If the earth is only 5000 years old, how do you explain light reaching us from galaxies millions and billions of light years away?

Science, not superstition!
As I pointed out, it all comes down to the existance of Jesus Christ and his miracles. How do you explain him creating fish in a matter of minutes? To answer your question, who said the light came billions of years away? For those of you that believe we all originated from rock, or the big bang as you put it, then that would be the only answer. However, if there was a creator anything is possible. How do you evolutionists say the eye developed, or the lungs? Stop and think about the many things the eye does.
First, it had to detect light. How do you do that if you don't have light receptors? Then it had to make a lens that was able to focus that light.
Next it had to determine the colors of the spectrum. After that, it had to connect it to the brain. Don't forget it had to be made to move in several directions and the two eyes had to move together or else vision would be really messed up. Also, it had to develop a way to wash the eye and protect it by moving an eye lid over it. Our eyes also focus on objects very close to far away. How did the eye even know there were objects far away. The eye can see a mountain or a tiny tick without the aid of any device. You expect me to believe this all happened by a process of trial and error, but you think we creationists are nuts to say this required a higher intelligence. Ok, so tell me the first thing, how did the body know there was light? Oh, one more thing, how did it know there was the spectrum of light we see? How come we don't see infared? How come we don't see radio waves? After you have answered these things, lets decide how the body developed the sexual organs on two different bodies and how on the male the organ is used for two unrelated things. You that are evolutionists always have all the answers, so tell me how it all happened.

http://3950.net/2012/06/liberty-net-june-9-2012/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

HOW DOES amateur radio serve the public interest?

We all know about technical education, emergency communications, and experimentation ï¿½ but an ever-increasing number of radio amateurs are realizing just how valuable it is when it provides the means to bypass the billionairesï¿½ controlled media and lets us find out about ï¿½ and share ï¿½ what is really happening in our own communities and around the world.

Here are a just few of the highlights from this weekï¿½s conversation:

ï¿½ Stocks have been a zero-sum game for a decade ï¿½ real estate is a disaster ï¿½ government debt is of ever more questionable value ï¿½ and currencies are being purposely debauched. It seems that the only people who have come out ahead in recent years are crooked bankers who got bailed out (and can create money out of thin air anyway), and holders of precious metals. (12 minutes)

ï¿½ We must sadly report the death of writer and economist Bob Chapman of the International Forecaster this week. He was a graduate of Northeastern University and was very active in the education of our people on financial and political matters since the 1960s, writing for the American Mercury and many other publications, and was often quoted on the Liberty Net. (36 minutes)

ï¿½ When Rand Paul says we need to ï¿½respectï¿½ the establishment Republicans who are trying to shove the warmongering cipher Mitt Romney down our throats, it is just like asking us to respect someone who has robbed us and killed members of our family. (40 minutes)

ï¿½ They should stop calling them US government bonds: A better name would be ï¿½certificates of guaranteed confiscation.ï¿½ Yet foreign moneyed interests have shown some interest in purchasing them, for the first time in years. Does this signal another overseas war or other conflagration, bad enough to make these money-losing scraps of paper look like a ï¿½safe havenï¿½? (1 hour 4 minutes)

ï¿½ The pro-war propaganda from Fox News and neocon operative John Bolton is ramping up to almost supernatural proportions, and both Obama and Romney are fully on board with the plan to massacre and incinerate additional ï¿½rogue nationsï¿½ which might oppose Israel or the oligarchs, or want to keep their independence and freedom. (1 hour 19 minutes)

ï¿½ Fukushima is almost totally off the radar of the billionairesï¿½ media, even after a fall of black radioactive dust was reported in Tokyo, and significantly contaminated bluefin tuna have been found in US waters. (2 hours 43 minutes)

ï¿½ Hereï¿½s a sign that some Americans have grown a spine: In Indiana, a citizenï¿½s right to use deadly force against police who are illegally attacking him or entering his home has now been affirmed. (3 hours 27 minutes)

ï¿½ Debt is not the solution; debt is the problem. What gives bankers the right to ï¿½lendï¿½ us our own credit and charge us half the world for the privilege? (4 hours 25 minutes)

ï¿½ Was the reported recent discussion at an oligarch conference of ï¿½eliminatingï¿½ Ron Paul connected with Rand Paulï¿½s shocking endorsement of establishment shill Mitt Romney? (4 hours 28 minutes)

The Liberty Net ï¿½ amateur radioï¿½s longest-running current events discussion net ï¿½ is on the air every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time on or around 3950 kHz SSB (usually higher in frequency ï¿½ recently around 3967 ï¿½ to avoid interference). Youï¿½ll have to tune around, but itï¿½s not hard to find!

Remember, thanks to our multiple audio feeds, youï¿½re likely to be nearly interference-proof! And, as always, you can download the net recording right here at http://3950.net and listen at your leisure.

Well, not quite true...

Yes, there were measurable traces of a couple of radio isotopes of Cesium (that pointed the finger to Fukishima), but it was well within "safe" limits. (presuming you think any amount of radiation is "safe")

When the TV reporter asked the nuclear expert if he would eat the tuna, he said "no" -- not because of the radiation but rather that all tuna is FULL of mercury.

In order for evolution to exist, according to evolutionists, millions of years had to have taken place. So the whole idea of evolution rests on an old earth. Is it not true that if you look at some of the things that are happening now, and multiply them over millions of years, they disprove any possibility of evolution? For example, I believe it was the Naval Observatory that found the sun is decreasing by something like 5 feet per second. If you were to multiply that out for billions of years, the earth would have touched the earth just a few million years ago. The amount of silt washed down from the mountains over millions of years would have reduced the mountains to nothing. It is things like that that evolutionist have a hard time with. Even the big bang theory has some planets and stars moving away from the center at different speeds, and not going in the right direction.

One thing the anti-evolution types fail to understand is that evolution does not happen for a specific purpose. It is chaotic, haphazard, full of nothing but chance and fraught with failure after failure after deadly dismal failure before a single mutation results in a change that allows its host to endure. The eye you mention did not change consciously because it somehow knew things were far away or because God decided we needed something different - it changed haphazardly with either no apparent benefit or maybe even a detriment, not helping its species at all, until one day something mutated completely haphazardly that allowed that eye to change so that suddenly, the new creature could see farther away, allowing him or her to suddenly be more aware of his/her surroundings and thus to become better able to survive. The very same thing applies to to EVERY evolutionary mutation that has EVER happened. No exceptions. Genes keep experimenting unsuccessfully until something pops up that is truly useful and then the parent passes it on. Pick one - we can have exactly the same discussion over and over again.

Moreover, evolution is seen in action every day in the lab and in Nature. Evolution itself is not a secret process and it's not a theory. It's an observable fact.

So please, stop thinking of evolution as something that magically happens by the hand of God to help make things better at critical times. That ain't how it happens. It's pure random chance that once in awhile works out in someone's favor.

You could say that God intervenes at these moments - and you'd be purely speculative, with neither proof nor foundation for the assertion.

The answers are there, except those that have not yet been answered yet; that your refuse to acknowledge them and the scientific process is not a reflection on science or scientists.

Evolution is a fact. Period. That train left the station a long time ago. It happens constantly, and there's not a damn thing anyone can do about it. Get used to it.

The problem is that we see the process from the existing terminus, and project backward. The path from the end back to the beginning is clear, and implies specific direction. Intelligent intervention, if you will. While the path from the beginning forwatd to end may be circuitous, random, and riddled with non viable results that are never seen. Those seeking explanations will find them based on what they see.
And applying Occam, the obvious simplest solution is the most attractive.

The actual simplest explanation, however, is far more dissatisfying, and almost paradoxical. It requires a deeper understanding of the mechanics, and an absence of presumption of intention, which alone is contrary to human nature.

The analogy may be drawn between the saw of the infinite number of monkeys with typewriters producing Shakespeare, and the nature of evolution, with an infinite number of evolutionary random acts producing human species from amino acid soup.

The fact is, as you correctly point out, clear, demonstrable, and evident daily.

However, accepting the chaotic nature of the mechanism of evolution while seeking an orderly explanation is actually contrary to purpose in a culture conditioned for centuries to find and define simple solutions.

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
11 - 17 June 2012

Solar activity was at low to moderate levels. Low levels were observed on 11 - 12 June due to numerous weak C-class flares from Regions 1499 (N16, L=184, class/area Cao/060 on 09 June), 1504 (S17, L=087, class/area Ekc/750 on 16 June), 1506 (N11, L=076, class/area
Hax/100 on 12 June) and 1507 (S26, L=111, class/area Dso/130 on 16 June). Activity increased to moderate levels on 13 and 14 June due to M-class flaring from Region 1504. At 13/1317 UTC, a long duration M1/1n was observed with associated Type IV and 10 cm (260 sfu) radio signatures. On 14 June, another long duration M1/1n was observed at 14/1435 UTC with associated Type IV and 10 cm (1400 sfu) radio signatures. CME signatures were detected with both of the events.
Solar activity decayed to low levels on 15 - 17 June with numerous C3 or smaller x-ray events observed from Region 1504.

A greater than 10 MeV proton event at geosynchronous orbit was observed during the period. The event began at 16/1955 UTC, reached a maximum of 14 pfu at 16/2020 UTC and ended at 16/2255 UTC. This weak event was most likely associated with the 14 June M1 x-ray flare.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at high levels on 11 June and moderate levels on 12 - 17 June.

Geomagnetic field activity ranged from quiet to major storm levels.
Quiet to unsettled levels were prevalent from 11 June through late on 16 June with a brief period of minor storm conditions late on 11 June to early on 12 June due to a sustained period of southward interplanetary magnetic field (IMF) Bz. At 16/2022 UTC, field conditions increased to active levels and further increased to minor to major storm conditions through 17/1500 UTC and decayed to active levels through the remainder of the period. This increase in activity was a result of combined effects from the 13 and 14 June CMEs. On 16 June, three separate sudden impulses were observed at the Boulder magnetometer; 16/0957 UTC (28 nT), 16/2019 UTC (28 nT) and 16/2115 UTC (25 nT). ACE data indicated three shock arrivals at 16/0900 UTC, 16/1931 UTC and 16/2031 UTC. Solar wind speed increased from about 350 km/s to 425 km/s with the first shock, and further increased to around 560 km/s with the second and third shocks. With each successive shock, total IMF field strength reached 10 nT, 17 nT and 34 nT respectively. A magnetopause crossing was also observed by the GOES-15 satellite from around 16/2200 UTC - 16/2300 UTC.

18 June - 14 July 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at low to moderate levels through 21 June when Region 1504 will rotate around the west limb. Mostly low levels are expected through 25 June. Low to moderate levels are possible from 26 June - 14 July due to the return of old Regions 1494 (S16, L=198) and 1496 (N17, L=204) on 26 June and the return of old Region 1504 (S17, L=087) on 04 July.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at high levels on 18 - 25 June, normal to moderate levels on 26 June - 03 July and return to high levels on 04 - 14 July.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be at unsettled to active levels with isolated minor storm periods on 18 June due to continued effects from the 13 and 14 June CMEs. Quiet to unsettled levels with isolated active periods are possible on 19 - 20 June due to effects from a recurrent coronal hole high speed stream (CH HSS). Mostly quiet conditions are expected from 21 - 26 June. A return to quiet to unsettled levels with isolated active periods are possible on 27 - 30 June with isolated minor storm periods on 01 - 05 July due to a pair of recurrent CH HSS. Mostly quiet conditions are expected on 10 - 14 July.

Dawkins said, rightly I think, "Mutation is random; natural selection is the very opposite of random."

One can only speculate about such things, but it _is_ possible that a universe in which natural selection operates on replicating molecules, causing them to get better and better at replicating -- and more complex -- and able to adapt to new circumstances -- and ultimately giving rise to consciousness -- was set into motion by intelligent beings.

Beings, perhaps, who saw only one way out of their inevitable death by entropy: the creation of a new universe in which such laws would inevitably result in a consciousness not unlike their own -- even perhaps, as we evolve far beyond what we are now, _identical_ to their own.

Happy Solstice,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

No, the first homo sapien bones were found in Africa and date back about 200,000 years. Homo sapiens were essentially the same as we are today by 50,000 years ago, right about the time Neanderthals seemed to disappear, leaving only one homo sub-species, when there has previously been multiple homo lines.

Probably the easiest way of getting radios for use in Tibet is to source them locally, and get them shipped to a convenient collection point.

Even for an American in the UK, that would be the best approach, as radios not specifically approved for PMR 446 are not covered by the class licence.

For China, it will be part a question of protecting their own industry and partly a national security issue. Given its history, national security is likely to be a particularly important issue in Tibet.

I note that the OP's intended radio (Motorola Spirit UHF) is 1 channel.
2W. The Chinese public service radios are only 0.5W (and with a tiddly antenna), so even if these are readily available, they might not be quite suitable.

>For China, it will be part a question of protecting their own industry

Importing two-way radios into China would probably not be threatening their own industry. They probably originated there in the first place!

> Given its history, national security is likely to be a particularly >important issue in Tibet.

It says in http://tel_archives.ofca.gov.hk/en/ad-comm/tsac/ns-paper/nsp2002p3.pdf

"In December 2001, the Ministry of Information Industry of China announced that short-range portable radio transceivers, or
"walkie-talkies", operating in the band 409.7500 – 409.9875 MHz with transmitter power not exceeding 0.5W were exempted from licensing."

Presumably these are legal to use throughout all of China - but you never know. In certain countries, being legal does not guarantee you won't have problems. Only a couple of weeks ago, a German radio amateur, operating absolutely 100% legally when on holiday in Greece, was arrested and hauled before the courts. I believe he is back home, but may need to return for a full trial.

Let me set it straight as to where you evolutionists evolved from. Here are the steps that you believe in.
1. In the beginning there was nothing.
2. Then, nothing exploded.
3. Rocks of various sizes went out from that explosion. This is called the big bang.
4. Some of those rocks had oxygen and hydrogen which formed water.
5. Soon a fish evolved from that water.
6. That fish grew legs and walked out of the water.
7. That fish turned into a monkey.
8. That monkey turned into a man.
So although evolutionists say we are related to the monkey, we are really related to a rock.
If you have any problem with this, according to evolutionists you are nuts.
I hope this clears up any misunderstanding as to what evolutionist believe.
This is what is taught in the public education system and our colleges.
Those that don't think we were evolved from a rock are called creationists.
So next time you pick up a rock to throw in the lake or river, look it over carefully because it might be your ancestor.

That's an interesting thought. A kind of biological parallel on the local level to the oscillating Universe cosmology in the grander scheme.

That's a very interesting thought, indeed.

And I like the Dawkins reference. Mutation IS random. Natural selection being the result of influences and specific forces, on the random nature of mutation, selecting the viable result. Anything but random.

In three paragraphs, intelligent design, and evolution, without any religion.

That's pretty slick.

As hard as it is for you to accept, everything in this universe comes from elements created by the fusion of hydrogen. But hydrogen can result in many different elements under conditions of enormous pressure. I choose to believe that this is the process God used to create the universe. God's creation is what we have in common with rocks, stars, and all life throughout the universe. Only the truly ignorant can think they can explain exactly how God created this Universe, but I think people with intelligence can figure that the total story was not neatly laid out in Genesis.

I pity someone whose faith requires them to abandon scientific reasoning. They need to closely examine the foundations of such a belief.

Slick may be the right word...but likely, no. There is no reason to infer an intelligent being or beings into the mix. Evolution works very well without it. Natural selection is coincidental - it's a matter of, If the shoe fits, wear it. The natural selection is not precisely random, but it is not without massive variables as to location and time. A creature that evolves fur in the Amazon jungle today may not fare any better than his furless ancestors - but if that creature suddenly evolves fur in Patagonia 15,000 years ago, he may put his ancestors in the ecological dustbin. In countless ways, it is the luck of the draw as to whether the creature doing the evolving lands at the right place and time for his mutation to be relevant.

Occam's razor applies here, and we can observe it happening frequently without the influence of anyone.

Anybody can twist, distort, and mistate facts and established theory and make it sound silly. But religion on its face, without any distortion at all - sound even sillier - it is something from nothing without any rational explanation.

Anyway, you are conflating two different issues here.

The Big Bang, IN THEORY, was a physical process that is based purely in quantum theory and mechanics. It's up to you to decide whether you want to learn more about it, or just lazily assume a supernatural moment of creation. In any case, once the Big Bang happens by whatever means, EVERYTHING else that is physical easily flows from that instance, and is mathematically measurable. There's not much there to debate any more. The Big Bang has only a tiny handful of outstanding unknowns left, and otherwise, as a theory, it is standing up very well.

Your leap from the physical formation of the universe to biological life leaves a lot to be desired, and rather than science doing the hand-waving here, it is you superminimalizing the process that hard science seeks to understand in as much detail as nature will permit. Some of us appreciate the theory and natural processes that actually result in the ascent of life. Others ignore all of it and instead choose mythology...easier, probably, than science. You've made your choice, and I doubt if incontrovertible proof - which occurs every day - would alter your beliefs. In any case, evolution is an observable process. Not a lie, not a theory, but a fact.

In any case, you seem to have a fundamental misunderstanding of the scientific process. Science is not there to tell people what to believe and what not to believe. Science is a process that asks questions, and then sets out to find the answers. Science does not always arrive at the correct answers, but it ALWAYS admits to making mistakes and it is always subject to correction. It never blithely assumes anything, and never stops searching for the truth. It tests, and retests, and retests again and again. It is the ONLY process man has to pursue the truth. Religion does not do it; gut feeling and assumption do not do it. In fact, far more often than not, they lead us to half-truths and complete misunderstandings that persist.

You can claim that testable, repeatable, observable science is wrong and that untestable, inscrutable religion is correct - but you do so at your own peril. To me, the scientific process presents a much more plausible scenario than the magic fantasy tale of the Old Testament, a book written at a time of superstition and ignorance.

I don't think either of us were saying there is...But the idea of an intelligent species rebooting a universe to reset the clock on entropy and restore it to a new, working state, IS an interesting thought.

A creationist may not acknowledge that he is related to a chimp, but he probably would admit that he is related to his own mother. "After all," he might say, "obviously I share 50 per cent. of my genes with her."

But that estimate is wildly off the mark. Actually, he shares more than 99.9 per cent. of his genes with her -- because, in addition to the obvious one-half _direct_ ancestry, he shares almost _all_ of his ancestry with her in common, because _both_ his parents share almost identical common ancestry too.

Common ancestry is the only rational explanation, and it is the full explanation, for the near-total agreement between the gene-patterns of father, mother, and child.

Common ancestry is also the only reasonable explanation for the astonishingly high degree of common ancestry between humans and other mammals.

The genetic similarity of a man and a mouse, for example, is about 92 per cent.

It is almost as if you had a 100-volume set of the _Encyclopaedia Britannica_, with each volume consisting of 1,000 pages of very small type on onionskin paper, 100,000 pages in all -- and then compared it to another, unknown, encyclopedia, and discovered that its first 92,000 pages were _absolutely identical_ to those in the _Britannica_ (to say nothing of the fact that the remaining 8,000 pages had a lot of similarities too).

Could that be a random coincidence? Could the two encyclopedias have just by some sort of luck, or by the very nature of encyclopedia-writing, turned out to be _that_ similar? I don't think so. It would be obvious to anyone not inebriated by Maury Povich, Benny Hinn, or Jack Daniels that one was derived from the other -- or that both were derived from a common source.

Mice and men share so many -- almost all, in fact -- of our genes because we share many, many common ancestors.

Common genes equals common ancestors.

The percentage of genes we share with other species is a measure of how many common ancestors we share with them -- and that itself is a measure of how long ago we diverged from them.

Bearing that relationship in mind, consider that we share 44 per cent. of our genes in common with fruit flies -- 26 per cent. with yeast -- and almost 20 per cent. in common with a grain of wheat.

That is proof as absolute as it is possible to get in this imperfect world that there was a time, long long ago, when our ancestors -- and wheat's ancestors -- _were the same species_.

For even in a case where "only" the first twenty volumes of the encyclopedia -- 20,000 pages -- were word-for-word identical with our _Britannica_, who would be so foolish as to say they had no common source?

With all good wishes,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

Here's another way that we might get from entropy-death to a new Big Bang:

When absolute entropy finally prevails, all differences will be erased. (People who believe in "equality" should _love_ the end-stage of entropy, by the way, as it's the only way that illusory "ideal" can ever be reached.) All matter achieves the same density. Everything stabilizes at the same temperature: absolute zero. All motion ceases; in fact, since even particles cease to be differentiated or even definable, the concept of motion no longer has meaning. Time itself ceases to be measurable, or perhaps even to exist.

Even the concept of "number" loses all meaning. _And the concept of size_. In a sense, the entire universe becomes one infinitesimal particle.

If such a condition is stable, then that's all she wrote.

But what if it isn't?

Happy Solstice,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

To me, the scientific process presents a much more plausible scenario than the magic fantasy tale of the Old Testament, a book written at a time of superstition and ignorance.
More discoveries of cities and people form the past have been made from that book than any other. As I said earlier, you only have to go back as far as Jesus. If he was not here, or didn't do and say that things the bible says he did, then the bible is a hoax. The new testament lays out the geneaology of Jesus from Adam. It is where creationists take the time line for a 6000-10,000 year old earth. Again, as Jesus asked, "Who do men say that I AM?" If he was just a man, why did people suffer persecution and death to tell the story of him? Were they nuts?

Plenty of people were willing to undergo persecution or death to vindicate Cyrus the Persian's divine right to rule the Earth, or to support the claim of the Pope of Rome to be Jesus's terrestrial errand boy -- or, for that matter, to oppose the same claim.

On some issues, huge quantities of people do indeed appear to be nuts.

Well that's the oversimplified basis behind the oscillating Bang. At the end, when all cools and the expansion stops, gravity eventually and inexorably draws things back to the primordial center of mass (which, if the Big Bang is to be understood according to classic Physics never moves throughout all time...and isn't THAT a cool thought starter), where matter recoalesces, reheats and explodes again, for another Big Bang.

Proponents of the oscillation cosmology assert there have been innumerable universes prior to our own, which have been born, lived expanded and died, only to reform and be reborn again.

Insuring Chuck Lorre's income for another....well...I digress.

This also has an overtone similar to the precepts of major religions that virtually all assert a life-after-death model.

Which is deliciously paradoxical.

And raises this question...If the laws of Physics and Chemistry are indeed fixed mechanisms of function in the universe...and the primordial mass is, in fact, all fundamental particles borne of the atoms of the previous universe, would the same random forces of evolution and natural selection create the same universe a second time? Would there be, for instance, you and me having this discussion in 2012 in the new rebirthed universe?

OR would there be analogs of that scenario comprised of bodies of different atomic aggregations, but aggregated in the same manner?

Just opened the package I got in the mail today containing my new Tecsun PL660.

Initial Impressions:

1. Same case as the Eton E10, with different function buttons. No sticky surface.
2. Very intuitive and easy to operate.
3. Shortwave and FM sensitivity appear superb for a compact portable.
4. Very stiff antenna. Unlikely to come loose soon.
5. Great-sounding audio.
6. Excellent sync detector, with one flaw listed below.
7. Cheap! Mine only cost $65 from Amazon after the $50 rebate for applying for an Amazon visa card.

Drawbacks:

1. Probably not best for MW DX. Not as sensitive as many other portables on MW.
2. My only problem with the sync detector is that it stays in wide bandwidth in lower sync. Even when the radio says it's in narrow BW! This is probably a defect, but I'll have to decide whether it's a big enough of a problem to warrant a return.

Overall, I continue to be impressed by the design collaboration between Chinese radio manufacturers. Waiting for nightfall...

No, I think the PL660 on the rod can handle some of the local noise (heavy ATT U-Verse neighborhood) better than the R75 on a fairly weak external. The R75 was doing better in the 9 and 11 Mhz bands, but the PL660 really excelled in allowing some of these weaker stations on the higher frequencies to pop up slightly above the noise floor.

Nightime MW reception with the PL660 was much better than daytime reception. Need to get out of the city to re-test the daytime MW reception of the PL660.

The R75 is in excellent condition with some excellent mods - voice frequency read-out, DSP, and baked crystal for frequency stability. Backup receivers include two Sony 2010s, both with dual KIWA filters,a newly re-conditioned SW77and an Eton E1XM. Dozens of other compact portables.

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

AS WE ENTER the Summertime static season on 75 meters, itï¿½s good for every Liberty Net participant to review what is necessary for an effective signal on that band: 1) Use a full size antenna, meaning a 120-foot half-wave dipole (or larger) horizontal antenna, or a full 60-foot quarter wave vertical with multiple radials. Inverted Ls larger than a half wave work well too with a good radial system and with the horizontal part a quarter wave or higher, as do full wave loops at a similar height. 2) Get that antenna up high in the air ï¿½ straight up to 60 feet for verticals; 40 feet minimum for horizontals, but the higher the better up to 100 feet. 3) Run as much clean power as you can; even if you are strong to the Net Control Station, the more remote stations will appreciate the extra signal-to-noise ratio. 4) Run clean audio compression. Compression keeps the average audio level high and consistent, but make it clean like a broadcast station ï¿½ clipping and other forms of distortion may increase the sensation of loudness but actually detract from intelligibility.

And remember this principle: Since atmospheric noise is high and is the limiting factor for reception on 75 meters, even a low and lossy antenna will receive just about as well as a high, efficient one. This leads some operators to think ï¿½I can hear them all fine on my 20-foot-high jumbled vee or trap verticalï¿½ they should hear me too.ï¿½ Not true. To overcome the high noise and interference levels on this band and be heard well, you need the highest, most efficient antenna you can manage. Itï¿½s worth the effort.

Here is a small sampling of subjects from this weekï¿½s discussion:

ï¿½ By Executive Order, the regimeï¿½s figurehead just ï¿½legalizedï¿½ over 800,000 Mestizo invaders of our living space. (54 minutes)

ï¿½ The widely-accepted (but insane and illegal) idea that legislatures can make any laws they want to make has led to the creation of ï¿½food policeï¿½ laws in New York City, the alleged purpose of which is to prevent restaurants or movie theatres from selling drinks with ï¿½too manyï¿½ calories per serving. (1 hour 3 minutes)

ï¿½ Some makers of amateur radio linear power amplifiers are now including ï¿½ on advice of their attorneys ï¿½ false information in their ownerï¿½s manuals stating that the amplifier will be damaged if it is operated on 11 meters. (1 hour 44 minutes)

ï¿½ A whistle-blower has revealed that Hollywood-style video productions are now being made ï¿½ evidently for future airing as disinformation ï¿½ showing fake images of massacres by Syrian government forces, fake resignations of senior Syrian officials, and fake footage of President Assad fleeing the country and a new government installing itself in Damascus. (2 hours 6 minutes)

ï¿½ Why are agents of the Washington regimeï¿½s Army ï¿½Psychological Operations Unitï¿½ embedded at CNN and other major television networks? (2 hours 8 minutes)

ï¿½ Was pornographer, Communist, and race-mixing rapist Frank Marshall Davis the real father ï¿½ and long-time mentor ï¿½ of Barack Obama? (2 hours 40 minutes)

ï¿½ All Liberty Net participants know that the killers in Washington are regularly using drone aircraft to lob missiles into apartment buildings in Pakistan, killing dozens or hundreds of innocents for every alleged terrorist targeted. Now that the Washington regime has delivered drones to a growing number of US cities, how long will it be before they are used to kill us? (3 hours 17 minutes)

ï¿½ Property taxes are the main way that the illegal invaders of this country are fed, housed, and financed ï¿½ so hurrah for the people in North Dakota who are proposing to eliminate that tax. People who have spent half a lifetime paying for a home should truly own it free and clear with no requirement to ï¿½pay or have your property seized.ï¿½ Such acts by government ï¿½ or anyone else ï¿½ should never be allowed on any pretext. (3 hours 43 minutes)

The Liberty Net is on the air every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time on or around 3950 kHz SSB (lately itï¿½s been higher in frequency to avoid causing interference, often near 3967).

Remember, thanks to N2SAG and N2IRJ and W1WCR, you can listen live ï¿½ and ï¿½textï¿½ live ï¿½ via the Web whenever the Liberty Net is on the air; just check out the ï¿½Liberty Net Liveï¿½ streams in this siteï¿½s left column. And, as always, you can download the net recordings right here at http://3950.net and listen at your leisure.

So this is not not a radio problem, really, but again, an antenna problem, which is most understandable in a suburban place. I have the same issue here - put up a good antenna, and the electronic buzz all over the place ruins the signal. When I take the R75 radio to the outback and string up some wire, I can practically hear the whole global surface.

AS a last-ditch effort for home listening, a Wellbrook loop might be a solution - but it's a relatively expensive gamble at $300+ for the item.

Wonderful, another toy for steroid fueled cops to harass the citizenry with. Gotta love that it misreads license plates and incorrectly determines the state of of origin of the plate but they want more of them.

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) -- Lincoln police have deployed a new crime-fighting tool that gives an officer four cameras to search license plates with the goal of finding criminals.

The cameras are mounted atop a sport utility vehicle driven by Officer Luke Bonkiewicz, the Lincoln Journal Star reported (http://bit.ly/L8RVVj).

"It's almost like having a second set of eyes in the car," Bonkiewicz said.

The Automated License Plate Recognition system can scan 2,000 to 3,000 license plates per shift, instantly matching the numbers to a database that includes information on stolen vehicles, missing people and vehicles linked to crimes or suspects.

Checking such observations by one officer in one vehicle over one shift would be impossible without the system, experts say.

The system has been credited for helping close about 20 cases in the six months Bonkiewicz has been operating it for the department.

But it's not perfect.

"There's still a lot of investigating that has to happen," Bonkiewicz said. The system can misread a plate or incorrectly determine which state it's from.

Bonkiewicz must check with other agencies or databases to ensure the system correctly flagged a plate for a problem, he said.

Lincoln is one of more than 1,000 law enforcement agencies using the system, said Greg Lary, director of sales and marketing for Pips Technology Inc., the Knoxville, Tenn., company that developed the plate reader.

Lincoln would like to buy more units, said Chief Jim Peschong, to put one in each of the city's five policing sectors.

The cost of about $21,000 per unit, plus installation and training, makes that unlikely for now, Peschong said.

But Peschong said he can imagine law enforcement using stationary readers on highways and major roads, scanning for fugitives, stolen vehicles and vehicles listed in Amber Alerts about abducted children.

I bought the Tecsun PL660 in April 2012 from Amazon at a price of $120.

The airband on the 660 is okay, picks up the a/c over Sutherland 160 km/100 miles away loud and clear.
But it has no scanning function and no squelch. It tunes in 1 kHz until you turn the tuning knob faster, then it skips along at 400 or so KHz and its therefore very difficult for finding stations unless you know the frequency and can key it in.

The PL660 is better on HF SW than my Redsun 2100 and is quite good.

Sync function works well on upper or lower side band. The filter can be set in narrow filter mode for crowded bands.

On MW it's not so strong, but better than my Eton 100 and Grundig G8.

VHF/FM is excellent, very sensitive and as good as my fantastic little G8 on FM. I’m able to pick up far off FM stations 80km/50miles away over the mountains.

SSB is also very good for Hams and a/c operating in HF.

The narrow and wide filters are better than most cheap portables.
1000 memories divided into ten pages. that is linked to a scanning function that puts the more powerful signals into a page = nice feature.

Comes with rechargeable Ni-Cad batteries with internal charger – unfortunately the outboard power supply is only 240v AC.
Chews batteries if you use alkalines

Altogether it is a nice little radio, but the Sony 2010 is still in a class of its own.

Dude, don't get me wrong, I love Little Rock, it's sort of a small version of Dallas, with hills. I have been to Little Rock a few times before. The first time was in 1956 on my way to Bozeman,Montana. The last time was back around 1993, the Arkansas State Fair was going on. I went to the Fair, it was night time. I had to go to the mens rest room, there was a woman about 25 years old in there and she was sitting on the pot. I didn't say anything because that was A OK with me, she told everybody, They dared me to do it! I needs to find the email address of those guys at Fast N' Loud. I know where there are some old classic cars and trucks in a town 11 miles West of doggy's couch and I do believe those Fast N' Loud guys in Dallas would be interested in checking out those old classic cars and trucks.

The Harper Conservative government has drastically cut funding to CBC.
They are the ones who should be called on the carpet! I figure if Stephen Harper couldn't muzzle the left leaning shortwave broadcast media like he did with federally funded climatologists and scientists, he would just silence them permanently by indirectly cutting their jobs.

Both Angus-Reid and Harris-Decima poles show the Tom Mulcair NDP slowing and steadily gaining popularity in Canada. Who knows, we may see increased funding return to the CBC if there is a positive change to an open and transparent government following the next federal election.
Whether it will be in time to salvage shortwave broadcasting in Canada is no one's guess. That arm of the CBC had been badly neglected for many years, and was running on antiquated life support consisting of discontinued parts no longer in production. The Conservative government merely pulled the plug. Had CBC shortwave broadcast consisted of right leaning banter proclaiming the wonders of our Alberta tar sands, I'm certain the outcome would have been very different.

Amtor has been dead on the ham bands for years; it was pretty much killed off by Pactor, a great mode I enjoyed that is now also pretty much dead.

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
18 - 24 June 2012

Solar activity ranged from very low to low during the period. The largest x-ray event was a C3 flare, produced by Region 1504 (S17, L=087, class/area Ekc/750 on 16 June) at 20/1628 UTC. Two new active regions were numbered during the period, Region 1510 (S16, L=019, class/area Cro/10 on 19 June) and Region 1511 (N15, L=357, class/area Cro/30 on 23 June). Neither of these new regions produced a flare event. No Earth directed CMEs were observed during the period.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at high levels throughout the period.

Geomagnetic field activity ranged from quiet to minor storm levels during the period. Early on 18 June, minor storm levels were observed as the result of residual effects from the 13 and 14 June CMEs. Conditions recovered to quiet levels later on the 18th and remained so for the rest of the period.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
25 June - 21 July 2012

Solar activity is expected to begin the period at very low to low levels and remain so until around 03 July. Beginning on 04 July, a chance for M-class flares will exist when old Region 1504 (S17, L=087) is expected to return.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit, though a slight chance may exist when Region 1504 returns.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to begin the period at normal to moderate levels, and remain so through 02 July. Flux values are expected to increase to high levels on 3-8 July due to recurrent coronal hole high speed stream effects. Normal to moderate levels are expected to return from 9 July through the remainder of the period.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to begin the period at mostly quiet levels and remain so through 28 June. On 29 June, a possible Co-rotating Interaction Region is forecast to produce mostly unsettled levels with a chance for active conditions prior to the onset of a coronal hole (CH) high speed stream. CH effects are expected to produce unsettled to active levels with a chance for minor storm periods on 30 June through 03 July. On 04-05 July, quiet to unsettled levels are expected as the CH effects wane. Mostly quiet conditions with isolated unsettled periods are forecast from 06 July through the end of the period.

June 25, 2012 – 4:17 pm| Posted in Radio

Radio Canada International is, essentially, dead.

The last broadcasts of the service on shortwave ended Sunday night.
(You can listen to some of the final transmissions here and here http://www.zogue.com/blog/2012/the-final-transmission-from-radio-canada-internati

Its budget has been cut by 80%, its Portuguese are gone, two thirds of its staff has been let go, and the huge transmission site in Sackville, N.B., sits unused, probably to be torn down eventually.

The video above is Marc Montgomery, host of the daily program The Link,http://www.rcinet.ca/english/archives/program/the-link/home/at the end of its final broadcast on Friday. As you can see, he gets quite emotional at the end, explaining why cutting RCI is a mistake.
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=QWua379uKy8&feature=player_embedded While most Canadians have probably never heard of it, RCI isn't for them. As Montgomery explains, the shortwave service in particular is capable of reaching people who don't have Internet access or whose Internet access is blocked or filtered. With an online-only service, third-world countries that restrict foreign media online won't have access to it.

Does that matter? Do people in third-world countries really listen to RCI in the first place? Maybe not. Maybe RCI has outlived its usefulness, and its shortwave service was mostly just a hobby for lonely ham-radio types who like to tune up noisy distant stations broadcasting in single-sideband AM. In that case, it might as well be shut down completely.

I've seen enough media outlets go online-only as a result of budget cuts to know that complete shutdown of RCI is, at this point, inevitable. Few people will listen to it because it's harder to access and has so little original programming, and that will be used as justification down the line to pull the plug completely.

Many people have been trying in vain to find some way to keep RCI going. [1] Sympathetic stories have been written about their demise. [2] Politicians have been conscripted into the cause. A rule [3] mandating a shortwave service has been found and subsequently eliminated by the government. A protest [4] has been organized. Attempts [5] are being made (unsuccessfully) to have the federal government set RCI's funding aside from the rest of the CBC. The RCI Action Committee, started the last time the CBC tried to gut the service, is actively pushing these activities and chronicling with regret the dismantling of the service on Twitter.

[4] http://www.newswire.ca/en/story/996467/budget-cuts-radio-canada-international-rci-solidarity-rally-for-rci
[5] http://j-source.ca/article/radio-canada-international-goes-air-moving-online-only-after-67-years-shortwave-service

But they're all in vain. The damage is done. Any groundswell of public support will eventually fade. People will forget. The CBC isn't going to go back on its decision and the government isn't going to force them to. The latter will point out that it sets the parliamentary appropriation and leaves the details on how to spend it to the public broadcaster. The former will point out that its budget situation has forced it to make difficult decisions and that things like local news and current affairs programming matter more to average Canadians than an international shortwave service.

So while it's nice to hear that RCI won't disappear quietly, the best we can do is honour the service and regret that it's now gone. CKUT's International Radio Report, which aired Montgomery's signoff in its entirety, itself got emotional talking about RCI's shutdown on Sunday (MP3).

The CBC News Network program Connect and CBC Radio program Dispatches also aired their final episodes this week. The final episode of Connect is here, with a retrospective starting at the 36-minute mark. The final episode of Dispatches is here.

Indeed very sad and short sighted. I've always been impressed with the quality of RCI's programming and the professionalism of its staff. Quite a refreshing alternative to the carnival barkers that dominate the shortwave broadcasts originating from the USA. Thanks for the heartfelt post.

Now now now ... let's not rush to judgement .. Kevin denies all those accusations. Till we can hear his side we can only speculate. What we need here is solid, unnnn-deniable evidence. Sorta like when Col. Anderson shot up the po-lice car over to Kain-tuck. Now for that we hadda po-lice car fulla bullet holes. All we know for sure from Kevin is that The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net discussed topics like ..

Clinton's a crook
Bush is a crook
Gore is a crook
Biden's a crook
They're all crooks

Wonder if Kevin knows when Col. Anderson will be outa prison. And why Chicken Fornicator left The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net.

Kevin and Col. Anderson and Chicken Fornicator really need to get back on The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net so the gang will be as complete as possible. Doofus Jammer might even check in for that reunion.

Thanks for the test. By the way it is possible to archive Navtex messages in ADIF files, and if the navtex stations file (In directory "data") is selected, the station coordinates are extracted from the message.

Liberty Net: June 23, 2012

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

A BIG THANKS to those who have helped us keep this site up and running and promoting the Liberty Net and freedom of speech on amateur radio ï¿½ itï¿½s truly a labor of love for all involved. Thatï¿½s also true of the Liberty Net itself: For 38 years, itï¿½s been a place for camaraderie, friendship, teaching, and learning on many levels.

Hereï¿½s a small sample of the ideas exchanged this week on the net:

ï¿½ As the European Union institutes a sweeping so-called ï¿½financial transaction tax,ï¿½ whatï¿½s next? We already have taxes on every other necessity of life (like carbon, for example), so perhaps a ï¿½breathing taxï¿½ is in order. The truth is that the pretext doesnï¿½t matter; itï¿½s just a pretext, after all. What the oligarchsï¿½ managers are really saying to us is ï¿½give us what we want, or go to prison.ï¿½ Itï¿½s as simple as that. (20 minutes)

ï¿½ Itï¿½s no wonder the billionaire oligarchs encourage non-White immigration: They know Third Worlders will work for less money, and the money-men donï¿½t ever want a culturally and racially united people to coalesce into a revolutionary force to challenge their rule. A melange of squabbling peoples that can easily be played off against each other, and with an ever-declining IQ, is a much more manageable slave labor pool. (35 minutes)

ï¿½ Mexico has one of the most corrupt governments in the world ï¿½ possibly even more corrupt than the regime in Washington ï¿½ and it is unquestionably conducting an open, though non-military, invasion of the United States. If we had our own government, declaring war on Mexico would be an option to solve the problem. But, like the Mexicans, we _donï¿½t_ have our own government. (41 minutes)

ï¿½ ï¿½Derivativesï¿½ are in reality just another way for the criminal financial elite to create ï¿½valueï¿½ out of thin air ï¿½ in other words, to steal the time and work and lives of honest people ï¿½ and the aggregate ï¿½valueï¿½ of derivatives is now supposedly a quadrillion dollars. Why not just tax these instruments at a mere two per cent. and pay off the entire national debt in one stroke? (49 minutes)

ï¿½ When we hear of the worldï¿½s wealthiest people, we hear about Carlos Slim and Bill Gates and a few others. But why do we almost never hear about the Rothschild family, which dwarfs them all by far? (56 minutes)

ï¿½ When the truth about the bank bailouts of the last couple of years (under which some banks were ï¿½paid backï¿½ four times in a row for ï¿½loansï¿½ they made on the same property) comes out ï¿½ and it will come out ï¿½ there may well be a shortage of lamp posts in this country. (1 hour 3 minutes)

ï¿½ At the root of the ï¿½Fast and Furiousï¿½ debacle is the deep and inherent criminality of the regime in Washington. But the blind authority-worship, or authority-fear, of the Americans who went along with the criminal ATF agents is also a serious problem. (1 hour 20 minutes)

ï¿½ The story of Barack Obamaï¿½s background is becoming more and more like a chapter taken from Condoniï¿½s _Manchurian Candidate_. Additional information has come out about Communist rapist and pornographer Frank Marshall Davis, adding to the likelihood that he is Obamaï¿½s biological father. One theory is that Davis tried to avoid responsibility for the child, and Obama, Sr. took over and arranged for the birth to take place in his home country of Kenya. (1 hour 36 minutes)

Thanks to N2SAG and N2IRJ and W1WCR, you can listen to the Liberty Net every week ï¿½ somewhere near 3950 kHz, plus or minus the interference (lately, substantially above that frequency) ï¿½ every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time, and also via the Web. You can also download the Liberty Net right here at http://3950.net and listen in your car, at work, or wherever you like. Check in on the air and join the excitement!

If the Chinese Communists pay close attention to the examples of how Abraham Foxman and Sumner Redstone and Rupert Murdoch regard us, they'll soon learn to describe the Tibetans who are so wicked as to actually want their own country as "Tibetan supremacists" and "terrorists."

A good book on the subject by a friend of mine:

Thanks for the additional information, Joe.

Personally, I wouldn't eat anything that consciously wants to keep

The boobs keep falling for this sort of false flag operation. They actually believe they are being "patriotic" by calling for, say, Iranian blood after the CIA, Mossad, or MI5 kill a few civilians while wearing an Iranian mask.

Nationalism -- which is an inherent part of our mental makeup and an expression of our instincts for group preservation and evolutionary branching, and is therefore a _good_ thing -- is being manipulated by clever knaves.

Many of the knaves are wealthy, powerful aliens who manipulate us to get us to fight their wars for them -- and some are men of our own people who know they will be handsomely rewarded for their treason.

Good to know that you see through the obscene charade. If only those who _do_ see through it were allowed to vote, what a better world it would be.

With all good wishes,

True. Can't call them nuts, and it would be an insult to canines to call them mutts.

Both Oliver and Mencken called them the boobs, which I suppose is a conflation of "booby" and "rube." Not bad.

But Donald Clerkin came up with the best term of all: He called them the blankos. Empty souls with staring, uncomprehending eyes -- and no higher aspiration than to conform, and punish those who won't.

Such a contraction could be one way to get from (almost) end-stage entropy back to a primordial particle.

But it's possible (and I admit this is all total speculation) that the achievement of end-stage entropy would cause the very notions of number and size to immediately become meaningless -- and our huge Universe would simply, and instantly, _be_ a primordial particle.

It's tempting to think that every possible combination will eventually occur in one universal incarnation or another.

But that does seem to wildly violate the principle of Occam's razor.
After all, a universe in which everything is exactly the same as this one, except for the fact that you have one more hair on your head than you do in this one, is _possible_.

And the same is true for two more hairs, or two less hairs, or 100,000 more hairs. And that's just you.

That's one Hell of a lot of universes.

In fact, if the every-possibility-will-eventually-happen theory is true, there must be a vastly greater number of universe than there are atoms in any one universe. Hmmmm....

Happy July,

Kevin.

True enough .. but begs the questions ..
Why did Chicken Fornicator leave The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net?
When will Col. Anderson get out of jail?

However, we did some of our own research. Seems that the Colonel is incarcerated in the Fed-Pen in Forrest City, AR and is scheduled for release in 2016. Don't know if he will benefit from early release due to good behavior or overcrowding. And we'll have to see if the system will consider his debt paid and allow him to obtain another ham radio license so he can return to The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net. Hope he either returns to The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net, or resumes his clandestine broadcasting, as there are no doubt interesting stories to tell about his adventures since last we heard from him. Meanwhile, we wish the Colonel well.

As regards Chicken Forincator's departure from The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net, the mystery remains unsolved.
Them what knows ain't tellin'.

Yes, I remember it very well -- though I was also 11 at the time. We drove up from Virginia. We had an attachment to Canada, because we had travelled there almost every year, driving from Alaska to Minnesota and back again. Quebec was new to us, though.

I remember the just-built apartments catering to visitors that had sprung up, the French spoken on the streets, the beauty of old Montreal's architecture, the amazing (but crowded) metro, the impressive hovercraft, the space-age look of everything at the fair, the glass "ski-jump" of the USSR pavilion and the man selling "real Russian ice cream" to cool off the people in the hot sun waiting to get in, the geodesic dome of the US pavilion (and the mostly vacuous "pop art" style displays within), the monorail, Petula Clark's "Don't Sleep in the Subway" on the radio seemingly every ten minutes, and a miniskirt density never to be seen again on planet Earth.

Happy memories,

Kevin.

#
Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
25 June - 01 July 2012

Solar activity was low to moderate during the week. The first three days of the period were marked by low level C-class x-ray flares, the largest of which was a C4/Sf from Region 1512 (S16, L=264, class/area Dki/290 on 29 June) on 28 June at 0452Z. Region 1512 was soon overshadowed by Region 1513 (N16, L=218, class/area Dao/120 on 01 July), which produced an impulsive M2/1b flare on 28 June at 1612Z. Subsequently, Region 1513 produced at least one impulsive M-class event each day for the remainder of the week, the largest of which was an M2.8/Sb on 01 July at 1918Z. While Region 1513 was the most prolific flare producer of the regions on the disk, it was dwarfed in area by Region 1515 (S17, L=204, class/area Ekc/850 on 01 July). Region 1515 appeared on the disk on 27 June and by 01 July had quadrupled in area. Both Regions 1513 and 1515 ended the week with beta-gamma magnetic characteristics. There were several CMEs observed during the week, however none were determined to be geoeffective.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit began the period at high levels before decreasing to moderate levels early on 25 June. Moderate levels continued throughout the week, increasing to high levels on 01 July at 1320Z.

Geomagnetic field activity ranged from quiet to active levels, with isolated minor to major storm levels observed at high latitudes late in the period. The geomagnetic field was at mostly quiet levels from 25-29 June. By 2100Z on 29 June, the phi angle at the ACE spacecraft switched from positive to negative polarity, indicating the arrival of the corotating interaction region. Solar wind speed at the ACE spacecraft, which had ranged between 350-500 km/s during the week, increased to 700 km/s by 30/1800Z as a coronal hole high speed stream (CH-HSS) became geoeffective. Concurrently, the Bz component of the interplanetary magnetic field turned southward, eventually dipping to -10 to -12 nT while Bt reached 14nT before decreasing to 7 nT by mid-day on 30 June. The geomagnetic field responded with unsettled to active levels for the remainder of the period. Minor to major storm levels were observed at high latitudes during 30 June-01 July.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
02 July - 28 July 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at low to moderate levels, with more M-class events from Regions 1513 and 1515 likely through 09 - 10 July.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at high levels through 08 July and from 17-21 July.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to begin at unsettled to active levels, decreasing to mostly quiet to unsettled levels after 03 July until another CH-HSS becomes geoeffective on 27 - 28 July.

hi,

Miracles in the holy Quran :THE SPHERICAL SHAPE OF THE EARTH

In early times, people believed that the earth is flat. For centuries, men were afraid to venture out too far, lest they should fall off the edge. Sir Francis Drake was the first person who proved that the earth is spherical when he sailed around it in 1597. Consider the following Qur'aanic verse regarding the alternation of day and night: "Seest thou not that Allah merges Night into Day And He merges Day into Night?" [Al-Qur'aan 31:29]
Merging here means that the night slowly and gradually changes to day and vice versa. This phenomenon can only take place if the earth is spherical. If the earth was flat, there would have been a sudden change from night to day and from day to night.
The following verse also alludes to the spherical shape of the earth: "He created the heavens And the earth In true (proportions): He makes the Night Overlap the Day, and the Day Overlap the Night." [Al-Qur'aan 39:5]
The Arabic word used here is Kawwara meaning 'to overlap' or 'to coil'– the way a turban is wound around the head. The overlapping or coiling of the day and night can only take place if the earth is spherical.
The earth is not exactly round like a ball, but geo-spherical i.e. it is flattened at the poles. The following verse contains a description of the earth's shape: "And the earth, moreover, Hath He made egg shaped." 2 [Al-Qur'aan 79:30]
The Arabic word for egg here is dahaha, which means an ostrich-egg. The shape of an ostrich-egg resembles the geo-spherical shape of the earth. Thus the Qur'aan correctly describes the shape of the earth, though the prevalent notion when the Qur'aan was revealed was that the earth is flat.

hi ,

Miracles in the prophet Muhammad's saying :the seven Earths

The Sunnah of Prophet Muhammad is the second revealed source of Islam. Like the Quran, it contains scientific information unavailable 1400 years ago. From these miracles is the “seven” earths, mentioned by the Prophet in several of his sayings. From them are the following two:

Hadith 1

It was narrated on the authority of Abu Salamah that a dispute arose between him and some other people (about a piece of land). When he told Aisha (the Prophet’s wife) about it, she said, ‘O Abu Salamah! Avoid taking the land unjustly, for the Prophet said:

“Whoever usurps even one span of land of somebody, its depth through the seven earths will be collared to his neck.” (Saheeh Al-Bukhari, ‘Book of Oppression.’)

Hadith 2

Salim narrated on the authority of his father that the Prophet said:

“Whoever takes a piece of land of others unjustly, he will sink down the seven earths on the Day of Resurrection.” (Saheeh Al-Bukhari, ‘Book of Oppression.’)

The aforementioned hadith prohibits oppression in general, especially the taking of a piece of land belonging to others unjustly. What are the seven earths they refer to?

Studies in geology have proven that the earth is composed of seven zones, identified from the inner to the outer layers as follows:

(1) The Solid Inner Core of Earth: 1.7% of the Earth’s mass; depth of 5,150 - 6,370 kilometers (3,219 - 3,981 miles)

The inner core is solid and unattached to the mantle, suspended in the molten outer core. It is believed to have solidified as a result of pressure-freezing which occurs to most liquids when temperature decreases or pressure increases.

(2) The Liquid Outer core: 30.8% of Earth’s mass; depth of 2,890 - 5,150 kilometers (1,806 - 3,219 miles)

The outer core is a hot, electrically conducting liquid within which convective motion occurs. This conductive layer combines with Earth’s rotation to create a dynamo effect that maintains a system of electrical currents known as the Earth’s magnetic field. It is also responsible for the subtle jerking of Earth’s rotation. This layer is not as dense as pure molten iron, which indicates the presence of lighter elements. Scientists suspect that about 10% of the layer is composed of sulfur and/or oxygen because these elements are abundant in the cosmos and dissolve readily in molten iron.

(3) The “D” Layer: 3% of Earth’s mass; depth of 2,700 - 2,890 kilometers (1,688 - 1,806 miles)

This layer is 200 to 300 kilometers (125 to 188 miles) thick and represents about 4% of the mantle-crust mass. Although it is often identified as part of the lower mantle, seismic discontinuities suggest the “D” layer might differ chemically from the lower mantle lying above it. Scientists theorize that the material either dissolved in the core, or was able to sink through the mantle but not into the core because of its density.

(4) Lower Mantle: 49.2% of Earth’s mass; depth of 650 - 2,890 kilometers (406 -1,806 miles)

The lower mantle contains 72.9% of the mantle-crust mass and is probably composed mainly of silicon, magnesium, and oxygen. It probably also contains some iron, calcium, and aluminum. Scientists make these deductions by assuming the Earth has a similar abundance and proportion of cosmic elements as found in the Sun and primitive meteorites.

(5) Middle Mantle (Transition region): 7.5% of Earth’s mass; depth of 400 - 650 kilometers (250-406 miles)

The transition region or mesosphere (for middle mantle), sometimes called the fertile layer, contains 11.1% of the mantle-crust mass and is the source of basaltic magmas. It also contains calcium, aluminum, and garnet, which is a complex aluminum-bearing silicate mineral. This layer is dense when cold because of the garnet. It is buoyant when hot because these minerals melt easily to form basalt which can then rise through the upper layers as magma.

(6) Upper Mantle: 10.3% of Earth’s mass; depth of 10 - 400 kilometers (6 - 250 miles)

The upper mantle contains 15.3% of the mantle-crust mass. Fragments have been excavated for our observation by eroded mountain belts and volcanic eruptions. Olivine (Mg,Fe)2SiO4 and pyroxene (Mg,Fe)SiO3 have been the primary minerals found in this way. These and other minerals are refractory and crystalline at high temperatures; therefore, most settle out of rising magma, either forming new material or never leaving the mantle. Part of the upper mantle called the asthenosphere might be partially molten.

(7) Lithosphere

Oceanic crust: 0.099% of Earth’s mass; depth of 0-10 kilometers (0 - 6 miles)

The rigid, outermost layer of the Earth comprising the crust and upper mantle is called the lithosphere. The oceanic crust contains 0.147% of the mantle-crust mass. The majority of the Earth’s crust was made through volcanic activity. The oceanic ridge system, a 40,000-kilometer (25,000 mile) network of volcanoes, generates new oceanic crust at the rate of 17 km3 per year, covering the ocean floor with basalt. Hawaii and Iceland are two examples of the accumulation of basalt piles.
The continental crust contains 0.554% of the mantle-crust mass. This is the outer part of the Earth composed essentially of crystalline rocks. These are low-density buoyant minerals dominated mostly by quartz (SiO2) and feldspars (metal-poor silicates). The crust (both oceanic and continental) is the surface of the Earth; as such, it is the coldest part of our planet. Because cold rocks deform slowly, we refer to this rigid outer shell as the lithosphere (the rocky or strong layer).
Conclusion

The layers of the earth coincide with the above mentioned hadith of the Prophet. The miracle is in two matters:

(1) The expression of the hadith, ‘He will sink down the seven earths on the Day of Resurrection,’ indicates the stratification of these “earths” around one center.

(2) The accuracy with which the Prophet of Islam referred to the seven inner layers of earth.

The only way for a desert dweller to have known these facts 1400 years ago is through revelation from God.

Today's TV laden with insipid story lines, schadenfreude, deceit and questionable morals (even for our modern age) is a sad and pathetic roll model for young people just developing a moral compass for their tough journey through life ahead. Not to mention being forced to grow up and lose their innocence way too quickly.

Andy Griffith is one of a handfull of TV personalities that was able to do good, and leave a lasting positive footnote in TV history.

That was all ruined when he did a political ad for a candiate in 2008, trying to capitalize on the "Andy of Mayberry" character.

It was fun to watch before the ad, now it is just politics.

Sad.

Defiant South Korea Vows Whaling

"South Korea said Wednesday that it would start whaling under a loophole in a global moratorium that allows scientific research, outraging conservationist nations by using the same tactic as Japan.

At sometimes heated talks of the International Whaling Commission in Panama, South Korea said it would announce later how many whales it would kill and when but insisted that it did not need foreign approval.

South Korea's head envoy Kang Joon-Suk said consumption of whale meat "dates back to historical times" in his country and that the minke whale population had recovered since a 1986 global moratorium went into effect." 2605. Miracles in the Holy Quran : THERE WAS AN INITIAL GASEOUS MASS BEFORE THE CREATION OF GALAXIES

hi ,

Miracles in the Holy Quran : THERE WAS AN INITIAL GASEOUS MASS BEFORE THE CREATION OF GALAXIES
Scientists say that before the galaxies in the universe were formed, celestial matter was initially in the form of gaseous matter. In short, huge gaseous matter or clouds were present before the formation of the galaxies. To describe initial celestial matter, the word ‘smoke’ is more appropriate than gas. The following Qur’aanic verse refers to this state of the universe by the word dhukhan which means smoke.
“Moreover, He Comprehended In His design the sky, And it had been (as) smoke: He said to it And to the earth: ‘Come ye together, Willingly or unwillingly.’ They said: ‘We do come (Together), in willing obedience.’” [Al-Qur’aan 41:11]
Again, this fact is a corollary to the ‘Big Bang’ and was not known to the Arabs during the time of Prophet Muhammad (pbuh). What then, could have been the source of this knowledge?

I got out my old but little used DX-440 and can get nothing but FM stations. Does anyone have any suggestion(s) as to what the problem/fix might be.? Any help will be greatly appreciated.

Is this an AM, FM, SW radio? Could try repeatedly changing the band switch back and forth between detents. Contacts could be corroded or high resistance. If you get to opening it up, you could try contact cleaner.

Another thought. Are there separate antenna inputs? Rod antenna for FM?

Tom, You may be interested in knowing that currently we have regional and global "radio blackouts" in progress due to high sunspot activity. That will temporarily shut down some bands. Wait until just after sunset, and you may have better results.

If the FM part works, you have probably blown the "front end". This is a known problem with the '440. Fortunately, it's a part that Radio Shack still sells. The only real pain about the repair is disassembly and re-assembly of the radio.

There's probably a Yahoo group for this radio (I've never looked) where you can get all sorts of info and improvements.

In the DX440 / ATS803A I believe there is a Field Effect Transistor that can be damaged by static electricity. From what I recall it is labled Q1 and you replace it with an MPF102.

First check the internal connection to the antenna and make sure it is not broken.

I'm quite certain even Moe would agree that with the passing of Andy Griffith Americana (that which was and used to be) and not his song has pretty much exited. Seems ol' Moe's hits stopped in the late 80's. Hasn't been charted or heard much since. Maybe his Americana is running short as well.

By Jeff Danna, Chicago Tribune reporter

July 5, 2012

Tens of thousands of vinyl records stored for decades at WGN radio will soon be for sale through a Chicago-based record store.

Dusty Groove America, which operates a storefront as well as a mail-order business, purchased a major portion of the record collection that's been accumulating at WGN, owned byTribune Co., since the late 1950s.

Store owner Rick Wojcik and his employees hauled dozens of cardboard boxes filled with LPs, 45s, 78s and CDs out of WGN's storage space in Tribune Tower on Michigan Avenue last week and took them to Dusty Groove headquarters at 1120 N. Ashland Ave.

"I saw records in that collection I've never seen before," Wojcik said. "I've seen records in that collection I've never seen original copies of before."

WGN radio recently moved to a smaller space in Tribune Tower and doesn't have the room to store the collection, which contains about 45,000 records, said Bill White, the station's director of programming and news. Station officials shopped the collection to dealers before choosing Dusty Groove based on its reputation as a quality store, White said.

"With the advent of the Internet and digital music, the record library had become obsolete and was no longer being used," he said in an email. "Rather than have it sit in off-site storage, we decided to put it in the hands of a true collector."

Neither White nor Wojcik would discuss the sale price or the estimated value of the records. "WGN radio's collection has to be absolutely priceless," said Rick Morris, associate professor of communications studies at Northwestern University.

The selection is broad because WGN wasn't hitched to a specific music genre and kept all of the records it received, Morris said. The records are in excellent condition because they weren't played a lot, according to Wojcik.

"These were not marked up that badly," he said. "Some things were just beautiful, immaculate."

Wojcik and his employees now have the grueling — but for them, exciting — task of sorting through the records. Boxes containing the collection fill parts of the second floor and the basement of the Dusty Groove offices. The records are being cleaned, and any warps they developed are being fixed before they are priced and put on the sales floor.

Wojcik has purchased many large record collections from individuals, but he said the WGN collection is different, spanning genres and eras.

"The wonderful thing for me taking this journey was they were all stocked chronologically," he said. "You'd hit Christmas every year."

Opening one of the boxes in the Dusty Groove offices, Wojcik pulled out a random stack of LPs by artists including Motown star Mary Wells, jazz guitarist Grant Green and obscure British Invasion group Ian and the Zodiacs. The same box also included sets of classical recordings and Latin jazz compilations.

Before WGN became a talk-radio station, it played music. Like radio stations across the country, WGN regularly received music in the mail from record companies hoping to get their acts on the air, White said.

Even after the format changed, on-air personalities used music in their shows and relied on the record library department to search the collection for the right song.

"Today when we want to play music on-air, most of this material is available to us in digital formats, at our fingertips," White said.

The records Dusty Groove didn't purchase will be donated to the Chicago Independent Radio Project, or CHIRP, which operates a mostly free-form Internet radio station and hosts an annual record fair.

Brendan O'Neill, CHIRP's record fair donation coordinator, said he was an intern at WGN in 2004 and would spend time looking through the records at Tribune Tower.

O'Neill said some of the donated records will be sold at future CHIRP record sales, while others will be stored in its music library for volunteer disc jockeys to play on the air. The records CHIRP keeps will mostly be the rare, unusual and obscure — those that can't be found on CD or iTunes, O'Neill said.

That philosophy could be the future of vinyl on the airwaves. Many stations — especially those owned by major media companies — long ago abandoned records for CDs, which have given way to MP3 files, Northwestern's Morris said.

But not all music is available on those more contemporary formats. Independent and college stations, like CHIRP's and Northwestern's, respectively, have DJs that play music that can be found only on vinyl, Morris said.

And if the records can't find a home at another radio station, collectors likely will snatch them up. Those who purchase a rarity from Dusty Groove or CHIRP's record fair dealers might be handling something even more interesting than they originally thought: a piece of Chicago radio history.

Tuning out
A cold-war stalwart goes out of fashion

TWIDDLE the dial of a short-wave radio and you never know what you will get. Through the hiss of static you may hear Cuban propaganda, football from Brazil or Chinese opera. Unlike other radio broadcasts, short-wave transmissions, bouncing off the ionosphere, can connect any two points on earth.

Thanks for this.

Definiteky check the higher frequencies around 15070 kHz and 21850 kHz due to active solar conditions. (I noticed Radio Australia booming in on 21740 kHz @ 2220UTC today) so upper bands may be useful.

We have been informed by the readers of rec.radio.shortwave that a | recent (2008) attempt to update these documents and post them (or links |
to them) at regular intervals, has since been abandoned, so the project |
is once again open to a sincere and motivated volunteer. |

We are interested in offering any technical support necessary to get these articles updated and automatically posted again at regular intervals. This would include establishing contact with the original maintainers for any necessary permissions. We would prefer to seek new, dedicated maintainers at this time, rather than start auto-posting the original articles ourselves.

There are still plenty of Ute stations to monitor, although nothing says radiosport like logging a 100,000 Watt station 5,000 miles away...

I'm trying to figure out why there are so many anti-shortwave postings on this group? You'd think guys who hung around here would be proponents of shortwave listening but instead a lot of guys seem to be on a campaign to convince us to give it up.

Short wave is as viable as it always was and new stations are coming on the air all the time. We go through this every summer as the newbies and techno-masterbaters , who are not very experienced or knowledgeable, misinterpret the predictable cyclic attenuation of the bands due to seasonal conditions as the spectrum becoming abandoned. As for the BS articles that appear in so-called "news" magazines...just as with the mainstream news propaganda ...you have to follow the money trail for the motives of the articles. Most of those are owned by or driven by advertising from companies attempting to create a need and a market so they can sell the technologies that they are involved in.

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

HEAT-WAVE-INDUCED power failures swept across the Middle Atlantic this week, but backup systems in place kept the Liberty Net over-the-air and Internet presence strong nevertheless. On a typical net night, there are at least two streams active from two separate stations which are also active on the air, with yet a third station making a backup recording.

Here are some excerpts from this weekï¿½s session of the net:

ï¿½ When talking about the federal monster, itï¿½s very important to remember to use the accurate description ï¿½the regime in Washingtonï¿½ instead of any phrase that might imply that the de facto government there is legal, legitimate, reformable, or in any way a continuation of the government of the founders. Calling it ï¿½the Obama regimeï¿½ is also inappropriate because 1) it implies that the oligarchsï¿½ errand boy is actually in charge, and 2) it obscures the fact that the tyranny we live under is many decades old and persists no matter which party won the last phony election. (24 minutes)

ï¿½ If a health insurance agent came to your house trying to sell you a policy having the same provisions as Obamacare, if you had any reasonable degree of intelligence it wouldnï¿½t take you long to kick him into the street. (29 minutes)

ï¿½ Now that Bush-appointed Justice Roberts has put the desires and ï¿½needsï¿½ of the government above the Constitution (and more than one state attorney general has speculated that Roberts was afraid, or bought off), we can truly appreciate the fact that Boy George Bush is ï¿½the gift that keeps on giving.ï¿½ (1 hour 6 minutes)

ï¿½ What Americans with a spine are planning to do with Obamacare and its illegal rules and ï¿½mandatesï¿½ is refuse to comply with it in any way. (1 hour 15 minutes)

ï¿½ Itï¿½s time to re-institute medical freedom in this country. We should be able to decide for ourselves what medications, if any, we want to take, and we should be able to go to the store and get them without a costly permission form (ï¿½prescriptionï¿½) from the medical cartel. (1 hour 58 minutes)

ï¿½ The oligarchsï¿½ media ï¿½ and thatï¿½s all of the commercial media, left and right ï¿½ purposely censor the news. The Internet provides an excellent way to bypass their control. Take advantage of it! (2 hours 11 minutes)

ï¿½ As the late Harvey Heinz, W8MPB, said many years ago: Things have to get worse before they can get better. Members of our civilization, even the intelligent fraction among them, have too easy a life to be very interested in revolution now. But that is going to change. (2 hours 20 minutes)

ï¿½ When the Attorney General himself is a criminal, who does one get to prosecute and punish a criminal President, a criminal Congress, and criminal government officials? (3 hours 50 minutes)

Remember that you can find the Liberty Net in the upper part of 75 meters (lately it has been consistently higher than 3950 kHz) every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time ï¿½ join in, or listen live on the Internet ï¿½ or listen at your leisure via the mp3 files posted here at http://3950.net every week. Usually the new recording is posted early on Sunday. It will be visible at the top of the upper right column of every page of this site.

Once again, thanks to W1WCR for running this important and historic discussion net, and thanks also to N2IRJ for making these recordings available.

Ernie - yes, of course it's viable, but major broadcasters are fleeing in swarms. They close due to a combination of budgets and politics, all of which are in a state of flux almost everywhere. All the Scandinavian countries are no longer represented by major broadcasters, half of central and southern Europe, and much of Africa are off shortwave now. Just this year we've lost Radios Bulgaria, Canada and Nederland (three of my very favorites, sad losses all), and Romania and VOA are in constant danger of being losing their respective battles too. I am sure V. Russia is wondering about it too. BBC has already cut 90% of their transmissions over the last 10 years. I'm not sure what new stations are coming on, except for the occasional low-power tropical or new religious broadcaster in some far-flung relay district. Oh, yeah, and CRI/CNR keeps occupying channels left behind by everyone else (and reports from Beijing indicate that Chinese BC officials are considering what to do about the lack of response from North American listeners. The English section this spring stated to their board of governors that they only received 6 reception reports from American listeners in the last year, and all from the same person - and that would be me!!!). What stations are you thinking of?

I am by no means planning on abandoning this hobby - but it is advancing to the point where we either get to choose between absolute DX from tiny stations in remote nations, or China, RHC and Voice of Korea. All India Radio is still there, but North America is only an afterthought for them and half the time they are fouled up by China's superpower broadcasts every 10 kHz. How much longer will Radio Taiwan, Korean BC, Radio Japan, and Radios Australia / New Zealand keep it up?

Personally, I like listening for the rare DX too, but I like some program listening too. Now that most of my favorite "program" stations have vanished - Prague, Bulgaria, Canada, Netherlands - half of the hobby has vanished with them.

Nonetheless, hope springs eternal. Maybe everyone will begin to realize that SW was a good idea, and it still is, and the tide will turn again.

Bruce Jensen

hi,

Miracles in the holy Quran :THE LIGHT OF THE MOON IS REFLECTED LIGHT

It was believed by earlier civilizations that the moon emanates its own light. Science now tells us that the light of the moon is reflected light. However this fact was mentioned in the Qur'aan 1,400 years ago in the following verse:. "Blessed is He Who made Constellations in the skies, And placed therein a Lamp And a Moon giving light." [Al-Qur'aan 25:61]
The Arabic word for the sun in the Qur'aan, is "shms". It is referred to as siraaj, which means a 'torch' or as wahhaaj which means 'a blazing lamp' or as diya which means 'shining glory'. All three descriptions are appropriate to the sun, since it generates intense heat and light by its internal combustion. The Arabic word for the moon is qamar and it is described in the Qur'aan as muneer, which is a body that gives nur i.e. light. Again, the Qur'aanic description matches perfectly with the true nature of the moon, which does not give off light itself and is an inert body that reflects the light of the sun. Not once in the Qur'aan, is the moon mentioned as siraaj, wahhaaj or diya or the sun as nur or muneer. This implies that the Qur'aan recognizes the difference between the nature of sunlight and moonlight.
Consider the following verses related to the nature of light from the sun and the moon: "It is He who made the sun To be a shining glory And the moon to be a light (Of beauty)." [Al-Qur'aan 10:5]
"See ye not How Allah has created The seven heavens One above another, "And made the moon A light in their midst, and made the sun As a (Glorious) Lamp?" [Al-Qur'aan 71:15-16]

Also, there is the cost of buying and maintaining a device capable of streaming online audio vs the cost of buying a simple SW radio. My high speed internet costs close to $50 per month. How much does it cost to run a Iphone or similar device per month? Not everybody, especially people in poorer countries, can afford these extravagant devices.

Some think so. Many still don't.

The fools that have fallen for so called "Internet radio" do not realize that they are playing right into the hands of those who are profiling, tracking and creating data bases on their personal habits.
In addition to knowing all your business, now they can easily monitor what people listen to and derive intellectual and attitude data..

What sheeple the dumbbells are that have bought the whole Internet BS-thing without realizing how they're turning over personal information by using these so called "replacements.".

Oh brother. You would have to be very ignorant to believe that the ancients couldn't see the moon was related to how the sun was positioned.

It is ramping up slowly. When one sunspot appears, another one disappears. It was a little better today than yesterday on 10 meters but the lower bands were poor. Keep trying for that general. Best of

I use Hamlib with no problems. Do you have a real COM port or a USB to

All the Scandinavian countries are no longer represented by major broadcasters, half of central and southern Europe, and much of Africa are off shortwave now. Just this year we've lost Radios Bulgaria, Canada and Nederland (three of my very favorites, sad losses all), and Romania and VOA are in constant danger of being losing their respective battles too. I am sure V. Russia is wondering about it too. BBC has already cut 90% of their transmissions over the last 10 years. I'm not sure what new stations are coming on, except for the occasional low-power tropical or new religious broadcaster in some far-flung relay district. Oh, yeah, and CRI/CNR keeps occupying channels left behind by everyone else (and reports from Beijing indicate that Chinese BC officials are considering what to do ab out the lack of response from North American listeners. The English section this spring stated to their board of governors that they only received 6 reception reports from American listeners in the last year, and all from the same person - and that would be me!!!). How much longer will Radio Taiwan, Korean BC, Radio Japan, and Radios Australia / New Zealand keep it up?

Weekly Highlights and Forecasts

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
02 - 08 July 2012

Solar activity ranged from low to high during the period. There were five major solar events, beginning on the 2nd of July. Region 1515 (S18, L=206, class/area=Fhc/900) was responsible for all of them. After a lackluster performance in the week prior (5 C-class x-ray events), it began this week with three M-class x-ray flares. The largest flare, an M5/2b at 2/1052UTC, brought activity to high levels for the first time since May 17th. The flare was accompanied by a Type II radio sweep (1063 km/s) and a 380 sfu Tenflare. A CME was subsequently observed in LASCO C3 coronagraph imagery at approximately 2/1254UTC, with most of the ejecta directed south of the ecliptic plane. The CME was also visible in STEREO-A and B COR2 coronagraph imagery.

Activity dipped to low levels on the 3rd when no M flares were observed. However, Region 1515 developed a beta-gamma-delta magnetic configuration that day. Activity returned to high levels the following day when Region 1515 unleashed an M5/2b flare at 4/0955UTC. Later in the day (04/2209UTC), it produced an M4 x-ray event accompanied by a 12,000 sfu 245 MHz burst, a Type II sweep (no speed estimate available), and a 220 sfu Tenflare. Of the seven M-class events that day, Region 1515 was responsible for six of them. The remaining M-flare, an M1/2n at 04/1639UTC, was produced by Region 1513 (N16, L=218, class/area=Dso/240). This event was accompanied by a 200 sfu Tenflare, and Type II radio (807 km/s) and Type IV radio emissions. A CME was captured by STEREO-B COR2 imagery at 04/1754UTC and STEREO-A COR2 coronagraph imagery at 04/1854UTC, and appeared to have an earth-directed component, consistent with Region 1513s geoeffective position.

High activity levels continued through the 5th and 6th of July as Region 1515 grew to its peak, covering 900 millionths of the solar disk and containing 60 spots. July 5th saw Region 1515 produce an M6.1/1b flare at 05/1144UTC accompanied by a 290 sfu Tenflare. The following day, this region produced the largest flare of the week, an X1 x-ray event at 06/2308UTC. Although no optical flare was reported, the event was accompanied by a 520 sfu Tenflare, a Type II sweep (1771 km/s), and a Type IV sweep. A CME was subsequently observed in LASCO C3 coronagraph imagery at 06/2324UTC.

Activity dropped to moderate levels on the 7th as Region 1515s magnetic complexity, area and spot count decreased to beta-gamma, 780 millionths, and 43 spots respectively. A new region, Region 1520 (S15, L=86, class/area=Fhc/1070), was numbered as it rotated on to the east limb. It produced an M1 x-ray flare at 7/0728UTC.

High activity levels returned on the 8th, when Region 1515 produced an M6/1n at 08/1632UTC. The event was accompaned by a 640 sfu Tenflare, Type II (2271 km/s) and Type IV radio sweeps. LASCO C2 coronagraph imagery first indicated a CME at 08/1648UTC, with most of the ejecta directed southwest.

Two proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit during the week. A 10 MeV greater than 10 pfu event began at 07/0400UTC, peaked at 07/0745UTC (25 pfu), and ended at 07/2110UTC. This event was associated with the X1 x-ray flare observed at 06/2308UTC described above. Both 10 and 100 MeV protons were elevated again on the 8th of July following the M6/1n flare described above. Neither the 10 nor the 100 MeV protons had crossed their flux thresholds (10 pfu and 1 pfu) by the end of this report, ending the period at 6 pfu and 4 pfu, respectively.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit were at high levels from July 2nd through the 6th, and at moderate levels on the 7th and 8th.

Geomagnetic field activity began the week at active levels for the first three synoptic periods (02/00-02/09UTC), then decreased to quiet to unsettled levels until the 5th, when one active period (05/12-05/15UTC) was observed. The unsettled to active periods were attributed to the presence of a coronal hole high speed solar wind stream. Solar wind speed at the ACE spacecraft was between 650-700km/s on the 2nd, decreasing to around 500 km/s on the 5th, with the Bz-component of the interplanetary magnetic field between 0 and -5 nT for much of the period. Activity for the remainder of the week was at quiet to unsettled levels with the exception of the 21-24UTC period on the 6th associated with a prologned period of negative Bz, and the 21-24UTC period on the 8th. Analysis of data from the ACE spacecraft suggest the activity on the 8th was associated with the arrival of the CME associated with the M1/2n flare on July 4th described above. Wind speed at ACE jumped from 400 to 472 km/s around 08/1500UTC and the Bz component of the solar wind began a smooth rotation from +10 to -9 nT over the course of the next nine hours.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
09 July - 04 August 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at moderate levels with a chance for high activity until Region 1520 reaches the west limb on 19 July. Low levels of activity are expected from 20-23 July, until old Regions 1515 and 1513 return on 23 and 24 July respectively. Moderate levels of activity, with a chance for high levels, are then expected through the end of the period.

There is a chance for proton events as Region 1520 moves into a favorable position beginning on the 13th of July though the 19th.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at high levels from 28 July through 01 August associated with coronal hole high speed stream effects.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to begin at unsettled to active levels with CME passage, decreasing to mostly quiet levels from 10 July through 26 July. Activity is expected to increase to unsettled to active levels from 27 July through 2 July with the arrival of a coronal hole high speed stream. Activity is expected to then decrease to mostly quiet to unsettled levels through the end of the period.

Left Turn: How Liberal Media Bias Distorts the American Mind

"Socialism is a philosophy of failure,
the creed of ignorance, and the gospel of envy,
its inherent virtue is the equal sharing of misery..."

-- Winston Churchill

"If you will not fight for the right when you can easily win without bloodshed; if you will not fight when your victory will be sure and not too costly; you may come to the moment when you will have to fight with all the odds against you and only a precarious chance of survival. There may even be a worse case. You may have to fight when there is no hope of victory, because it is better to perish than live as slaves."

---Winston Churchill

Leftism always starts with promises of unbounded freedom, and ends with micromanagement by lawyers, bureaucrats, and policemen.

A New America www.NewAmericaMovie.com is a documentary film that outlines the history of the Progressive movement in America over the last century. It analyzes how Progressive ideology has transformed public policy, the structures of government, and its potential impact on the country's future. An example of historical analysis contained in the film would be the argument that the Progressive ideals employed by FDR's New Deal were the cause of the Great Depression, not the solution to it.

Through interviews with Constitutional scholars, authors, historians, public policymakers, and others, it reviews the original intent of the Founders, why it is important and lays out how Progressivism is in conflict with that original intent.

Anyone who is NOT a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/ Communist is a Fascist according to Useful Liberal JackAss Idiots. Anyone who refutes a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/ Communist is a moron according to Useful Liberal JackAss Idiots.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010 complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it. Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as "text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan "Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show." This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo. Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plain truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

"It is obvious what the fraudulent issue of fascism versus communism accomplishes: it sets up, as opposites, two variants of the same political system; it eliminates the possibility of considering capitalism; it switches the choice of “Freedom or dictatorship?” into “Which kind of dictatorship?”—thus establishing dictatorship as an inevitable fact and offering only a choice of rulers. The choice—according to the proponents of that fraud—is: a dictatorship of the rich (fascism) or a dictatorship of the poor (communism)."

"That fraud collapsed in the 1940’s, in the aftermath of World War II. It is too obvious, too easily demonstrable that fascism and communism are not two opposites, but two rival gangs fighting over the same territory—that both are variants of statism, based on the collectivist principle that man is the rightless slave of the state—that both are socialistic, in theory, in practice, and in the explicit statements of their leaders—that under both systems, the poor are enslaved and the rich are expropriated in favor of a ruling clique—that fascism is not the product of the political “right,” but of the “left”—that the basic issue is not “rich versus poor,” but man versus the state, or: individual rights versus totalitarian government—which means: capitalism versus socialism."

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

Dr. Ludwig von Mises - 1952 - http://mises.org/books/planningforfreedom_mises.pdf

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!”

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term “liberalism” (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning “pertaining to a free man”) first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent. Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

hi,

Miracles in the holy Quran :THE SUN ROTATES

For a long time European philosophers and scientists believed that the earth stood still in the centre of the universe and every other body including the sun moved around it. In the West, this geocentric concept of the universe was prevalent right from the time of Ptolemy in the second century B.C. In 1512, Nicholas Copernicus put forward his Heliocentric Theory of Planetary Motion, which asserted that the sun is motionless at the centre of the solar system with the planets revolving around it.
In 1609, the German scientist Yohannus Keppler published the ‘Astronomia Nova’. In this he concluded that not only do the planets move in elliptical orbits around the sun, they also rotate upon their axes at irregular speeds. With this knowledge it became possible for European scientists to explain correctly many of the mechanisms of the solar system including the sequence of night and day.
After these discoveries, it was thought that the Sun was stationary and did not rotate about its axis like the Earth. I remember having studied this fallacy from Geography books during my school days. Consider the following Qur’aanic verse: “It is He Who created The Night and the Day, And the sun and the moon: All (the celestial bodies) Swim along, each in its Rounded course.” [Al-Qur’aan 21:33]
The Arabic word used in the above verse is yasbahûn . The word yasbahûn is derived from the word sabaha. It carries with it the idea of motion that comes from any moving body. If you use the word for a man on the ground, it would not mean that he is rolling but would mean he is walking or running. If you use the word for a man in water it would not mean that he is floating but would mean that he is swimming.
Similarly, if you use the word yasbah for a celestial body such as the sun it would not mean that it is only flying through space but would mean that it is also rotating as it goes through space. Most of the school textbooks have incorporated the fact that the sun rotates about its axis. The rotation of the sun about its own axis can be proved with the help of an equipment that projects the image of the sun on the table top so that one can examine the image of the sun without being blinded. It is noticed that the sun has spots which complete a circular motion once every 25 days i.e. the sun takes approximately 25 days to rotate around its axis.
In fact, the sun travels through space at roughly 150 miles per second, and takes about 200 million years to complete one revolution around the center of our Milky Way Galaxy.
“It is not permitted To the Sun to catch up The Moon, nor can The Night outstrip the Day: Each (just) swims along In (its own) orbit (According to Law).” [Al-Qur’aan 36:40]
This verse mentions an essential fact discovered by modern astronomy, i.e.

the existence of the individual orbits of the Sun and the Moon, and their journey through space with their own motion. The ‘fixed place’ towards, which the sun travels, carrying with it the solar system, has been located exactly by modern astronomy. It has been given a name, the Solar Apex. The solar system is indeed moving in space towards a point situated in the constellation of Hercules (alpha Layer) whose exact location is firmly established.
The moon rotates around its axis in the same duration that it takes to revolve around the earth. It takes approximately 29½ days to complete one rotation.
One cannot help but be amazed at the scientific accuracy of the Qur’aanic verses. Should we not ponder over the question: “What was the source of knowledge contained in the Qur’aan?”

Is it really such a mystery why the USA continues its downward spiral into turd world status? If sanity were to prevail there would be an abortion clinic in every city and hamlet throughout Dixie offering free services to all.

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A federal judge on Wednesday continued to block a state law that threatens to shut down Mississippi's only abortion clinic and make it nearly impossible for women to get the procedure in the state.

Dear Neighbor,

Something important:

While going through some files, we've been fortunate to have the opportunity to review some of our customers' old insurance policies.

Here's what we discovered: Over the past few years, many insurance rates have actually gone down.

· More types of insurance are available
You can get specific coverage - insuring just what you need - which provides a lower rate.

· More deductibles are now available

Smart options in deductibles can save you plenty!

· More options in coverage amounts are available

Get rid of excessive coverages and save even more!

· Additional Savings are available for meeting specific requirements

For example, if you're a good driver, we have added bonus savings for you with our good driver rates.

· You can often lower your premiums with broader coverage

Everyone wants your business. When you place more insurance, (car, home, life, business) your overall premiums can go down.

We've made a lot of friends - by saving people money. Here's what we'd like to do for you: While we can't guarantee every client will save money, the chances are great that we'll SAVE YOU MONEY.

Please see my website http://insuranceinformationtoall.blogspot.com reviewed in a while.

thinking of it!

Thank you.

Kindest regards,

I gave up on Ubuntu with 10.04LTS. I am using Mint 12 Gnome Cinnamon Mate for my general purpose desktop. My Ham Radio PC runs a Puppy fork of Ubuntu but I have never used it for anything but fldigi and pskreporter. I don't upgrade and will use it until it dies, then make a decision.

I have run fldigi in Win XP just fine, on another ASUS netbook.

Mint Linux is the most popular distro now; Ubuntu having gone to a hand-held idiot interface with great big buttons that all look alike.

Regarding the ongoing collapse, when you're as close to the bottom as I, the fall is not that big a deal. 73 de dave

Not true. What they are doing is reorganizing their debts, mainly pensions which were largely defunded by the banker induced collapse of the equities markets back in 2007.

Interesting, Fox News is mocking planners for assuming an 8% annual return on the stock market. This was the historical average return on equities from the late 1930s to about 2000, when Clinton et al simplified rules and Bush went nuts on steroids. Now the average annual return is less than half of what it was during regulation.

I heard it via Vermont Public Radio which streams the World Service 24/7 vpr.org I use 9740 when I forget to retune my web radio, which is in my Ham Shack. R. Australia on 9580 has a much better signal than the Singapore relay these days.

Mississippi's population is not much over three million, a drop in the bucket compared to other states such as California and New York. One thing is for Sure, if there were a lot more Mississippians, this Country would be a lot better off.

I have seen PTO lawnmowers that are 4 blades across. They use them at golf courses. I'm guessing the horizontal rotary blade is what your swinging broom evolved into. My Honda OHC lawnmower has no drain plug.
They say to tip it 90 degrease.

What's with the shift of the US public radio Beeb feed shifting from Public Radio International to American Public Media. My impression is that APM is the most right wing of the public radio program providers.
Somebody joked that it's "Nice Polite Republicans", but that seems to fit APM more than NPR.

But then 9580 goes off air. 7240 fades out too quick, and 11880 has buttloads of on channel asian language interference.

At least they're putting some more Radio National stuff, around 14:00, instead of having some poor sod doing their news blather in the dead of night, their time.

9740 gets gangbanged from either side around 12:00, but later on is strong and clear up here in the fog. 6195 is an alternative.

I have two small electric hand held 4/12'' angle grinders. My old Makita grinder bit the dust two years ago, I bought a new Hitachi grinder at the Lowe's store. I think if I take my Makita apart and clean it up real good and new brushes it might run long enough for me to try it out. I have a round sanding pad that is made to fit on both grinders. I will drill two holes in the pad and use some zip ties. All zip ties are not alike, there are some really tough zip ties for sale in the market place. I want to build something that will let me mow my yard in about a fourth of the time it takes me with my 22'' Weedeater lawnmower.

It's not pinin,' it's passed on! This parrot is no more! It has ceased to be! It's expired and gone to meet its maker! This is a late parrot! It's a stiff! Bereft of life, it rests in peace! If you hadn't nailed him to the perch he would be pushing up the daisies! Its metabolical processes are of interest only to historians! It's hopped the twig! It's shuffled off this mortal coil! It's run down the curtain and joined the choir invisible!
This.... is an EX-PARROT!

My all-time favorite Python skit... it still makes me ROTFL after these nearly four decades.. :)

One thing I've noticed is Republican fat cat donors want more tax breaks from the govt and that is the cause they support. Deep pocket Democratic donors support the govt increasing taxes on themselves and doing more for the USA as a whole. Republicans seem selfish. Democrats seem more social.

Happy that ti moved from 7200 kHz range. Was interfering with our QSO's earlier in the week.

Tune in the Rotten Apples on 7238 kHz (LSB) every weekday morning (6AM eastern) and late afternoon (3PM eastern). Check ins from Florida to Californnia.

Still better motivation than raw greed. Our binary electoral system stops at the water's edge. DHS must be disbanded. The NDAA revoked and the Patriot Act sunsetted.

Yeah, vote Republican.

I've got the newsreels to prove what I am about to say...

Romney was for abortion.

Romney was against abortion.

Romney wanted the auto companies to go bankrupt.

Romney's ideas saved the auto companies.

Romney was for govt. sponsored health care.

Romney was against govt sponsored health care.

[regarding meals on the campaign trail]:

Romney: "I'm not a catfish man".

Romney: "I LOVE catfish!".

Seems like just the guy we need to play hardball with the Russians, Chinese and North Koreans.

Obama is called a socialist for govt. health care -- using Romney-care as a blueprint -- and the 'individual mandate'.

Romney created govt. health care in Massachusetts (widely regarded as quite successful, by the way) and I will show you the newsreels where Romney vehemently defends the 'individual mandate'.

Bonus question: Why doesn't this qualify Romney as a socialist????

Liberty Net: July 7, 2012

http://3950.net/2012/07/liberty-net-july-7-2012/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

NEITHER SOLAR FLARES nor power surges, nor anything that the enemies of free speech have attempted, have stopped ï¿½ or even put a crimp in the style of ï¿½ the Liberty Net. The net has been on the air, serving the public interest, and expanding minds since 1974.

Here are just a few of the things that were discussed during this weekï¿½s session of the net:

ï¿½ Now that the money-manipulators and criminal politicians have dug a deep economic hole for themselves ï¿½ now that millions have awakened to their scams and crimes ï¿½ will they play the only card they have left, and start another World War? Itï¿½s clear that the tyrants hate Russia, because Russia is not under their control, and recent false flag events indicate that Russian resistance to the ongoing attempted CIA / Mossad coup in Syria may be used as a pretext. (38 minutes)

ï¿½ US Treasuries, at nearly zero per cent. interest, have now reached the point where many rational investors consider them unmarketable. What does that say about the solvency of institutions that hold vast quantities of them? (41 minutes)

ï¿½ Not only has Mitt Haircut not won enough delegates to carry the nomination, but he and his campaign officials face charges that they have been coercing Ron Paulï¿½s and other delegates. (52 minutes)

ï¿½ Obamaï¿½s false Social Security number, coupled with other questionable aspects of his background, shows fingerprints of deep intelligence agency involvement in his career. (1 hour 2 minutes)

ï¿½ Weï¿½ve gotten halfway through the year, and 32 banks have failed so far. Hurray for the recovery! (2 hours 8 minutes)

ï¿½ Well over half of all public spending in this country goes to feed the regimeï¿½s military killing machine ï¿½ just about as much as the rest of the worldï¿½s military budgets combined. (2 hours 25 minutes)

ï¿½ Americans, though they donï¿½t know it yet, are so totally enslaved to the bankers that our economy could truly be described, not as an industrial economy or agricultural economy or service economy, but as a ï¿½debt service economy.ï¿½ (3 hours 42 minutes)

ï¿½ How far we have fallen is well illustrated by the ï¿½health care mandateï¿½ which declares that we must purchase a corporate product or go to prison. (4 hours 3 minutes)

Thanks to Marty, N2IRJ, youï¿½re able to listen to the Liberty Net right now on your computer here at http://3950.net/ ï¿½ or download the file and listen on your portable mp3 player. Check in via your ham rig, and also check out the live feed and chat during net times, and the additional feed from N2SAG, that let you make an end run around jammers and a fickle ionosphere.

Join in or listen to the most exciting net on the amateur bands every Saturday night starting at 10PM Eastern Time.

Our thanks go to W1WCR for his hard work and courage in keeping this very important part of the amateur radio service alive for almost 40 years!

The Democrats and Republicans are two branches of one party -- the oligarchs' establishment party.

On all issues of real importance to our illegitimate rulers, both branches agree. They are allowed to disagree on personalities and peripheral issues, and the partisan media blow these out of all proportion to give the yahoos the false impression that the one party is really two and that they have a real choice.

To see that no good will ever come from that party, and to oppose that party, is a litmus test of intelligence and virtue.

With every good wish,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

By Lloyd Marcus

In the heat of passion during a radio interview, I said, "The NAACP, Congressional Black Caucus, and Democratic Party are more destructive to blacks than the KKK!"

After the radio show, I thought my statement may have been a bit over the top. Upon further thought, though, I concluded that my statement is true. Before calling me crazy, please hear me out.

The mission of the KKK is to stifle black liberation via intimidation, which is exactly what the modern black civil rights coalition continues to do to blacks. Both organizations despise self-starting, self-reliant, and free-thinking blacks.

The primary mission of the black civil rights coalition (NAACP/CBC) and the Democratic Party is to keep black Americans believing themselves eternal victims of an eternally racist white America. Many blacks have been successfully indoctrinated into believing that every problem in the black community is the result of white oppression.

This is why the black civil rights coalition verbally brutalized black actor/comedian Bill Cosby for suggesting that blacks embrace moral responsibility, hard work, and self-reliance to solve problems in their community.

This is also why the black civil rights coalition hates two of the most powerful blacks on the planet: Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas and former Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice. Thomas and Rice achieved extraordinary success competing without special concessions or lowered standards due to their race. The KKK shares the black civil rights coalition's disdain for such uppity, self-reliant you-know-whats.

As I stated, the mission of the KKK is to suppress blacks. The black civil rights coalition has assisted in the fulfillment of the KKK's mission for decades.

Democratic Party failed policies supported by the black civil rights coalition have destroyed the black family and sparked epidemic out-of-wedlock births. They have created fatherless black boys who run to gangs in search of male bonding. Blacks are disproportionately represented in prisons, have epidemic high school dropout rates, and suffer from genocidal levels of black abortions -- all due to Democrat-led government intrusion. http://homicides.redeyechicago.com

Yes, monolithic loyal voting for Democrats has truly paid off for blacks. It would be fitting and proper for the KKK to send the black civil rights coalition a thank-you card for wreaking such havoc in the black community.

A black man in the White House is the ultimate symbol of America's repentance from her sin of slavery. And yet, to preserve its relevance, the black civil rights coalition strives to convince blacks that race relations have progressed very little since the 1950s. Meanwhile, President Obama is the huge black elephant -- or perhaps I should say donkey -- in America's living room proving otherwise.

The NAACP further revealed its true colors when Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney addressed its members at their convention.

Clearly, this once-great organization, which comprised champions of civil rights, has morphed into a shameful liberal activist hate group. They do not give a hoot about real black empowerment. Their mission is solely to advance a far-left, liberal, socialist/ progressive, and anti-America agenda. The NAACP has sold its soul for a seat at its white liberal massa's table. This disgraceful bunch no longer deserves our respect.

The NAACP called Romney offensive for speaking about family values, self-reliance, character, and hard work -- values touted by MLK.

The liberal NAACP audience wanted Romney to give an Obama type speech, proclaiming that business owners are rich, selfish SOBs! They wanted Romney to vow to punish achievers and redistribute their ill-gotten gains (earnings) to black America. Such a speech would have won Romney an NAACP parade in his honor.

This is why, as a black conservative, I have disassociated myself from the low-rent modern black civil rights coalition. They consistently appeal to black America's lower nature, promoting victimhood-ism, class envy, and racial hatred. I refuse to be a part of such a bottom-feeding mindset.

Also, there are grave consequences associated with constantly telling blacks that they need lower standards and special concessions to succeed. Such bigotry of low expectations sends a not-so-subliminal message to blacks. The message is that blacks are intellectually challenged and inferior. The KKK could not do a better job of negatively impacting the self-esteem of black Americans.

Further insulting blacks is the black civil rights coalition's argument that requiring a photo ID to vote will disenfranchise black voters. In essence, they are saying that blacks are too stupid to find their way to acquire a photo ID.
http://thehill.com/homenews/administration/237031-holder-pledges-aggressive-fight-against-texas-voter-identification-law

A photo ID is required to board an airplane, cash a check, and do a host of other things. But somehow, acquiring a photo ID is too challenging for blacks. It appears that the KKK, the black civil rights coalition, and the Democratic Party all agree that blacks are just not as smart as whites.

The black civil rights coalition and the Democrats have a cow when conservative Republicans bring up morality. They are outraged when conservatives suggest that it might be problematic that 73% of black babies are born out of wedlock.
http://cnsnews.com/news/article/doj-alum-racial-profiling-hearing-calls-crimes-out-wedlock-births-black-community

Here is what the Obama administration, praised by the black civil rights coalition, considers black empowerment. Proudly declared as an effort to assist black America, the Obama administration announced that it has softened the penalty for possession of crack cocaine.

"If you will not fight for the right when you can easily win without bloodshed; if you will not fight when your victory will be sure and not too costly; you may come to the moment when you will have to fight with all the odds against you and only a precarious chance of survival. There may even be a worse case. You may have to fight when there is no hope of victory, because it is better to perish than live as slaves."

A New America www.NewAmericaMovie.com is a documentary film that outlines the history of the Progressive movement in America over the last century. It analyzes how Progressive ideology has transformed public policy, the structures of government, and its potential impact on the country's future. An example of historical analysis contained in the film would be the argument that the Progressive ideals employed by FDR's New Deal were the cause of the Great Depression, not the solution to it.

Through interviews with Constitutional scholars, authors, historians, public policymakers, and others, it reviews the original intent of the Founders, why it is important and lays out how Progressivism is in conflict with that original intent.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than

complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it. Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as "text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan "Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show." This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo. Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plain truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

"It is obvious what the fraudulent issue of fascism versus communism accomplishes: it sets up, as opposites, two variants of the same political system; it eliminates the possibility of considering capitalism; it switches the choice of “Freedom or dictatorship?” into “Which kind of dictatorship?”—thus establishing dictatorship as an inevitable fact and offering only a choice of rulers. The choice—according to the proponents of that fraud—is: a dictatorship of the rich (fascism) or a dictatorship of the poor (communism)."

"That fraud collapsed in the 1940’s, in the aftermath of World War II. It is too obvious, too easily demonstrable that fascism and communism are not two opposites, but two rival gangs fighting over the same territory—that both are variants of statism, based on the collectivist principle that man is the rightless slave of the state—that both are socialistic, in theory, in practice, and in the explicit statements of their leaders—that under both systems, the poor are enslaved and the rich are expropriated in favor of a ruling clique—that fascism is not the product of the political “right,” but of the “left”—that the basic issue is not “rich versus poor,” but man versus the state, or: individual rights versus totalitarian government—which means: capitalism versus socialism."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

Dr. Ludwig von Mises - 1952 - http://mises.org/books/planningforfreedom_mises.pdf

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!”

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term “liberalism” (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning “pertaining to a free man”) first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

Again with the stuff that goes "blah blah blah" in the night, right
Kevin ? ? ?

Yep, hundreds of millions of shortwave listeners worldwide sat spellbound by their radios last Saturday night, popcorn at the ready, listening to netters grinding on topics like ..

Clinton's a crook
Bush is a crook
Gore is a crook
Biden's a crook
They're all crooks

Just can't wait to see what tonight's installment holds. New exciting topics we've never heard before. Maybe they'll go where no ham radio net has ever gone before. Who knows maybe this time they'll even get into stuff like ...

Clinton's a crook
Bush is a crook
Gore is a crook
Biden's a crook
They're all crooks

Tune in and find out.

The Late Arky Bob said that.

What is your point?

First of all, it is EXTREMELY unlikely that anyone will "go to prison". For the first year or two, it will be a cash fine (not prison) and a trivial fine at that. The whole point is to prevent scofflaws and deadbeats (those who can afford insurance but do not get it).

Finally, in many (most?) states, you have to show proof of insurance (a "corporate product") before you can get license plates for your car.
Funny, but I don't hear anyone whining about that.

Assuming you're right and Romney is a socialist, then that would make Democrats hard-core Communists, given their insatiable appetite for stealing productive citizens' money and giving the stolen money to (largely) lazy insolent parasites, non-citizens, and the violent-prone "Trayvon" class of subhumans.

WWCR, so-called "worldwide Christian radio", is owned by jewish homosexuals. Don't be deceived by these slime bags. The company that owns WWCR calls itself (for some reason) "F.W. Robberts Broadcasting Co. Inc.". They are located at 2730 Loumor Ave., Metairie, LA, 70001. Their phone number is (504) 831-6941, and Fax (504) 832-4039. The company is owned by Fred P. Westenberger (jew), Chris P. Westenberger (jew), Fritz N. Westenberger (jewish homosexual), and a couple other Westenbergers.

Here's a NY Times article about the very nice house that Fritz N. Westenberger and his "partner" Patrick live in. They often entertain many of their jewish homosexual "friends" at this house:

http://www.nytimes.com/2011/07/29/realestate/house-tour-olive-ny.html?_r=1

This very nice home was built with the money that you sent to WWCR to buy the shyster jew products they sell on that station, for example the Jew named Alex Jones.

The entire purpose of WWCR is to push Israeli disinformation to cover up the criminal activity of the jewish crime network (that is Alex Jones' sole purpose for existing and being promoted by other jewish homosexual media outlets, such as Disney/ABC, etc.).

DO NOT SPEND ONE PENNY OF MONEY ON THE SHYSTER FREEMASON JEW CRAP PRODUCTS THESE HUCKSTER CRIMINALS ARE PEDDLING.

Understand that the sole reason these jews run a supposedly Christian station is TO DECEIVE YOU, about the crimes being committed by jews, such as the 9-11 attacks, that were the work of Israel.

Spread the word: WWCR is owned by jewish homosexuals. Boycott them, and bankrupt every single shyster that broadcasts on this station, and let's get jewish homosexual criminal trash OUT OF NORTH AMERICAN AND EUROPE, BY ANY MEANS NECESSARY.

OMG! I'm going to throw away my shortwave radio and watch Fox news. Oh no I can't do that because Murdoch is a Jew. I know, I'll listen to Rush Limbaugh. NO! I can't do that because the president of his network is Jewish. Besides Rush's sister is lesbian so he is in league with the 'evil people' also.

Yeah, it's totally normal for Jews whose Talmud teaches them to hate Christians to own and operate a radio station called "Worldwide Christian Radio". Yeah, that makes a lot of sense, and jews like Rob are TOTALLY TRUSTWORTHY PEOPLE!!!!!

In fact, it's so normal for someone of one religion to run a radio station for people of another religion, that I'm going to start a radio station called "Worldwide Jewish Radio". I'm sure that jews like Rob will TOTALLY TRUST THE AWESOME DISINFO BULLSHIT THAT I FEED THEM THE SAME WAY WE ALL TRUST THE JEWISH HOMOSEXUALS AT WWCR BECAUSE JEWISH HOMOSEXUALS JUST LOVE CHRISTIANS SO VERY VERY MUCH!!!!!

One of the key programming features that the jewish homosexuals who own WWCR like to feature on their "Christian" radio station is shows that are all about how evil the jews are, etc. etc. This is obviously a honey-pot operation, trying to get the names and addresses of people who are opposed to jewish criminal activity in North America and Europe, for example, the jews who did the Columbine mass murder, the jews who did the 9-11 mass murder, the jewish homosexual Anders Behring Breivik who murdered 92 Norwegian children for Israel, etc.

THe slimy jews who own this station are obviously untrustworthy. Please don't fall for the tricks of dirty jew trash like this. Completely BOYCOTT AND BANKRUPT this little jew faggot operation, and tell everyone you know that this station is owned by jewish homosexuals.

And remember: 9-11 was an ISRAELI job, and these scum need to PAY: http://israeldid911.com

(9-11 was NOT the evil "germanic death cult" or nameless "globalists" or whatever other bullshit that jewish Alex Jones is trying to feed you. Don't EVER give the jew Alex Jones your name and address. You can rest assured that the jew Alex Jones is gathering that intelligence on behalf of the Mossad, ADL, and other criminal terrorist jew organizations. Don't EVER give one penny to Alex Jones, and above all, NEVER give personal information to his website or to the jewish fags at WWCR).

Those who don't drive aren't required to buy insurance. Those who don't wish to buy insurance may simply elect not to drive.

However, the health insurance mandate is a bit more broad. It applies to simply being alive in the United States.

Well...sorta, kinda.

However, I would respectfully submit that you are overlooking the following:

NOT everyone drives; driving is indeed optional (even though our society is based on the automobile).

To use your phrase above, people can certainly "elect not to drive".

Unfortunately, they can't "elect" not to get sick -- and people that are "simply being alive" do have accidents or become sick. HUGE difference between driving and health, one is optional, one is not, so your analogy is flawed.

Fox News second largest shareholder is a Muslim Prince, the same one who funded the NYC TERROR MOSQUE. And of course it;s headed by an Australian who only became a US citizen (not relinquishing his Aussie one) because the FCC demanded it when he bought Fox.

Who would of guessed that the WWCR was a Republican organization?

That's where the seat of Gay Power is these days.

Why hasn't Jesus or his Daddy God done something to stop it?

Republican anti-abortion activist Neal Horsley admitted to having sex with a mule Republican supporter Pastor Ted Haggard, president of the 30-million member National Association of Evangelicals, denounced gays and illegal drugs but was later exposed as a gay Crystal Meth user!

Republican Senator Larry Craig was arrested for lewd conduct in the men's restroom at the Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport Republican Congressman Mark Foley abruptly resigned from Congress after "sexually explicit" emails surfaced showing him flirting with a 16-year old boy.

Republican aide Alan David Berlin was arrested on charges that he wanted to engage in sex acts with a 15-year-old boy while dressed in a panda costume.

Republican news producer Aaron Bruns was arrested on charges of possessing child pornography.

Republican activist and former presidential campaign chairman Jeffrey Claude Bartleson was arrested on charges of sexually molesting a 5-year old boy.

Republican activist and former chairman of the Christian County Republicans Royce Fessenden pleaded guilty to two counts of first-degree child molestation and one count of second-degree statutory sodomy.

Republican parole board officer and former legislator George C. (Chris) Ortloff pleaded guilty to attempting to lure 11- and 12-year-old girls to have sex with him.

Republican legislative aide Robert R. Groezinger was arrested for possessing child pornography.

Republican legislator Robert A. McKee pleaded guilty to possessing child pornography.

Republican legislator Scott Muschany was charged with molesting a 14-year old girl.

Republican chief of staff Eric Feltner pleaded guilty to showing pornography to a 13-year old girl.

I was aware that Alex Jone's wife is Jewish but don't think Alex is. Nonetheless, It wouldn't surprise me at all if he is playing a role of some sort for the intelligence monstrosity that has tentacles that reach everywhere. It is possible that he doesn't if know who his master is and he has yet to fulfill his duty to them. They play chess while the dumbed down sheeple play checkers. In other words, they think and plan ten moves ahead while you are mired in the present.

Perhaps Jones has been given carte blanche to do as he pleases to establish his credibility with the herd. only to be used by the masters to placate the herd at some critical juncture in the future. Who knows. One thing I do know is he is not financing a 30 person staff with expenditures in the hundreds of thousands of dollars through listener donations and advertising. He is being generously financed by someone. I wonder who?

I understand that you might feel some sympathy for Jones. I was deceived by him to some extent too (although I always smelled a sleazy, coke-fueled, egomaniacal freemason vibe about the guy).

The reality is, he knows EXACTLY what time it is. His show is nothing but jewish advertisers (google alex jones jewish advertisers). All the snake-oil crap he sells was the tip-off for me: all his "weight loss" bullshit, and "tangy tangerine" garbage made in china, and the "homeopathic detox solutions for chem trails" - i mean, please. ANYONE who could possibly endorse "homeopathic detox solutions for chem trails" is a BIG FAT LYING OBESE EGOMANIACAL SACK OF SHIT, and that's exactly what Alex Jones is.

A friend of mine saw him in New York once. Jones is a chain-smoking freak, who smokes his marlboros all the way down to the butt, one after another. He is a con artist, and nothing he says should be taken at face value. The mark of a disinfo agent lying con man like jones is that he will give you 90% true info, but it's the 10% he leaves out (namely, the role of jews in the 9-11 attacks) that is the main reason he exists. Jones is a piece of criminal lying trash. ANYTHING that is promoted by the jewish homosexual child rapists who run the Disney corporation (owners of Coast to Coast AM, etc etc) is jewish garbage that belongs in trash dump.

Why would ALL these jewish advertisers, jewish satanist media companies like Disney, and jew operations like Sirius XM be promoting this obese sack of garbage Alex Jones?

The answer is obvious.

hi,

Miracles in the Holy Quran :THE SUN WILL EXTINGUISH AFTER A CERTAIN PERIOD

The light of the sun is due to a chemical process on its surface that has been taking place continuously for the past five billion years. It will come to an end at some point of time in the future when the sun will be totally extinguished leading to extinction of all life on earth. Regarding the impermanence of the sun’s existence the Qur’aan says: “And the Sun Runs its course For a period determined For it; that is The decree of (Him) The exalted in Might, The All-Knowing.” [Al-Qur’aan 36:38] 3
The Arabic word used here is mustaqarr, which means a place or time that is determined. Thus the Qur’aan says that the sun runs towards a determined place, and will do so only up to a pre-determined period of time – meaning that it will end or extinguish.

I bought a Rolex stainless steel Oyster Perpetual wrist watch at the Navy Fleet store in Hong Kong when I did my R & R.My old Mido wrist watch was more accurate than my Rolex.My old cheapo Timex wrist watches were almost as accurate. I quit wearing a wrist watch over twenty years ago. I have a pendant style wrist watch I bought for a dollar over three years ago at a Dollar Tree store. When I go shopping or working in my yard I tote my pendant wrist watch. It is still working on the same battery, kind of hard to see the time because of a bad cigarette burn spot on the dial.

Read it again, My friend, 'one is optional, one is not' is exactly my point. There is a difference. So, comparing auto insurance requirement to health insurance requirement, as you did:

Finally, in many (most?) states, you have to show proof of insurance (a

Is the flawed analogy.

Weekly Highlights and Forecasts

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
09 - 15 July 2012

Solar activity ranged from low to high levels due to activity from a complex of closely spaced regions in the southern hemisphere. These spotted groups were made up of Regions 1519 (S15, L=107, class/area Hsx/120 on 05 July), 1520 (S16, L=86, class/area Fkc/1460 on 12 July), and 1521 (S21, L=96, class/area Eki/300 on 12 July). Region 1520 grew into a large Fkc spot group with a Beta-Gamma-Delta magnetic configuration with over 1300 millionths in area by 09 July and continued to remain large and magnetically complex as it rotated across the visible disk. Region 1520 produced M1 flares at 09/2307 UTC and 10/0514 UTC, an M2/1f flare at 10/0627 UTC, and a long duration X1/2b flare at 12/1649 UTC. Associated with the X1/2b flare were Type II (1268 km/s) and Type IV radio emissions along with an 800 sfu Tenflare and a geoeffective CME with an estimated plane-of-sky speed of 1453 km/s. Region 1521 produced an M1/1f flare at 14/0458 UTC. Region 1521 continued to grow through the period into an Eki spot group with 300 millionths of area and a Beta-gamma magnetic classification.

A greater than 10 MeV proton event at geosynchronous orbit began at 09/0130 UTC, reached a maximum of 19 pfu at 09/0430 UTC and ended at 09/1445 UTC. This event was likely associated with the 08 July M6/1n flare at 08/1632 UTC from Region 1515 (S18, L=206, class/area Fhc/900 on 06 July). A second greater than 10 MeV proton event began at 12/1835 UTC, reached a maximum of 96 pfu at 12/2225 UTC, and ended at 15/0200 UTC. This event was associated with the X1/2b flare at 12/1649 UTC from Region 1520.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at moderate levels on 09 and 15 July, but reached high levels 10 through 14 July.

Geomagnetic field activity was at unsettled to minor storm levels, on 09 July, with high latitude major storm intervals due to residual CME effects likely associated with the 04 July M1 event. July 10 began with an isolated period of active levels and decreased to quiet to unsettled levels for the remainder of the day. On 11 and 12 July, activity was mostly quiet to unsettled with an isolated active period with high latitude intervals of minor to major storm levels. Quiet conditions were observed from 13 July till late on 14 July when a CME associated with the 12 July X1/2b flare arrived. At 14/1728 UTC, a shock was observed at the ACE spacecraft followed by a sudden impulse (27 nT) at the Boulder magnetometer at 14/1811 UTC. Solar wind speed at the ACE spacecraft increased from approximately 350 km/s to 630 km/s while the Bz component of the interplanetary magnetic field (IMF) went south to around -12 nT. At around 15/0600 UTC, solar wind speed was around 600 km/s while the IMF Bz went south around -16 nT and stayed steadily southward through the end of the period. The geomagnetic field responded with active to major storm levels while minor to severe storm conditions were observed at high latitudes through the end of the summary period.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
16 July - 11 August 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at low to moderate levels through 18 July when Region 1520 is due to rotate off the West limb. Very low to low conditions are expected from 19 July through 20 July. Low to moderate conditions are expected from 21 July through the end of the period as old Regions 1515 and 1520 are due to return on 21 July and 01 August respectively.

There is a slight chance for a greater than 10 MeV proton event at geosynchronous orbit until Region 1520 departs the visible disk on 18 July and again from 21 July through 11 August as old Regions 1515 and 1520 return.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at normal to moderate levels from 16 - 22 July, 24 - 27 July, and 03 - 11 August. High levels are expected on 23 July and again on 28 July - 02 August due to recurrent coronal hole effects.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to begin the period with minor to major storm periods due to the continued influence of the 12 July CME. Conditions will gradually return to quiet to active levels by the end of the day on 16 July. Mostly quiet to unsettled conditions are expected from17 - 21 July. On 22 - 23 July a coronal hole high speed stream is expected to become geoeffective causing mostly unsettled conditions. Quiet to unsettled conditions will prevail from 24 - 26 July. On 27 July, a co-rotating interaction region followed by a recurrent coronal hole high speed stream is expected to become geoeffective. Active to minor storm conditions are expected on 27 July while unsettled to active conditions are expected on 28 - 29 July. Conditions are expected to return to quiet to unsettled levels on 30 July through the end of the forecast period.

It seems clear that we are approaching this issue from two different perspectives.

My main point was that we already, within the context of American life, have to buy commercial products as dictated by law, car insurance in my example. You on the other hand, seem to be hung up on "voluntary" and think that driving is voluntary, further implying that if some curmudgeon who was healthy enough to drive and had money enough to buy a car, would refuse to drive just because he would have to buy car insurance.

I suppose that in very, very rare cases you might find an example of that. However, I still contend your analogy is flawed because 99% of the people in this country DO drive and consider driving virtually mandatory, not voluntary, as our entire society is based on the mobility of the automobile. The exception would be that someone is too infirm or too poor to drive/own a car. I contend it is a very rare case where someone otherwise qualified, would refuse to drive because they were "forced" to buy insurance. Thus your "driving is voluntary" analogy is a major stretch and a red herring.

Finally, let me bring another example to your attention of a circumstance where people are "forced" to buy a commercial product. If you get a mortgage to buy a home, the mortgage company "forces" you to buy fire insurance, a commercial product.

Before you say anything, let me anticipate your response as you will probably say buying a house is voluntary and that someone would choose to rent for the rest of their lives because they did not want to be "forced" to have to get fire insurance. Again, very slightly possible but also extremely rare.

So, to summarize my point, in 99% of the cases, "forcing" someone to buy health insurance is nothing new in this country nor not much different than -most- people having to get car or fire insurance.

As I can't state it any more simply, please feel free to have have the last word.

I wish you fucking losers would pack up your shitty little flea circus and move on to another town. As it is you're only reinforcing the idea that Western culture values thuggish illiteracy because it makes you all nice predictable consumer-units, shilling in time with the TV.

I could quote endless examples showing the work of competent writers and thinkers, but what's the point? Any such examples would be ignored for their value as a comparison between their works and yours. I'm not quite sure why you value illiteracy, perhaps dumbing everything down makes your stupid religion more palatable?

Whatever the cause, it is clear none of you could reason your way out of a wet paper-bag, and for that you should be punished. Reality will get around to bitch-slapping you lightweight turds thoroughly but it takes a while for it to build up a head of steam, so to speak.
Personally, I don't think time is quite fast enough in this regard. I mean, sure it will be satisfying to watch as life eventually snuffs all the stupid racists one by one, without mercy. But it just can't happen soon enough. In the meantime, we'll have to put up with more incompetent spew as you worthless fuckers heterodyne each-other and saturate the available bandwidth with your moronic braying and posturing.

No, in the short-term what you all need are big adult-sized pacifiers that you can suck-on, and a minder to make sure you don't stray from your mental rails. Being adults, the pacifiers will have to supply a measured dose of smack or something, just to keep your interest, but I don't really see that as a problem. It's certainly not as much of a problem as the one presented by your illiteracy. And to think that some of you are attached to military or quasi-military forces. Nothing goes together quite as well as great big weapons of mass destruction and large amounts of stupidity.

I'm sure you'll agree, if you think about it.

Just what I thought - a COINTELPRO wannabee lamely attempting to establish his bona fides. Good grief talk about amateur hour! You make Hal Turner look competent. Maybe If you bend over far enough your handlers will patch you through to Sean Hannity's radio show. Take your lame act elsewhere flunkie. You are an incompetent loser but even

No, you are NOT Ojibwa. You are just a stupid, brain-washed, self-hating white boy dressing up in different "ethnic" halloween costumes. You should stop DELUDING yourself and accept what you are, and stop trying to be things that you are not. You are just making an ASS out of yourself.

Seth, the bottom line is that God threw your people out of Israel 2000 years ago for murdering the Lord Jesus Christ. For the past 2000 years, God has seen fit to have you wander the lands of White Christendom in an inferior position to the White Christians who rule you. Your people look on at the superior civilizations that White Christians have created, at the scientific advances made by your White Christian rulers, at the artistic and musical advances made by White Christians, and it ends the myth of you as being some kind of "chosen people". The result is your seething envy of everything that White Christians have created, and your feverish desire to destroy it. That's why jews like you dedicate yourselves to undermining White civilizations in any way that you can. That's why inbred jewish homosexuals like the kind who run the radio station WWCR have dedicated their lives and careers to attempting to deceive White Christians.

Your race of jews was rejected by God when he threw you out of Israel. You should get down on your knees and beg the Lord Jesus Christ to forgive you and your jewish people for your horrible acts of mass-murder, for your spreading of pornography and hate, for your smuggling of brain-damaging neurotoxic drugs like "ecstasy", and for all of your other satanic activities. The envy and hate that you and your people show for White Christians is coming to an end Seth. As your people become more and more inbred, and lose any talent or capabilities that you might have once possessed, your pathetic tricks, like the one pulled by the jews who run WWCR, just become more and more transparent, and more and more people wake up to what a hateful and envious group of people you jews actually are.

I will pray for ALL jewish people that the will of the Lord Jesus Christ will be done unto you, and to your ancestors.

You do realize what most likely happened, don't you?

The lithium cell in the OP's computer is dead, he had a power failure (or just turned the computer off) and its clock defaulted to an earlier date.

Thought of that; but I'm assuming the OP did not ignore the alert boxes that Windows throws at you every time you boot up in that situation.

In any case; I read the thread because I also once owned an SR-66 ... would help to know what the question is.

No, you won't see the original message except at google, unless some site has 14 year retention time.

Google is back to allowing replies to old posts. When they brought in one upgrade they accidentally allowed this (likely thinking of their own groups, rather than Usenet) and complaints caused them to fix things. FOr a short time, it became a sport of idiots to reply to old posts, including some quite famous. So they fixed it so you couldn't reply to messages older than 30 days.

The bug is now back, likely because they've introduced yet another interface, and again have forgotten.

It's happening, replies to old messages and they are all coming from google.

What never makes sense is why someone is looking that far back. It makes sense to do searches at google for things that interest you, but then why bother replying? The poster who replied completely overlooked the fact that Rick 999 (who hasnt' been here in a long time) did get a couple of replies back in 1998, likely enough.

Chances are good that if someone is replying to an old message it is because of google. Other verifying points are that you don't remember the original message.

Actually, he would file an SR-22, not buy insurance, and drive anyway. All specified by law.

Far more than you think. No company I ever worked for carried insurance on its vehicles. The company was 'self insuring' and filed the appropriate forms with the State.

No employer I ever worked for carried car insurance. They all filed SR-22 and became self insuring as well. Again, all legal.

My step daughter chooses not to drive, specifically because of the absurd cost of insurance where she lives. So she owns no car, takes public transportation, and walks a lot. So do most of the people in her building. Evidenced by the fact that well over half the the parking spaces in the building are rented to suburbanites who work in the neighborhood, and there is no street parking.

When I lived in the city, I was a rarity in my neighborhood, because I had not one, but two vehicles in the city. Most of my neighbors did not drive.

Living in the suburbs, now, I have two neighbors with no vehicles at all, save for a pair of bicycles, and do not drive, because of the high cost of insurance.

My own father had his insurance cancelled due to a high number of accidents, and elected to not drive rather than pay the extreme cost of mandated insurance.

So, it happens, and it's not nearly as rare as you think. Especially in urban areas.

> Finally, let me bring another example to your attention of a > circumstance where people are "forced" to buy a commercial product. If Actually, they don't.

It was purely optional when I bought my home. So was flood insurance. But that case doesn't apply to this analogy, because the entity pressuring (or not) the purchase of insurance, is a private company. NOT the government. And the purchase is not required.

The only insurance I purchased when I got my mortgage was title insurance, and even THAT is optional. And has since been dropped.

My homeowner's policy was purchased some years after I bought the place.

In fact, such a requirement where I am is illegal. Your mileage may vary. But then, that's a state's rights decision. Not a federal mandate.

Marxism and its precursor, socialism, are the philosophies of choice for those who are obsessed with self-aggrandizement and the need to attain control over their fellow man. In order to achieve this end, a nebulous antagonist must be created, followed by an equally ill-defined savior, also fabricated out of whole cloth. Thus Marxism/socialism is a doctrine built on a foundation of lies and deception. Barack Obama, thoroughly steeped in these tenets, is therefore running a campaign for re-election which must be based on demagoguery, falsehoods, and innuendo.

Having attended college in the early to mid-1960s and since then living in the Washington, D.C. region, I have been often exposed to many who espoused not only the virtue of Marxist/socialist theory, but a loathing for the United States and its supposed colonialist, homophobic, avaricious, and racist past. However, I was told that the real enemy of the people were those twin antagonists: capitalism and those evil entities called corporations.

Capitalism, as it is essentially an overarching economic structure and not something tangible, can thus be easily demagogued and deceitfully characterized by greed and unfair allocations of wealth and resources. Corporations, likewise, can be, and are, characterized as impersonal leviathans out to trample the average hardworking citizens, all for the sake of producing an immoral profit. The American citizens could, therefore, never expect an equitable society as long as these corrupt entities were allowed to exist.

But what is capitalism? By its nature, capitalism does celebrate the success of the individual, not the collective. Individuals, separately or together, driven by the motive of self-enrichment, produce goods and services desired by others. In the process, jobs and wealth are created, thus benefiting society as a whole. Corporations are a mere legal creation made up of people who are stockholders, officers, and employees -- all of whom pay taxes to maintain a government that cannot create wealth.

What, then, I asked these avid proponents of Marxism/socialism, is the solution for these sins of America's past and the path to the creation of a more just and stable society? The answer inevitably was ever-larger and more intrusive government as the savior that would guarantee fairness.

Having emigrated to the United States from a continent that had nearly destroyed itself, and with firsthand knowledge of surviving a war that was fomented by all-powerful governments, I was acutely aware of the danger posed by this philosophical bent. After all, it wasn't a nebulous entity called government that drove Europe off the cliff; it was those who had used government to further their megalomaniacal ambitions.

Whenever I questioned the true believers on the left and pointed out the utter fallacy of their belief system and what the true end-game was -- based not on theory, but on real-life experience -- I was greeted with a chorus of vitriol and name-calling combined with no plausible argument for their implausible positions.

While unintended, the Wizard of Oz books by L. Frank Baum are an allegory for how the left portrays government. Government has been depicted, as was the Wizard, as being able to grant virtually any wish and make life so much better for all. But when the curtain was drawn back, the Wizard of Oz was no more than a charlatan manipulating the emotions and desires of others. So too with government: when the curtain is drawn back, there are only human beings, with all their foibles and failings, at the controls. Some, such as Barack Obama and many of his fellow travelers, are there in fulfillment of a narcissistic mindset and a concurrent lust for power.

Yet the concept of an impersonal entity capable of making life equitable is an easy sell, as the human race is always, by its nature, looking for the least arduous path of survival and prosperity. Nonetheless, throughout history there has never been a centralized government that has succeeded in creating or maintaining anything approaching a fair and equitable society. There never will be an idyllic society for the very same reasons why so many are willing to believe that government can do the impossible.

History has repeatedly documented the abject failure of statist governments, and in every case, it was because the leaders of those nations were bent on either conquest or aggregating dictatorial power over the people, as they destroyed the engine of wealth-creation: capitalism. Since the mid-19th century and the advent of Marxism/ socialism, nearly 200 million people have died in wars and their aftermath, as these philosophies have allowed their potentates to mesmerize and instill false hope in the people, thus allowing autocrats to achieve unbridled power. www.GlobalMuseumOnCommunism.org

In the United States today, there are a president and a political party trumpeting these same platitudes and claims of government omniscience. They know full well that what they are telling the citizenry is an outright lie and impossibility, yet their objective is no different from that of many of the despots of the 20th century: absolute control of not only the purse-strings of government, but also the day-to-day activity of all Americans.

Some in the media, including many conservative pundits, refuse to attribute ulterior motives to America's first black president, claiming instead that he is just naïve and inexperienced. It is not naïveté and ignorance that cause Barack Obama to proclaim to the job- and wealth-creators of America, "If you've got a business, you didn't build that. Somebody else made that happen.

www.theblaze.com/stories/president-obama-if-youve-got-a-business-you-didnt-build-that-somebody-else-made-that-happen/
That somebody else: government. Only someone steeped in Marxist/ socialist philosophy would make such a statement.

Further, Obama's manner of governance betrays his true motives. Recently Barack Obama has chosen, on a political whim, to not enforce certain laws such as immigration, voting rights, and welfare reform statutes. He continues to hypocritically claim that the mandate in ObamaCare is not a tax, as all the lies told to facilitate passage in 2010 have now come to light, including the cost -- the estimate of which, once fully implemented, has now tripled -- and the number of Americans who will lose their present coverage.
www.foxnews.com/politics/2012/03/14/cbo-health-law-estimate-shows-much-higher-spending-beyond-first-10-years/

Obama has instructed the EPA to formulate regulations counter to the laws on the books or the will of Congress and the people. He has charged the NLRB with issuing pro-union regulations specifically not agreed to by Congress and not in effect per current law. As a political tactic to curtail gun rights in the U.S., his Justice Department was actively engaged in the arming of Mexican drug cartels, resulting in the deaths of hundreds of Mexican citizens and two American agents. He has unilaterally discarded 230 years of tradition and the constitutional provision of the freedom of religion by his health care mandates. He has made numerous unconstitutional recess appointments. And he has deliberately set out to permanently splinter American society through fomenting class, race, and religious animosity.

The current scorched earth campaign against Mitt Romney, full of lies and innuendos, is eerily similar to the ruthless tactics espoused by Saul Alinsky. This strategy was also used in the 2008 primary campaign against Hillary Clinton, as well as in the general election. Barack Obama is incapable of running an ethical and honorable election, as this same crass methodology has been used in all his campaigns for public office.

When all this is combined with his unconstitutional and unethical actions in office and his radical election tactics, it is clear that Obama is the most dangerous man to ever hold high public office in the history of the nation. He is no different from the egomaniacs who ran roughshod over the 20th century. For the American people, there is no more important task between now and November 6, 2012 than making certain that Barack Obama is relegated, fittingly in Leon Trotsky's words, to "the dustbin of history."

Obama and the Big Non-Break-Up
by Richard Butrick

When Arthur Koestler broke from the Communist Party after the Hitler-Stalin pact, he broke big time.
www.opendemocracy.net/od-russia/masha-karp/arthur-koestler-20th-century-man
He had been a card-carrying member of the American Communist party in the thirties for all the reasons why young, idealistic, reflective young minds search for something better than the huge economic inequalities perceived in capitalist societies. But Koestler increasingly became unable to delude himself about the accretive dictatorial dimension inherent in egalitarian ideologies. The increasing power and privilege of the elite inner circle of party members who dispensed their version of social justice became increasingly odious to him.

When the two lines intersected, he broke. The result was Darkness at Noon and The God that Failed. The one is a novel, the other a collection of essays by those who made the break. The underlying theme is the innate tendency of egalitarian ideologies to become oppressive, totalitarian regimes with brutal enforcement agencies to effect the social justice vision of a ruling class elite.

The same is true in our day of those who broke with their early embrace of egalitarian ideologies. Whatever the flavor -- Trotskyite, Castroite, or Maoist -- the same innate tendency to result in a brutal regime of elite social justice engineers drove the youthful (and not quite so youthful) believers to make the break. And to make it publicly.

Christopher Hitchens never quite made the break in dramatic ideological terms so much as in policy terms -- defending the Iraq war. But in his Why Orwell Matters, he endorses Orwell's position of the innate tendency of egalitarian ideologies to become fascist over-controlling regimes. Hitchens incurred the wrath of his former Trotskyite buddies, and his war with them, and in particular Cockburn, was very public.
www.columbia.edu/~lnp3/mydocs/american_left/radicalfeud.htm
The point remains: from Hitchens to Podhoretz to Horowitz, their disavowal -- to whatever degree -- is public and unabashed.
www.leaderu.com/ftissues/ft9708/reviews/ponnuru.html

President Obama has never publicly disavowed the ideology of his communist mentor, Frank Marshall Davis. Credit the research of Dr. Paul Kengor's new book, The Communist - Frank Marshall Davis: The Untold Story of Barack Obama's Mentor, for making it clear that Obama never had "the break-up" characteristic of those who jettison their youthful infatuation with egalitarian ideologies.
http://dailycaller.com/2012/07/15/obamas-influential-communist-mentor/

At one point in his book, Kengor describes his interview with John Drew, who knew Obama well while attending Occidental College. Kengor quotes Drew as saying, "Obama was already an ardent Marxist when I met him in the fall of 1980." Kengor further writes:

"If Obama was on the Marxist-Leninist left, we have no accounting, from Obama or anyone, of a switch. Quite the contrary, in Obama's memoirs, we hear about him attending socialist conferences and 'hanging out' with Marxist professors, but never any repudiation of those conferences, professors, or even a tiny, passing comment suggesting these were fanciful musings from a politically misguided youth."

As "Da Tagliare" (nom de guerre?) points out in his review of Kengor's book in Godfather Politics (7/18), the economic policies of President Obama are strikingly similar to those of his mentor Davis.
http://godfatherpolitics.com/6202/obamas-economic-policies-same-as-those-of-his-communist-mentor/Davis believed that that the way to stimulate the economy was for the federal government to collect taxes and then redistribute that money for health insurance, education, low-cost housing, and increased Social Security benefits. Davis believed that it was foolhardy to rely on businesses, private or large, or even Wall Street to stimulate the economy but to do it through taxation. And as Da Tagliare facetiously asks, "Sound familiar?"

hi,

Miracles in the Holy Quran :THE EXPANDING UNIVERSE

In 1925, an American astronomer by the name of Edwin Hubble, provided observational evidence that all galaxies are receding from one another, which implies that the universe is expanding. The expansion of the universe is now an established scientific fact. This is what Al-Qur'aan says regarding the nature of the universe: "With the power and skill Did We construct The Firmament: For it is We Who create The vastness of Space." [Al-Qur'aan 51:47]
The Arabic word mûsi'ûn is correctly translated as 'expanding it', and it refers to the creation of the expanding vastness of the universe. Stephen Hawking, in his book, 'A Brief History of Time', says, "The discovery that the universe is expanding was one of the great intellectual revolutions of the 20th century."
The Qur'aan mentioned the expansion of the universe, before man even learnt to build a telescope! Some may say that the presence of astronomical facts in the Qur'aan is not surprising since the Arabs were advanced in the field of astronomy. They are correct in acknowledging the advancement of the Arabs in the field of astronomy. However they fail to realize that the Qur'aan was revealed centuries before the Arabs excelled in astronomy. Moreover many of the scientific facts mentioned above regarding astronomy, such as the origin of the universe with a Big Bang, were not known to the Arabs even at the peak of their scientific advancement. The scientific facts mentioned in the Qur'aan are therefore not due to the Arabs' advancement in astronomy. Indeed, the reverse is true. The Arabs advanced in astronomy, because astronomy occupies a place in the Qur'aan.

I don't bash 'em neither - just wish they'd go back home.

And the A-OK ones - that's the ones that comes down for vacation and spends a fortune at the resorts, and another fortune at the outlet malls.

And then spends yet another fortune at Stuckey's.

On their way back home.

Up north.

Election 2012 is shaping up to be the most clearly defined clash of political ideologies since FDR's New Deal. The heart of the matter is the long-overdue awakening of a slumbering majority of constitutional traditionalists. This awakening has been triggered by a surge of authoritarian socialism, or more accurately, cultural Marxism advocated by a radical Obama administration to fashion a "fundamentally transformed" America.

Given Marxism's deadly history,

www.GlobalMuseumOnCommunism.org
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/The_Black_Book_of_Communism

it's stunning to realize that an increasingly aggressive constituency for such a dismally failed experiment exists, albeit traveling lightly concealed in its various postmodernist disguises.

America has been duped by a planned, societal virus that came to America in 1933 during World War II. The terms ‘Cultural Marxism’ and ‘critical theory’ were concepts developed by a group of German intellectuals in 1923 in Germany. They founded the Institute of Social Research at Frankfurt University, which was modeled after the Marx-Engels Institute in Moscow, and later became known as the Frankfurt School. In 1933, when the Nazis came to power in Germany, the members of the Frankfurt School fled to the United States. They migrated to major U.S. universities.

To know Marx is to know the contemporary left [ObaMa0] as well. Both rest on duplicity, hypocrisy, and nihilism.

Ostensibly, Marx was filled with compassion for the proletariat and dedicated himself to its liberation from bourgeois exploitation. Tellingly, however, Marx's relationship with the proletariat was sterile and distant: "[Marx] was totally and incorrigibly deskbound ... and so far as we know [he] never set foot in a mill, factory, mine or other industrial workplace in the whole of his life".

It's argued here that Marx's obsession with fomenting revolution can be seen not as a matter of compassion for the proletariat, but as a self-aggrandizing nihilism. Marx was fixated on revolution and the power he might inherit from it. The proletariat was a nascent force which could be marshaled to avenge Marx's personal grievances against a "world" in which he was a misfit.

Over his entire life, Marx proved incapable of earning a living on his own. Marx's unwillingness to work forced his wife and six children to live in penury despite Engels' limited support. Three of those children died in early childhood, and two others committed suicide as young adults. The once-beautiful and aristocratic Jenny, Marx's wife, eventually died a haggard and broken woman.

Marx even rejected his mother when she, at last, refused to send him more money. He did not trouble himself to attend his father's funeral and shunned his adult siblings who had no material wealth to give him. Marx likewise refused to acknowledge paternity of a son born to him by his unpaid servant-housemaid. Marx persuaded his long-suffering enabler Engels to claim paternity. Such was Engels' misplaced commitment to free Marx to finish Capital -- which a procrastinating Marx never did. That burden also fell to Engels after Marx's death.

Authoritarian collectivism (née Marxism) endures as much as a secular religious faith as it does as a dismally failed socio-economic system. "Consider the millions of people who were killed by Stalin and Mao: although these tyrants paid lip service to rationality, communism was little more than a political religion". The "church" of this gnostic faith thrives embedded in our schools, universities, news media, and the communications and entertainment industries, which sermonize and proselytize relentlessly to mostly captive audiences.

For the past fifty years, collectivist forces ("missionaries") have been at work in America under the rubric of Critical Theory. America has been subversively conditioned into becoming another USSR lacking only a slick Svengali to charm the masses into acceptance. We now have an Obama presidency which has begun to smell of imperialism, if not nascent dictatorship.

It is imperative that the 2012 election be the start of a committed return to rationalism and the constitutional guarantees of individual liberty on which America was founded. Our constitutional protections from bullying government now are under assault. Tyranny waits in the wings.

The British philosopher Roger Scruton has coined a term to describe this attitude: oikophobia. Xenophobia is fear of the alien; oikophobia is fear of the familiar: "the disposition, in any conflict, to side with 'them' against 'us', and the felt need to denigrate the customs, culture and institutions that are identifiably 'ours.' " What a perfect description of the pro-mosque left.

Scruton was writing in 2004, and his focus was on Britain and Europe, not America. But his warning about the danger of oikophobes--whom he amusingly dubs "oiks"--is very pertinent on this side of the Atlantic today, and it illuminates how what are sometimes dismissed as mere matters of "culture" tie in with economic and social policy:

"The oik repudiates national loyalties and defines his goals and ideals against the nation, promoting transnational institutions over national governments, accepting and endorsing laws that are imposed on us from on high by the EU or the UN, though without troubling to consider Terence's question, and defining his political vision in terms of universal values that have been purified of all reference to the particular attachments of a real historical community."

"The oik is, in his own eyes, a defender of enlightened universalism against local chauvinism. And it is the rise of the oik that has led to the growing crisis of legitimacy in the nation states of Europe. For we are seeing a massive expansion of the legislative burden on the people of Europe, and a relentless assault on the only loyalties that would enable them voluntarily to bear it. The explosive effect of this has already been felt in Holland and France. It will be felt soon everywhere, and the result may not be what the oiks expect."

There is one important difference between the American oik and his European counterpart. American patriotism is not a blood-and-soil nationalism but an allegiance to a country based in an idea of enlightened universalism. Thus our oiks masquerade as--and may even believe themselves to be--superpatriots, more loyal to American principles than the vast majority of Americans, whom they denounce as "un-American" for feeling an attachment to their actual country as opposed to a collection of abstractions.

Yet the oiks' vision of themselves as an intellectual aristocracy violates the first American principle ever articulated: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal . . ."

This cannot be reconciled with the elitist notion that most men are economically insecure bitter clinging intolerant bigots who need to be governed by an educated elite. Marxism Lite is not only false; it is, according to the American creed, self-evidently false. That is why the liberal elite finds Americans revolting.

A New America www.NewAmericaMovie.com is a documentary film that outlines the history of the Progressive movement in America over the last century. It analyzes how Progressive ideology has transformed public policy, the structures of government, and its potential impact on the country’s future. An example of historical analysis contained in the film would be the argument that the Progressive ideals employed
by FDR’s New Deal were the cause of the Great Depression, not the solution to it.

Through interviews with Constitutional scholars, authors, historians, public policymakers, and others, it reviews the original intent of
the Founders, why it is important and lays out how Progressivism is in conflict with that original intent.

Anyone who is NOT a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/

Anyone who refutes a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/
Communist is a moron according to Useful Liberal JackAss Idiots.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010
complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it.
Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as
"text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews
http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan
"Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show."
This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo.
Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even

actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plain truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

"It is obvious what the fraudulent issue of fascism versus communism accomplishes: it sets up, as opposites, two variants of the same political system; it eliminates the possibility of considering capitalism; it switches the choice of “Freedom or dictatorship?” into “Which kind of dictatorship?”—thus establishing dictatorship as an inevitable fact and offering only a choice of rulers. The choice—according to the proponents of that fraud—is: a dictatorship of the rich (fascism) or a dictatorship of the poor (communism)."

"That fraud collapsed in the 1940's, in the aftermath of World War II. It is too obvious, too easily demonstrable that fascism and communism are not two opposites, but two rival gangs fighting over the same territory—that both are variants of statism, based on the collectivist principle that man is the rightless slave of the state—that both are socialistic, in theory, in practice, and in the explicit statements of their leaders—that under both systems, the poor are enslaved and the rich are expropriated in favor of a ruling clique—that fascism is not the product of the political "right," but of the "left"—that the basic issue is not "rich versus poor," but man versus the state, or: individual rights versus totalitarian government—which means: capitalism versus socialism."

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

Dr. Ludwig von Mises - 1952 - http://mises.org/books/planningforfreedom_mises.pdf

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!”

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term “liberalism” (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning “pertaining to a free man”) first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

These people saw in Fascism a protection against the demands of farmers and other workers... Both regimes at first upheld the rights of private property... They subjected the working classes to a rigorous discipline... As soon as they were firmly established, the dictators began to limit profit, impose capital levies, and regulate business in great detail...

THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent. Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... This is because within a year or so after a Fascist government takes power, vigorous opponents of the regime have either left the country, been killed or jailed...

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

When you hear the Liberal Fascist JackAss propaganda that THEY are the true patriots then you know the time is near. Look for it from the socialist Labor Unions such as the SEIU!
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

Billionaire George Soros is a primary funder and key proponent of the global organization that promotes the military doctrine used by the Obama administration to justify the recent airstrikes targeting the regime of Moammar Gadhafi in Libya.

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

MURPHYï¿½S LAW May be part of the inherent structure of reality, and it impacts radio stations as much as it does anything. Murphy struck N2IRJ this week, causing a shorted power supply transistor, so the phone patch was off the air ï¿½ but the over-the-air participation was high, especially for a Summer session, and the Liberty Net discussions continued at a high level.

Here are just a few of the topics introduced for discussion and debate during this weekï¿½s session of the net:

ï¿½ The oligarchs and their pet legislators are trying hard to push ratification of a treaty that would ban private ownership of firearms, in an effort to nullify the Second Amendment. Remember, these folks are the same people who have spent multiple millions to arm Mexican drug cartels and Israeli murder squads, so theyï¿½re not at all against violence. What they are against is your ability to defend yourself from tyranny. (16 minutes)

ï¿½ Several thinkers have come out with innovative ideas to liberate us from legislative tyranny: jury nullification, the citizenï¿½s veto, and the right of individuals to opt out of the regimeï¿½s ï¿½programsï¿½ and pretended laws. (39 minutes)

ï¿½ One of the largest ï¿½billsï¿½ we have to pay is a fraudulent one: the loss in purchasing power of our money because of the banking systemï¿½s continual creation of more and more money, thus making each dollar worth less every day. Time to put a stop to it. (52 minutes)

ï¿½ How many Americans know that the Constitution-gutting legislation that was passed in the panic immediately after 9-11 was written long before that date? Watch for a similar false flag attack to stampede the rubes into supporting more wars, more gun control, and more regime surveillance of our private lives. (1 hour 21 minutes)

ï¿½ One result of the Third Worldization of America is the rise of non-White gangs, which now virtually rule over large parts of what used to be our cities. There are believed to be more than 100,000 gang members in Chicago alone. (1 hour 26 minutes)

ï¿½ Hereï¿½s an interesting question: Has any central banker, anytime or anywhere, ever refused to ï¿½monetizeï¿½ a politicianï¿½s debt? (1 hour 32 minutes)

ï¿½ When someone has incriminating information about powerful regime figures, like ï¿½DC Madamï¿½ Deborah Jeane Palfrey did about John McCain and Dick Cheney, one needs to be willing to publish it without delay. Palfrey made the mistake of delaying publication long enough for someone to ï¿½suicideï¿½ her just days after she declared she would never kill herself and had further revelations to make. (2 hours 5 minutes)

ï¿½ Canada is having some trouble with melting of its new plastic composite currency on hot days. Hereï¿½s a tip for our friends up north: They should just make their bills out of the same material that was used to manufacture the hijackerï¿½s passport that was found amid the debris after the 9-11 attack on the World Trade Center ï¿½ it somehow survived a steel-beam-melting fire perfectly intact. (2 hours 24 minutes)

ï¿½ The Washington regime tells us that Muslims ï¿½hate us for our freedom.ï¿½ But now thereï¿½s no need to hate us any more ï¿½ the ï¿½Patriot Actï¿½ and other laws have effectively eliminated that freedom. Problem solved! (2 hours 27 minutes)

Thanks to Marty, N2IRJ, youï¿½re able to listen to these Liberty Net recordings at home, at work, in your car, or while hiking or jogging with your portable mp3 player. And remember the live feeds during Net times, right here at http://3950.net/live/ and at N2SAGï¿½s site, that let you hear the Liberty Net via multiple receivers ï¿½ and chat too.

Check out, and check in to, amateur radioï¿½s most exciting net every Saturday night ï¿½ usually somewhere above 3950 kHz SSB (we have to be flexible to evade jammers and intruders), starting at 10PM Eastern Time.

Kudos and thanks go to Vic, W1WCR, for his decades of hard work for free speech and amateur radio!

Huh? Hawaii refuses?

Where have you been? Hawaii has given it out numerous times, most recently for those two kooktards in Arizona, some state official (Attorney General?) and krazy Sheriff Joe.

You sound like a good Republican if not an actual birther kooktard so please consider the following...

1) The Wall Street Journal is highly conservative.

2) The Wall Street Journal is strongly Republican

3) The Wall Street Journal is no particular fan of Obama.

4) The Wall Street Journal has a fleet of investigative reporters.

Even with all of the above facts, the Wall Street Journal says Obama IS an American citizen, NOT born in Kenya.

You obviously are privy to some "secret information" that the whole fleet of WSJ investigative reporters couldn't find.

Therefore, it's your civic duty to contact the Journal immediately with your hot news scoop that their investigative reporters missed.

Please send it to: newseditors@wsj.com.

Sanity should trump insanity, but in your case, sanity is a "foreign"

Would you do us all a favor and explain how Obama's mom could give birth in Africa, jump on a flight to Hawaii and place two birth announcements in Hawaiian newspapers?

http://the.honoluluadvertiser.com/article/2009/Jul/28/ln/hawaii907280345.html

"Birthers wave off those birth announcements, saying that Obama family members 48 years ago could have phoned in false information to both newspapers. Such vital statistics, however, were not sent to the newspapers by the general public but by the Health Department, which received the information directly from hospitals, Okubo said."

Kenya was still a British Colony, or Protectorate, whatever they call it, in 1961 when the USURPER was born in the Coast Provencial Hospital in Mombasa. So, it does make sense that that his birth certificate is in the British National Archives in England. Perhaps Hitlery Klintoon jumped over to England to get the BNA to keep it sealed. Wherever that B..ch goes, she is always up to no good.

In the old neighborhood we would get a empty Sony TV box, glue cement blocks or bricks in it, reseal it and sell it on the street for $100.00 with the story that it was a $600.00 Sony TV that fell off a FedEx truck. Anyone that bought it without opening it was labeled a “Mark” A Bernie Madoff client, a Schmuck.

The ones that wanted to see what’s in the box before they bought it, today would be labeled a “Birther”

First, they have found definitive proof that the birth certificate posted on the White House website is a forgery. Second, they discovered that the state of Hawaii will issue a birth certificate to anyone, no matter what age they are when they make the request and no matter where they were born, if they can provide evidence that their parents were United States citizens at the time of their birth and their parents had resided in Hawaii long enough to pay taxes. The proof they require is a proof of residency and a copy of a Hawaii tax return. Of course neither of these documents prove the parents’ citizenship and both are easily forged.

Under Hawaii Revised Statute §338-17.8, a person only has to be an established resident of Hawaii, not necessarily a U.S. citizen, and pay taxes there for one year to be able to register an out-of-state or foreign-born person with an official Hawaii birth certificate.

This is a copy of the birth certificate downloaded directly from the White House.
http://txantimedia.files.wordpress.com/2012/07/birth-certificate-long-form.pdf

The investigators were able to find the person who signed the birth certificate posted on the web, the 95-year-old Ms. Verna K.L. Lee. They questioned her about numbers on the birth certificate that they did not understand. They did not show her the birth certificate.

If you look at the birth certificate, you will notice some numbers handwritten in pencil on the right side of the document, a 2, two 9′s and a 1. Ms. Lee explained that those numbers were written in at the place of issuance and double checked by her staff before they were recorded. A 1 means Caucasian. You will notice that there is a 1 in the field 14, Race of Mother. Two fields contain the number 9; 9, Race of Father and 12b Kind of Business or Industry. Race of the Father is “African”. Kind of Business or Industry is “University”. A handwritten number 9 means that the field was left blank. This is proof positive that the document posted on the White House website is a forgery. Someone added “African” and “University” to an existing document that had nothing in those fields.

Are you a “BIRTHER” or a “MARK”. Do you believe Obama was born in Kapi’olani hospital? If you do I have a bridge I would like to sell you. It goes from Brooklyn to Manhattan, ready for a toll booth to be installed.

A “Mark” BELIEVED BILL CLINTON WHEN HE SAID: “I DID NOT HAVE SEXUAL RELATIONS WITH THAT WOMAN” Then they found the stained dress. He lied and they became a “Birther”.

A “Mark” BELIEVED JOHN EDWARDS WHEN HE SAID: “THAT’S NOT MY BABY” Then the Enquirer exposed him. He lied and they became a “Birther”.

A “Mark” BELIEVED WILLIAM “FREEZER” JEFFERSON WHEN HE SAID: “I DON’T KNOW HOW THAT CASH GOT IN MY FREEZER” Then they threw him in the slammer and they knew he lied and they became a “Birther”.

A “Mark” BELIEVED LINDA LINGEL WHEN SHE SAID: "So I had my health director, who is a physician by background, go personally view the birth certificate in the birth records of the Department of Health, and we issued a news release at that time saying that the president was, in fact, born at Kapi'olani Hospital in Honolulu, Hawaii. And that's just a fact and yet people continue to call up and e-mail and want to make it an issue and I think it's again a horrible distraction for the country by those people who continue this."
Then they learned she lied, Fukino's statement never identified Kapiolani as Obama's birthplace and they became a “Birther”.

Fukino said, "[I have]...personally seen and verified that the Hawai‘i State Department of Health has Sen. Obama’s original birth certificate on record...,"

Beyond the lie, if Lingle disclosed Obama's birth hospital without his permission, she has committed a misdemeanor. If Obama gave permission for this public disclosure, then Hawaii no longer has a basis for maintaining the privacy of Obama's birth records.

Welcome to the new members of the growing army of “BIRTHERS”

Chris Mathews, Rush Limbaugh, Hawaii Governor Abercrombie Senator Will Espero and Hawaii Legislators; Rida Cabanilla, Jerry Chang, Joey Manahan, John Mizuno and Calvin Say to name a few.

Proud to be a “Birther”

Your response defies reason and logic.

The WSJ IS conservative, Republican, no fan of Obama and does have a fleet of investigative reporters. Had they indeed found out Obama was born in Kenya, it is unlikely that they would turn down the news scoop of the year.

As to your "money" comment, the "party of money" is the Republicans, thanks to the Supreme Court and their criminal 'Citizens United' ruling. The money clearly resides with the Republicans, starting with Big Business, the Koch brothers and Sheldon Adelson -- all Republicans who would dearly love to have something to use against Obama.

I don't think so. They're System boys, through and through. (A System boy thinks that any revolution against the existing System is inherently wrong.)

I think the only time they'd admit that a US election was fraudulent was if their constituency overwhelmingly thought so, and even then it would be a reluctant and nuanced admission, something along the lines of "We have a good System, it just needs some reform."

Being owned by the oligarch Rupert Murdoch, who is about as "conservative" as Twizzlers are health food, they have a very narrow range of positions they can take.

> As to your "money" comment, the "party of money" is the Republicans,

The party of money is the only party. The "Democrats" and "Republicans" charade is to amuse the rubes and convince them that they have a choice, and keep them going to the voting booths instead of the ammunition stores.

At the higher levels of the System, I admit that there are some minor disagreements on how to milk and cozen the suckers between, say, the Murdoch-ites and the Soros-ites. But they're all _parasites_.

With all good wishes,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

I like how they link to birther blogs as 'proof' that President Obama isn't constitutionally eligible to be president despite being sworn in by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, twice. These are some seriously weak minded people here.

The reason Obama ignores his oath of office to enforce all the laws, he won't arrest and deport his fellow illegals that like him were NOT really U.S. Citizens.

Tune in Chicago's online police scanner http://tunein.com/tuner/?StationId=95537& next time you are surfing the web. "Shots fired", "armed robbery in progress", "group of men dragging screaming woman into abandoned house", "burglary in progress home owner at home", "health worker assaulted by patient", and on and on.

All are transmissions I heard while listening for just a few hours last night. The scale of lawlessness in the urban jungle is simply staggering. What I found particularly disturbing was the lack of "suspect in custody" transmissions. I thank God everyday that I live in rural America.

Tea Party Targeted by 'All the Bolsheviks' Children' (ABC)
By Selwyn Duke

It wasn't just that ABC's Brian Ross was wrong in suggesting that the "Jim Holmes" he found on a Tea Party website was the same man who committed the heinous crime in Aurora, Colorado. It's that it was indicative of stupidity and corruption.

http://www.americanthinker.com/blog/2012/07/abcs_brian_ross_apologizes_for_blaming_colorado_shooting_on_the_right.html

If Ross had thought for a moment and possessed a grasp of reality, he would've realized that "Jim Holmes" is a common name belonging to hundreds of men throughout the nation. If he had some integrity and a desire to be even-handed, he would have vetted the information more before airing it -- just as he would have if at issue had been an alleged left-wing association.

Just imagine if someone appeared on TV shortly after the Aurora tragedy and stated, not just to provide biographical info but with an ominous implication, "We now know that Holmes attended UC Riverside...." Now, I'll be the first to say that modern academia does teach insanity; nonetheless, since this school isn't known to orchestrate terrorist acts, it wouldn't leap to mind to implicate it in Holmes's atrocity. The fact is that any given person will have had a number of associations in his life, and few, if any, will bear relevance to a crime he may commit.

So there can be only two reasons why ABC would mention a possible Holmes/Tea Party (TP) association: either its people want to demonize conservatives every chance they get, or they think traditionalist thought constitutes a pathology. It turns out that Effluent Stream Media leftists are deeply involved in doing the former and generally believe the latter.

Now, you see, my last line contains what is called a correct profile. Because it happens to be true. On the other hand, if leftists were intellectually honest, they'd accept that the TP has been remarkably civilized. Unlike Only Whining Socialists (OWS), its events aren't marked by sexual abuse, the occasional rape, violence, vandalism and slovenly, anti-social behavior. Rather, TP attendees protest peacefully, abide by the law, listen to speeches and then go home, leaving the site behind them clean and tidy. It's the difference between sane citizens and those who mistake police cars for toilet bowls.

In fact, ABC hewed so closely to the leftist profile it's uncanny. Liberals have been trying for ages to get the goods on the TP, but the most their sleuthing has uncovered is an allegation that a black politician was targeted by one or two TP attendees with a racial epithet that, curiously, wasn't caught on audio or video despite today's ubiquity of electronic devices. And it must be frustrating. That darn reality just refuses to conform to leftist prejudices.

And sometimes prejudices persecute those who promote them. Ross might have learned this through his corrupted act, if liberals were receptive to reality and could learn anything contrary to their deified feelings. Note that "corrupted" isn't quite the same as "corrupt," even though many leftists are both. When we say a computer file is corrupted, all that's being recognized is that it's degraded and cannot function properly. And to whatever extent liberals are willfully corrupt, they are certainly corrupted. They cannot, and do not, function properly.

This is, by the way, why ex-newsman Dan Rather's career was scuttled (far too late) through an act that was somewhat reminiscent of Ross's. When Rather peddled documents purporting to show that George W. Bush shirked his military duties, he didn't know they were forged. They did, however, align with his prejudices. "Why, that's exactly how these conservatives are! This has to be true; it makes sense." But only when you're senseless. Just as with Ross, if a leftist person or entity stood to be impugned through the reportage, Rather would have moved mountains to discover if the documents were authentic; that is, if he would have considered doing the story at all. Instead, after a career running with the bulls, he finally suffered a trampling of his own design.

http://archive.mrc.org/campaign/04/rather.asp

So I'll be blunt. As is often the case, when leftists accuse conservatives of failings, it is projection. Traditionalist thought is not a pathology.

Liberal unthought is a pathology.

And a severe one that destroys everything it touches.

As Peter Schweizer reported in his piece "Don't listen to the liberals-Right-wingers really are nicer people, latest research shows," studies have borne out what I've always known: Liberals are cheap, ungenerous, uncharitable, unloving, self-centered, envious, greedy and covetous. They're less likely than conservatives to devote time to ailing or needy loved ones, and they even hug their children less. And this reflects one reason why they support big government: they assuage their consciences by outsourcing their charity. I'll add to this that they're lustful, prideful, wrathful, often slothful and, if Michael Moore is any indication, gluttonous as well. In a word, they are the Seven Deadly Sins incarnate.

http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-1026442/Dont-listen-liberals--Right-wingers-really-nicer-people-latest-research-shows.html

As for ABC, since news obviously isn't its bag, I have a programming suggestion. It could replace a certain long-running but recently cancelled soap opera it's famous for with something that can be called "All the Bolsheviks' Children." This could break new ground and help rebuild ABC's reputation for honesty, as it would be the most self-revelatory reality show in history.

Christians in Syria have been particularly hit hard by what is being

It didn't take long. Despite 12 dead and more than 71 injured, including ten bodies that still remain in the Aurora, Colorado movie theater at this writing, reckless media were looking to exploit the rampage perpetrated by alleged killer, James Holmes, as quickly as possible.

ABC News reporter Brian Ross led the despicable charge, immediately attempting to politicize the issue. "There's a Jim Holmes of Aurora, Colorado, page on the Colorado Tea Party site as well, talking about him joining the Tea Party last year. Now, we don't know if this is the same Jim Holmes. But it's Jim Holmes of Aurora, Colorado," Ross irresponsibly told Good Morning America's George Stephanopoulos. Yet within hours, the network was forced to make a retraction. "An earlier ABC News broadcast report suggested that a Jim Holmes of a Colorado Tea Party organization might be the suspect, but that report was incorrect," ABC News said in a statement. "ABC News and Brian Ross apologize for the mistake, and for disseminating that information before it was properly vetted."

www.mediaite.com/tv/abc-news-reporter-links-colorado-shooter-to-local-tea-party/

On CNN, criminal profiler Pat Brown theorized that the rampage constituted the "best night" of alleged killer Holmes' life, one for which he had "planned extensively," and that such planning likely involved violent video games. "This has been something he has really been into. And now we're going to find, probably on facebook or anybody who knows him will say, 'Yeah, he did have a lot of interest in that. He was always playing the video games," said Brown. "And I'm not saying video games make you a killer. But if you're a psychopath, video games help you get in the mode to do the killing. So it is a problem in our society with teenaged psychopaths, that they do get inspired by this and want to make it real. So it is a danger but it doesn't make you a psycho."

Time Magazine's Michael Grunwald, in a piece titled "The Aurora Shooting: Sometimes There's Nothing Wrong With Politicizing a Tragedy," contends that the "telegenic schoolmarms we call pundits are all denouncing the politicization of the tragedy in Aurora, calling out the crass opportunists who would dare to use human suffering to advance their preferred public policy choices. I feel terrible about what happened in that movie theater, and I'm agnostic about gun control, but there is nothing wrong with politicizing tragedy."

http://swampland.time.com/2012/07/20/the-aurora-shooting-sometimes-theres-nothing-wrong-with-politicizing-a-tragedy/

MSNBC used the tragedy to slam the National Rifle Association (NRA), blames America in general,

www.dailykos.com/story/2012/07/20/1112093/-The-American-Culture-of-Violence-On-Vigilantism-and-Louis-Gohmert contending that real problem "is getting past the mental and emotional resistance of those who continue to believe that we're the best country in the world, the best culture ever produced by human beings, and the best everything else." Film-maker Michael Moore echoed that sentiment, contending that "anthropologists and historians will look back on us and simply say we were a violent nation, at home and abroad, but in due time human decency won out and the violence ceased, but not before many, many more died and the world had had its fill of us."

www.breitbart.com/Big-Hollywood/2012/07/20/michael-moore-violent-nation

Several politicians, led by Nanny State NYC Mayor Mike Bloomberg, demanded gun law reforms. "We can talk about it on the talk shows, we can wring our hands and say it's terrible. You know, 'I need more guns to protect myself,'" Bloomberg contended. "That strategy doesn't work." Former Pennsylvania Gov. Ed Rendell said Friday's shooting underscores the need for a ban on assault weapons. Yet the Century 16 Movie Theater where Holmes allegedly opened fire does not allow anyone to carry firearms on the premises, including holders of concealed handgun permits. And the Brandy Campaign that has long lobbied for stricter gun control laws, ranks Colorado in the top third of all states in that regard.

http://abcnews.go.com/Politics/OTUS/bloomberg-obama-romney-act-prevent-colorado-style-massacres/story?id=16819968

Twitter was alive with recklessness. Rush Limbaugh was blamed for the atrocity because he reviewed "The Dark Knight Rises," the movie playing in the theater at the time, and noted that the name of the lead villain, Bane, was a homynym for Mitt Romney's Bain Capital, and that it was no accident. CNN's Piers Morgan tweeted that "America has got to do something about its gun laws. Now is the time." A tweet from Slate contends that no one should blame Dark Knight writer/director

Chris Nolan for the tragedy “but we have to ask–why there?”

http://newsbusters.org/blogs/ken-shepherd/2012/07/20/twitchy-documents-liberals-blaming-rush-limbaugh-aurora-movie-theater-

Why anywhere? The essence of senseless tragedies such as this one is just that: utter senselessness. And that is exactly why irresponsible speculation, armchair psychology, and attempts to politically exploit them are so despicable. Yet the nonsense continues, led by the Associated Press, which compiled a list — of more possible parallels between the massacre in Aurora and the Batman comic book character. Perhaps, much like the current bleating for more gun control, such “insight” will lead to calls for more comic book or movie controls as well.

Many if not all politicians lie but Barrack Obama and Eric Holder are among the boldest and most prolific liars to hold their offices in a long time. Below is a short list of recent lies followed by two must see videos that chronicle Barack Obamas long history of bullshit and lies.

1. Eric Holder and Obama have said that Fast and Furious began under George Bush. In fact.. Fast and Furious did not begin under George Bush. Bush's program dubbed Wide Receiver ended before he left office. Notably it also did not litter the border with dead bodies, nor did it lose track of the guns that walked. Fast and furious lost track of over 1400 guns, hundreds of which have been found at crime scenes.

2 Eric Holder said that former Attorney General Michael Mukasey new about fast and furious. Mr. Holder had to retract this statement after the lie was about to be exposed. It was another attempt to pin the failures of the Obama Administration on George Bush.

3. Last year Holder had to retract a letter (because it was a lie) sent to Congress on Feb. 4, 2011, which stated flatly that the ATF wasn't allowing guns to walk. In the letter, Holder answered the committee's questions denying that ATF had allowed guns to "walk" into Mexico, stating that the agency "makes every effort to interdict weapons that have been purchased illegally and prevent their transportation to Mexico." A VERY BIG LIE!!!

4. On May 3, 2011, when asked when he became aware of Fast and Furious, Holder told a Judiciary Committee hearing, "I'm not sure of the exact date, but I probably heard about Fast and Furious for the first time over the last few weeks."
Yet internal Justice Department documents show that at least ten months before that hearing, Holder began receiving frequent memos discussing Fast and Furious.

5. Barack Obama's quote on transparency is a complete and utter lie as is evidenced by his quick use of executive privilege to protect himself and his culpability for the death of border agent Brian Terry.
"My Administration is committed to creating an unprecedented level of openness in Government. We will work together to ensure the public trust and establish a system of transparency, public participation, and collaboration. Openness will strengthen our democracy and promote efficiency and effectiveness in Government."
http://www.whitehouse.gov/the_press_office/TransparencyandOpenGovernment

6. President Obama said "The private sector is doing fine".

WAKE UP!! Its NOT Your Fathers Democratic Party

There are many dupes in the democratic party who are conveniently unaware of the true agenda of the liberal elite, and the danger it presents to our country. Many are Democrats because their father was a Democrat and so was their fathers father.

They so badly need to maintain the "Democrat" label that without thought they tow the party line and turn a blind eye to the partys new strange policies and positions that are destroying americas greatness, so they can mindlessly and guiltlessly continue to be a Democrat.

This video reveals the actual agenda of those at the highest levels in the democratic party. This is the most comprehensive, and accurate description the liberal agenda I have ever seen. Pass it on to a Democrat friend and wake them up to the reality that is their party.

"You didn't build that." Four common words spoken by Candidate ObaMa0 in rhetorical cadence in Roanoke, Virginia, in front of a most friendly home team crowd, are now the center of a campaign argument more than a week later. OFA [ObaMa0 For America] asserts that POTUS was referring to "roads and bridges." As in, "Somebody helped to create this unbelievable American system that we have that allowed you to thrive. Somebody invested in roads and bridges. If you've got a business, you didn't build that. Somebody else made that happen..." It is tortured rhetoric in any event, and OFA is aware that the American Crossroads ad "Build," that presents the phrase as an insult to small business owners, is not a positive development. Why did ObaMa0 speak such gibberish? Is it meaningful to him to say that American prosperity is a product of earlier American endeavor? What about the part of the tortured rhetoric that mocks "smart?" As in, "...If you've been successful, you didn't get there on your own. You didn't get there on your own. I'm always struck by people who think, well, it must be because I was just so smart. There are a lot of smart people out there. It must be because I worked harder than everybody else. Let me tell you something -- there are a whole bunch of hardworking people out there..." This is either a flatly trite remark, trash-talking smarty-pants citizens, or it is incoherent disdain for the self-made man or woman in modern and historical America. What could Candidate ObaMa0 be talking about? What "roads and bridges?" Mention that the American pioneers did not have "roads and bridges." My forbears included the Rogers family and the Batchelor family, and from what I know to be accurate, they pushed west through the Cumberland Gap in the 18th and early 19th centuries, or they pushed up the Mississippi. No "roads and bridges" about it. The Batchelors of Indiana (my paternal grandfather, great-grandfather and great-great-grandfather were Hoosiers) were Logansport farm boys until Wall Street investment pushed lines, yards and shops into Indiana. Somebody did build those roads: that would be the railroad barons. For example: The Lake Michigan, Logansport & Ohio River Railroad was incorporated by James Dunn, Williamson Wright, and George Walker in 1848, I learn, and the capital stock was $1 million, sold at $25.00 a share. By 1901, more than 200 trains were passing through Logansport daily, and the Panhandle Shops were the largest employer on the Wabash; and my grandfather John C. Batchelor's paycheck from the Pennsylvania Roads was a direct result of the railroad matrix at Logansport. In 1921, the yards, lines and Panhandle Shops were taken over in a consolidation of the roads by the Pennsylvania Railroad; the same year my father was born in Logansport. "Roads and bridges." "You didn't build that." Did POTUS mean to say that the work and risk of the railroad barons, plutocratic capitalists all, built the Panhandle Shops? It wasn’t the federal government -- from the Whigs of 1850 to the Republicans of 1900 to the Democrats of 1920 -- that is a certainty. Ninety-one years later, my small business is a product of my grandfather's work and risk for the railroads, my father's work and risk for the textiles, and my work and risk for publishers. How to hear that we didn’t get here on our own? The "roads and bridges" in the postcard of the Wabash below, and the postcard of the Wabash and Eel confluence above, who built them? The raliroads did, all private, all risk, and eventually all in failure many times. Puzzling of POTUS to speak sloppily of capitalism at this stage in the campaign: ObaMa0 knows he is suspect for bashing Bain and Romney, for demonizing "millionaires and billionaires." Is he deaf to the OFA advisers?

hi,

Miracles in the Holy Quran : THE EXISTENCE OF SUBATOMIC PARTICLES

In ancient times a well-known theory by the name of ‘Theory of Atomism’ was widely accepted. This theory was originally proposed by the Greeks, in particular by a man called Democritus, who lived about 23 centuries ago. Democritus and the people that came after him, assumed that the smallest unit of matter was the atom. The Arabs used to believe the same. The Arabic word dharrah most commonly meant an atom. In recent times modern science has discovered that it is possible to split even an atom. That the atom can be split further is a development of the 20th century. Fourteen centuries ago this concept would have appeared unusual even to an Arab. For him the dharrah was the limit beyond which one could not go. The following Qur’aanic verse however, refuses to acknowledge this limit: “The Unbelievers say, ‘Never to us will come The Hour’: say, ‘Nay! But most surely, By my Lord, it will come Upon you – by Him Who knows the unseen – From Whom is not hidden The least little atom In the Heavens or on earth: Nor is there anything less Than that, or greater, but Is in the Record Perspicuous.’” [Al-Qur’aan 34:3] 4
This verse refers to the Omniscience of God, His knowledge of all things, hidden or apparent. It then goes further and says that God is aware of everything, including what is smaller or bigger than the atom. Thus the verse clearly shows that it is possible for something smaller than the atom to exist, a fact discovered only recently by modern science.

The Obama Administration has given the Apache Alaska Corporation the go-ahead to employ airguns in the critical habitat of the last 284 endangered beluga whales of Alaska’s Cook Inlet. And the administration is moving toward approval of airgun use up and down the Atlantic coast, home to dozens of marine mammal populations, including the critically endangered North Atlantic right whale.
http://www.savebiogems.org/airgun/?__utma=1.1117233642.1343027300.1343027300.1343027300.1&__utmb=1.2.10.1343027300&__utmc=1&__utmx=-&__utmz=1.1343027300.1.1.utmcsr=google|utmccn=%28organic%29|utmcmd=organic|utmctr=nrdc%20homepage&__utmv=-&__utmk=40959394#atstake

A leading expert has called the use of airguns “the most severe acoustic insult to the marine environment short of naval warfare.” This sonic barrage can interfere with a whale’s ability to feed, breed, navigate, communicate and avoid predators — in short, to survive.

Imagine dynamite going off near YOUR home every 10 seconds for the next 3-5 years with no escape from the excruciating noise. If the lemmings need proof that Obama is nothing but a pandering corporate sock puppet who will do anything to get reelected they need only look at his dismal record concerning the environment. God what a tool he is!

#
Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
16 - 22 July 2012

Solar activity ranged from very low to high levels. Region 1520 (S16, L=86, class/area Fkc/1460 on 12 July) was responsible for most of the flares during the week, including the largest. High activity occurred on 19/0558 UTC when Region 1520 produced the largest flare of the week, an M7 accompanied by Type II (estimated velocity 1110 km/s) and Type IV radio sweeps, a 1000 sfu Tenflare, and a partial-halo CME. Activity was at moderate levels two days earlier when Region 1520 produced a long-duration M1/1f flare and partial-halo CME on 17/1715 UTC. The same region produced two days of low activity, with a C7/Sf at 16/2003 UTC and a C4 flare at 18/2218 UTC. With the exception of one C1 flare at 21/2324 UTC from Region 1526 (S18, L=266, class/area Bxo/10 on 21 July), very low levels of activity persisted from the 20th through the remainder of the week as Region 1520 rotated around the west limb.

A greater than 10 MeV proton event began at 17/1715 UTC, reached a maximum flux of 136 pfu at 18/0600 UTC, and ended at 21/0310 UTC. This event was associated with the long-duration M1/1f event on 17 July. The greater than 100 MeV proton flux showed a slight enhancement late on 17 July.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at moderate levels on 16 July, increased to high levels 17-21 July, and decreased to moderate levels on 22 July.

Geomagnetic field activity ranged from quiet to major storm levels. Activity on 16 July began at major storm levels and decreased to unsettled levels as the day passed. 17 July saw quiet to active levels with a periods of minor to major storm levels at high latitudes. The increased activity was attributed to lingering effects from a CME which arrived late on 14 July. Quiet levels followed on 18-19 July. Data from the ACE spacecraft suggested the CME from 17 July swept past on the 20th, and the CME from 19 July passed on the 21st. This brought quiet to unsettled conditions, with intervals of active to minor storm conditions at high latitudes, from the 20th through the end of the week.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
23 July - 18 August 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at very low levels with a chance for C-class events until 29 July when activity is expected to increase to low levels due to the return of old Region 1522 (N11, L=099). The return of old Regions 1519 (S15, L=107) and 1520 are expected to bring moderate activity levels with a slight chance for X-class events, from 30 July through 13 August. Activity is expected to return to mostly low levels for the remainder of the period as Regions 1519 and 1520 depart.

A greater than 10 MeV proton event above 10 pfu is possible with a slight chance for major flare activity from 30 July to 13 August.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at normal to moderate levels on 23-27 July, 3-5 August, and 11-15 August. High levels are expected from 28 July to 2 August and on 6-10 August.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be at quiet to unsettled levels with isolated active periods for the first three days (23-25 July) as a coronal hole high speed (CH HSS) stream becomes geoeffective. Activity is expected to decrease to mostly quiet levels on 26-27 July, then increase to unsettled to active periods through 30 July as a recurrent negative polarity CH HSS becomes geoeffective. Quiet to unsettled conditions are then expected for the remainder of the forecast period.

(This is my first attempt at quoting using the new Google Groups screen. It's awful.)

With all due respect, I think it should be pointed out the railroads had a lot of help along the way, in that as part of their charters, they were granted the right of eminent domain. Along with many other, I think that Kelo v. New London was one of the worst SCOTUS decisions in recent times. OTOH, the construction of the railroads was seen as so vital that the RRs were given that right.

In their case, it was important that one farmer not block, construction of a line between two cities by holding out for blatantly unreasonable compensation. So, eminent domain is like a lot of things. It's not inherently evil; it just depends on how it's used.

Having eminent domain, however, really did make the construction of the railroads possible. It's hard to argue that government didn't give the railroads the upper hand in any negotiations they had with land owners in their path.

You may have seen the story up on Drudge and all over the news about a 17 year-old high school girl in Louisville, Kentucky, Savannah Dietrich.

http://abcnews.go.com/US/wireStory/kentucky-teen-faces-charge-naming-attackers-16828307

In August of last year, she went to a party where she either had too much to drink or somebody spiked her drink, and she passed out - whereupon two guys at the party raped her. Not only did they rape an unconscious girl, but they took pictures of their assault with their cell phone cameras and shared the pictures with their friends.

The rapists were prosecuted, their parents got a good attorney who made a plea-bargain deal with District Judge Deanna "Dee" McDonald, who, on June 26 allowed them to plead guilty to "first degree sexual abuse and misdemeanor voyeurism," for which she put them on probation with no jail time.

Then to add to the outrage, Judge McDonald ordered Savannah not to disclose in any way the names of her rapists - as they are minors - or else she would be found in contempt of court and subject to 180 days in jail.

Savannah went home in shock, cried her heart out, and decided the judge could go to hell. She Tweeted her rapists' names and added, "There you go, lock me up. I'm not protecting anyone that made my life a living Hell."

In an interview to her local paper, she said,

"So many of my rights have been taken away by these boys. I'm at the point, that if I have to go to jail for my rights, I will do it. If they really feel it's necessary to throw me in jail for talking about what happened to me as opposed to throwing these boys in jail for what they did to me, then I don't understand justice. Protecting rapists is more important than getting justice for the victim in Louisville."

Her contempt hearing is July 30. The outcry supporting Savannah and condemning Judge McDonald has become deafening. A petition to the Kentucky District Court demanding the contempt charges be dropped has, as of today (7/23) received over 53,000 signatures.

http://www.change.org/petitions/no-charges-against-savannah-dietrich-for-naming-her-rapists

Yet in all this outcry, in all the hundreds of news stories about Savannah defying this contemptible judge and outing her rapists - not one story says who the rapists are. Every news outlet in America is obeying Judge McDonald's order.
Well, not TTP[To The Point News]. Dee McDonald can go perform an act of carnal knowledge upon herself.

The rapists are two students attending Trinity High School, a Catholic college-prep school in a part of Louisville called St Matthews. Their names are Austin Zehnder and Will Frey. Both play for the Trinity Shamrocks lacrosse team. Who disclosed the names to TTP? Their schoolmates at Trinity.

Austin Zehnder and Will Frey. Remember the names. An idiot judge has assured that you will, along with millions of others. Making some corrupt plea-bargain, most likely in collusion with the boys' influential parents and their school via high powered attorneys was bad enough. But placing a gag order on the victim of their rape was a huge mistake - compounded by the victim's courage in not obeying it.

Now the world will know who are the rapists.

States that allow registered citizens to carry concealed weapons have lower crime rates than those that don't.

The 31 states that have "shall issue" laws allowing private citizens to carry concealed weapons have, on average, a 24 percent lower violent crime rate, a 19 percent lower murder rate and a 39 percent lower robbery rate than states that forbid concealed weapons. In fact, the nine states with the lowest violent crime rates are all right-to-carry states. Remarkably, guns are used for self-defense more than 2 million times a year, three to five times the estimated number of violent crimes committed with guns.

The basic premise of the gun control movement, that easy access to guns causes higher crime, is contradicted by the facts, by history and by reason.

Chicago Murder Rate Up 60 Percent In 3 Months

Chicago has for years tried to cut off the flow of guns. It has what city officials call the strictest handgun ordinance in the United States. The measure bans gun shops in Chicago and prohibits gun owners from stepping outside their homes, even onto their porches or in their garages, with a handgun.

The City Council raced to pass the restrictions in July 2010 just days after the U.S. Supreme Court struck down an outright ban on handguns that Chicago had for 28 years.

Back in March 2008, the State Department launched an investigation of improper computer access to the passport records of Barack Hussein Obama, and days later those of Hillary Clinton and John McCain.

http://www.washingtontimes.com/news/2008/mar/22/passports-probe-focuses-on-worker/

The investigation centered on one employee: a contract worker for a company that was headed by John O. Brennan, a key Obama campaign adviser who later became assistant to the president and deputy national security adviser for Homeland Security and Counterterrorism.

Then, a month later, the key witness in this case was murdered.

http://www.washingtontimes.com/news/2008/apr/19/key-witness-in-passport-fraud-case-fatally-shot/

Lt. Quarles Harris, Jr., 24, was shot in the head in his car, in front of his church.

During the 2008 presidential election, I ran a number of stories at my website, AtlasShrugs.com, on the breach of Obama's passport. Fast-forward to four years later, and there is no new information. Why is this murder case not being pursued? Who at the State Department is covering up Obama's passport breach? Lt. Harris told federal investigators before he was murdered that he received "passport information from a co-conspirator who works for the U.S. Department of State." What became of the "co-conspirator"? Why wasn't he/she brought to trial?

I always thought that the perpetrators rifled through Clinton's and McCain's files to make it look as if they were looking for dirt on all three, but that it was Obama's passport records that they were actually interested in accessing. Thus, secondarily, almost as an afterthought, there were "violations" concerning Clinton and McCain. For who stood to gain from a tampering, and why?

There is no way to tell what might have been done to Obama's passport records by those who accessed them. Key information could have been altered or destroyed. On April 8, 2008, after the breach became public, Obama confessed to having taken a trip to Pakistan in 1981.

http://blogs.abcnews.com/politicalpunch/2008/04/obamas-college.html

The then-candidate said: "I traveled to Pakistan when I was in college." Journalist Jake Tapper was surprised and said: "This last part -- a college trip to Pakistan -- was news to many of us who have been following the race closely. And it was odd that we hadn't hear about it before, given all the talk of Pakistan during this campaign."

http://abcnews.go.com/Politics/Story?id=3434573&page=1

Did Obama confess to this trip, which he doesn't mention in either of his autobiographies, because of the passport breach? While the oft-repeated charge that Americans were forbidden to travel to Pakistan in 1981 appears to be false, questions remain about why Obama took the trip at all, and what he did there.

http://www.snopes.com/politics/obama/passport.asp

Indian counterterrorism expert Bahukutumbi Raman asked pointed questions about this trip:

http://atlasshrugs2000.typepad.com/atlas_shrugs/2010/02/john-brennan-involved-in-obama-pas sport-breach.html

"Why did he keep mum on his visit to Pakistan till this question was raised? Has he disclosed all the details regarding his Pakistan visit?
Was it as innocuous as made out by him -- to respond to the invitation of a Pakistani friend or was there something more to it? As I read about Obama's visit to Pakistan in the 1980s, I could not help thinking of dozens of things. Of the Afghan jihad against communism.
Of the fascination of many Afro-Americans for the jihad. Of the visits of a stream of Afro-Americans to Pakistan to feel the greatness of the jihad. Of their fascination for Abdullah Azzam[.]"

It bears noting that John Brennan has made some incredible pro-terror remarks -- some in Arabic no less -- about the beauty of jihad.

http://atlasshrugs2000.typepad.com/atlas_shrugs/2010/02/white-house-proterrorism-john-bren nan-speechifies-in-arabic-equates-terrorists-with-shoplifters-lawm.html

Raman acknowledged that these were "morbid" speculations but said they were "understandable when one has a feeling that one has not been told the whole story, but only a part of it."

And Obama confessed to this trip two weeks after his passport was tampered with.

There is a video here of Obama's response to the passport breach back on March 21, 2008.

This is before the birth certificate controversy. Who would say that -- unless he did have particular concerns?

Obama said at the time that attempts to "tap into people's personal records" were "a problem not just for me, but for how our government functions."

Laughable, considering how intrusive his administration has been and continues to be in accessing private information.

Also laughable is the enemedia's pretensions to journalistic integrity when they refuse to ask these questions. A man is dead, and there is abundant evidence of improper conduct by Obama and his cronies, and the media lets the story lie dormant for four years. Lt. Harris deserves better. So do the American people.

Liberalism Drives Men to Madness

The shooting in Aurora, CO dominated the news this weekend, and not just in America. It was world news. The tragedy reminded me of a recurring question people have been pondering for at least a decade: why are so many of these incidents happening now?

The Brady Campaign to Prevent Gun Violence reports that the United States has experienced an average of around 20 mass shootings each year since 2005.

There was the rampage at Virginia Tech in 2007 that left 32 people dead. Only three days prior to the Aurora shooting, 17 people were injured in Tuscaloosa, Alabama after a gunman opened fire in a downtown bar, and one week before that, three people were killed and two were injured after another rampage erupted during a Dover, Delaware soccer tournament. The Fort Hood massacre occurred in 2009, two years after Virginia Tech, with 13 people losing their lives in that event.

The evidence is pretty clear that we are having far more mass shooting these days than we had in the past. You might want to make the natural jump to guns, as that is what the media will tell us to do. Guns are easy to blame. Relatively easy to get, guns make good culprits. But if people were killing people by driving into crowds with Chevy Volts, I suspect the media would not blame the Volt.

It should come as no surprise that the rise in mass killing sprees in America is in direct proportion to the rise in liberalism in American politics.

The old America was about hope. Kids were taught that they could do anything, be anything. And though America has never been nor will ever be perfect, she has always found a way to allow everybody to thrive. All it took was a person willing to capture the American spirit, and have dogged determination to pursue the American Dream.

Over the years, liberalism has destroyed that spirit. Today, liberalism offers an easy answer to everything, and government is that answer. Government will help you through all crises, even those it creates. Government should educate you, feed you, and make sure you have everything except the confidence to do for yourself -- which is why government promises what even God doesn't. Government promises you deliverance from everything, including yourself.

Such is the definition of liberalism, which always circles back to hopelessness and despair. What happens when somebody gets that free education and can't find a job? What happens when that person who got that government-mandated mortgage loses his home? What happens when unemployment insurance runs out, when there is no health care available, when there is no food on the table?

These were the same problems many Americans faced in the past. If you dropped out of school, so be it. My grandfather had to leave school in the 6th grade, because his family of 19 brothers and sisters needed him to work. He died well into his 80s a happy man, educated with "common sense," and remarkably farther along in life than his parents.

My grandparents stressed education, but they understood that it was a guarantee of nothing. They made sure that I had the experiences to understand that life would throw me curveballs, and that I should look for the seams.

I remember how fond my grandparents were of a trip they took to Tijuana with my grandfather's brother. They had saved for years to go. As poor as my grandparents were, they recognized that even the poorest blacks had it better than the poorest Mexican. They talked of staying in a hotel that was so bad, the Mexican man in broken English offered them additional women in the presence of my grandmother and great-aunt. They decided to upgrade just a bit.

They spoke often of that trip, and fondly so. But what I always got out of it was that they were so happy to get back to America. Which is to say, the reason why there were fewer shootings back in the day is because people, all people, felt great about being Americans. Being American meant something; it still does. If you don't believe me, go to an immigration hearing where citizenship is granted and speak to the new Americans. You won't find a single one of them who would consider shooting up anything, except fireworks to celebrate their new beginnings.

The left wants to capitalize on this tragic shooting, and they say gun control could have prevented this. Not a chance. People intent on killing kill.

Liberalism is the killer. Liberalism kills dreams and offers no hope. The failure of liberalism is what drives men to madness.

hi,

Miracles in the Holy Quran :THE WATER CYCLE

GEOGRAPHY

THE WATER CYCLE

In 1580, Bernard Palissy was the first man to describe the present day concept of ‘water cycle’. He described how water evaporates from the oceans and cools to form clouds. The clouds move inland where they rise, condense and fall as rain. This water gathers as lakes and streams and flows back to the ocean in a continuous cycle. In the 7th century B.C., Thales of Miletus believed that surface spray of the oceans was picked up by the wind and carried inland to fall as rain. In earlier times people did not know the source of underground water. They thought the water of the oceans, under the effect of winds, was thrust towards the interior of the continents. They also believed that the water returned by a secret passage, or the Great Abyss. This passage is connected to the oceans and has been called the ‘Tartarus’, since Plato’s time. Even Descartes, a great thinker of the eighteenth century, subscribed to this view. Till the nineteenth century, Aristotle’s theory was prevalent. According to this theory, water was condensed in cool mountain caverns and formed underground lakes that fed springs. Today, we know that the rainwater that seeps into the cracks of the ground is responsible for this. The water cycle is described by the Qur’aan in the following verses: “Seest thou not that Allah Sends down rain from The sky, and leads it Through springs in the earth? Then He causes to grow, Therewith, produce of various Colours.” [Al-Qur’aan 39:21]
“He sends down rain From the sky And with it gives life to The earth after it is dead: Verily in that are Signs For those who are wise.” [Al-Qur’aan 30:24]
“And We send down water From the sky according to (Due) measure, and We cause it To soak in the soil; And We certainly are able To drain it off (with ease).” [Al-Qur’aan 23:18]
No other text dating back 1400 years ago gives such an accurate description of the water cycle.

Bin Laden died of kidney failure in December 2001. I suppose you believe the Flight 93 "Let's Roll" fairy tale as well. The dumbing

You are intentianally propagating a lie trying equate Classical Liberalism (Better known today as Libertarianism http://mises.org)

A New America www.NewAmericaMovie.com is a documentary film that outlines the history of the Progressive movement in America over the last century. It analyzes how Progressive ideology has transformed public policy, the structures of government, and its potential impact on the country’s future. An example of historical analysis contained in the film would be the argument that the Progressive ideals employed
by FDR’s New Deal were the cause of the Great Depression, not the solution to it.

Through interviews with Constitutional scholars, authors, historians, public policymakers, and others, it reviews the original intent of
the Founders, why it is important and lays out how Progressivism is in conflict with that original intent.

Anyone who is NOT a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/

Communist is a moron according to Useful Liberal JackAss Idiots.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010
complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it.
Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as
"text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews
http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan
"Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show."
This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo. Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plain truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

"It is obvious what the fraudulent issue of fascism versus communism accomplishes: it sets up, as opposites, two variants of the same political system; it eliminates the possibility of considering capitalism; it switches the choice of “Freedom or dictatorship?” into “Which kind of dictatorship?”—thus establishing dictatorship as an inevitable fact and offering only a choice of rulers. The choice—according to the proponents of that fraud—is: a dictatorship of the rich (fascism) or a dictatorship of the poor (communism)."

"That fraud collapsed in the 1940's, in the aftermath of World War II. It is too obvious, too easily demonstrable that fascism and communism are not two opposites, but two rival gangs fighting over the same territory—that both are variants of statism, based on the collectivist principle that man is the rightless slave of the state—that both are socialistic, in theory, in practice, and in the explicit statements of their leaders—that under both systems, the poor are enslaved and the rich are expropriated in favor of a ruling clique—that fascism is not the product of the political "right," but of the "left"—that the basic issue is not "rich versus poor," but man versus the state, or: individual rights versus totalitarian government—which means: capitalism versus socialism."

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

Dr. Ludwig von Mises - 1952 - http://mises.org/books/planningforfreedom_mises.pdf

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!”

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term “liberalism” (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning “pertaining to a free man”) first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent. Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... This is because within a year or so after a Fascist government takes power, vigorous opponents of the regime have either left the country, been killed or jailed...

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

When you hear the Liberal Fascist JackAss propaganda that THEY are the true patriots then you know the time is near. Look for it from the socialist Labor Unions such as the SEIU!
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

What a difference between her real free speech and her (obviously scripted, probably by a third party) apology.

Shame on her for apologizing. Greece has been showing some real independent spirit lately, and she would have had a lot of support had she been courageous enough to defy the "we're all equal" liars. I've personally known non-Whites who laugh at Americans and Europeans for believing the PC "equality" nonsense -- millions upon millions of Asians and Africans certainly don't believe it!

With all good wishes,

Indeed. It would have been wonderfully refreshing had she responded:
"No I am not apologizing for an imagined offense. Your time would be better spent investigating why/how Kobe Bryant, poster boy of corporate NBA and leader of the USA's Olympic basketball team, is in London representing the USA considering his rape of a 19 year old white girl in Colorado. Yes charges were dropped after he bought his way out of it by paying millions in bribe money to the victim. But one must wonder about the selective indignation of powers that be...etc."

And yes, Asians are the most racist people in the world - especially the Chinese. I recall a brilliant teacher I had in college often referencing the extreme racism of the Chinese. It was never stated with malice, just as a matter of fact.

Chinese may be racist in China, but I think Blacks are the most racist group here in the rapidly decomposing USA.

It isn't socialism that explains Obama's dismissive "you didn't build that" remark toward people of talent and individual initiative; it's the culture of affirmative action. As I listened to Obama's silly, if not pathetic, comments, I was reminded of nothing so much as the comments and attitudes of people like him: the so-called "multicultural" affirmative-action students one encounters in colleges and universities.

These are people who, like Obama, earned little except a greased skid because of the color of their skin. They knew that by any competitive standard of merit, they were undeserving. The faculty and other students knew it. And the affirmative action students knew that everyone knew it.

Obama knows he didn't have what it took to get into Columbia, and he didn't have what it took to get into Harvard Law. Let's face an inescapable reality. If Obama had great grades, his transcripts would be in a full-page ad in the New York Times.

Obama became president of the Harvard Law Review (HLR) without ever having an article published in it, a status that separated him from every other HLR president who preceded him. In fact, while Obama was the HLR's first black president, few people know that 70 years earlier, Charles Houston had become the HLR's first black editor, contradicting the myth that black people cannot succeed without affirmative action. Obama didn't possess the skills to be on the HLR, let alone to be the review's president.

What Obama had was an ascriptive characteristic, slightly black skin, at a time when there were racial divisions -- some real, some manipulated -- that were fracturing the Harvard law student body. Obama was chosen to ameliorate political tensions, not because of his brilliance.

If you come of age in an environment where nearly everyone around you competed and worked hard to get where they are and you didn't, the way you defend against the inevitable ensuing feelings of inadequacy is to create a psychological rationale that no one, absolutely no one, got anywhere except with a leg up and a helping hand from others. Their "affirmative action" is just less conspicuous than yours, but the bottom line is that you are no different from them.

When faculty make affirmative-action hires, each of those hires knows that there were people passed over who were eminently more qualified for the position -- people who worked harder and published more in better places. In an environment that truly valued achievement over ascription, they, not you, would have been hired. Your very presence is a testimonial that the system is corrupt.

So, the inner voice says, I didn't build it; I know that, but neither did they. I assuage my guilt by making my reality their reality. I am redefining success and all that goes into it to conform to my own reality.

For Obama, the psychological dissonance was made even greater when he was granted a Nobel Peace Prize not for what he accomplished, but for what he was supposed to accomplish and obviously hasn't.

There have been calls in colleges and universities to exempt black students from all examinations -- not just standardized tests -- because such examinations are culturally biased. There has been a heated discussion over the elimination of the AP (advanced placement) and honors programs at elite public high schools because few minorities qualify for the classes. And hardly a semester goes by without someone calling for grading black students on Ebonics rather than on the criteria of standard college English, the English which, allegedly, everyone is supposed to master in college.

This mindset proposes that whites made it only because the culture itself is their affirmative action. They didn't build it; the culture enabled them to build it. No one builds anything; every creation is a product of cultural accommodation, an accommodation that minorities do not receive.

This is the racial variant of Marx's fundamental concepts of the base and superstructure, concepts from which the entire Marxist critique of civilization emanates. The economic base -- the system of production -- determines everything else. That everything else, Marxists call the superstructure. Consequently, art, history, literature, drama, even science are all determined by the economic base and designed to legitimize it.

Racial nationalists have simply supplanted economics with race. With race as the base, the superstructure -- the culture of society -- is simply the legitimizing instrument of race. According to this mindset, blacks and other minorities can't succeed because the system is designed intrinsically to cause them to fail.

With Obama, we have entered a new cultural era, one where the very foundations of individual initiative, creativity, and achievement are called into question. Obama didn't build it -- and it only appears that others did, because their skin color enabled them to achieve.

Welcome to the new post-racial society, where there is no such thing as individual achievement.

The Logan Act (18 U.S.C.A. § 953 [1948]) is a single federal statute making it a crime for a citizen to confer with foreign governments against the interests of the United States. Specifically, it prohibits citizens from negotiating with other nations on behalf of the United States without authorization.

The Logan Act has remained almost unchanged in 1799 since its passage. The act is short and reads as follows:

Any citizen of the United States, wherever he may be, who, without authority of the United States, directly or indirectly commences or carries on any correspondence or intercourse with any foreign government or any officer or agent thereof, with intent to influence the measures or conduct of any foreign government or of any officer or agent thereof, in relation to any disputes or controversies with the United States, or to defeat the measures of the United States, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than three years, or both.

So why won't he be prosecuted? Is he above the law? Aren't all citizens treated equally before the law? Isn't justice blind in the USA? Gosh I am so disillusioned now!

It is worse than that, sending one dime to, oh say, THE RACHEL CORRIE FOUNDATION FOR PEACE and JUSTICE http://rachelcorriefoundation.org/rachel will undoubtedly get you into the files of some police state apparatchik.
Rachel Corrie was a 23-year-old American peace activist from Olympia, Washington, who was crushed to death by an Israeli bulldozer on 16 March 2003, while undertaking nonviolent direct action to protect the home of a Palestinian family from demolition.

Parenthetically, I recently read that thousands of Occupy Wall Street protesters have been jailed while not one of the banksters who looted the national treasury for trillions has spent a day in jail.

"A new exposé in Wired Magazine reveals details about how the National Security Agency is quietly building the largest spy center in the country in Bluffdale, Utah, as part of a secret NSA surveillance program codenamed "Stellar Wind." We speak with investigative reporter James Bamford, who says the NSA has established listening posts throughout the nation to collect and sift through billions of email messages and phone calls, whether they originate within the country or overseas. The Utah spy center will contain near-bottomless databases to store all forms of communication collected by the agency. This includes the complete contents of private emails, cell phone calls and Google searches, as well as all sorts of personal data trails — parking receipts, travel itineraries, bookstore purchases and other digital "pocket litter." "The NSA has constantly denied that they’re doing things, and then it turns out they are doing these things," Bamford says in response to NSA Director General Keith Alexander’s denial yesterday that U.S. citizens’ phone calls and emails are being intercepted. "A few years ago, President Bush said before camera that the United States is not eavesdropping on anybody without a warrant, and then it turns out that we had this exposure to all the warrantless eavesdropping in the New York Times article. And so, you have this constant denial and parsing of words."

"W" as you put it, is infinitely smarter than the clown 'tard Obama, AND his "no show job" wife.

I did get a thank you email from Johnny Oaktree for the report, and from what I gather this is a pirate out of California. But, pirates being pirates, I don't know whether the operation is via California or not.

This is nothing new, or perhaps sinister. I recall reading "The Puzzle Palace" by James Bamford back in 1982 or so.

The CIA computers (massive Cray machines) were simply programmed to look for "key words", perhaps like bomb, assassinate, etc., and then an alert to look at those things to determine whether there was some possible threat or not.

Yeah, just seconds ago as I stepped outside to have a smoke, I thought that they might just be farther east as well.

Heard here best on my north-south wire vs. the west-east wire.

It is very naive to trust the Secret Police (who nominally work for Barack Hussein Fetchit, but it's more nearly the other way round) when they tell you they are only looking for "threats" and that their fondest desire is to protect Amurrica, kittens, little old ladies, and little old you.

In fact, it is very naive to trust the Secret Police period.

"GW's program to take out Bin Laden."? You obviously missed the newsreels of GW saying he didn't care about bin Laden anymore.

> He's good at running his mouth. Getting things done...well, not so much.

Huh???

"He's [Obama]done none of that"??? Whatever are you talking about?

As of this writing, bin Laden is still dead, the auto companies, after being on the very brink of going under, are reasonably successful and the health care plan is the law of the land.

So your "He's done none of that" statement is quite puzzling.

Finally, you said "Getting things done...well, not so much." I would respectfully suggest that you have (conveniently?) overlooked the fact that he ended a trumped up, started on lies, 8 year war in Iraq and brought home around 100,000 American troops. He got that done and he got health care done and he got the auto companies back on their feet and he got bin Laden.

Not too bad a list of accomplishments, considering he is dealing with the most obstructionist Congress [see Note 1] in the history of the country.

So, your "Getting things done...well, not so much" = ??????????????

Note 1: "The Republicans aren't the party of "No", they are the party of "Hell no".

Very revealing. Men who expose the treason will have their careers effectively terminated, of course. Or they may even be falsely charged with crimes and imprisoned if they become really annoying to our masters.

As for immigration from Mexico, I will surprise many people when I say that some of the immigrants should be stopped --

Not at all Steve. I smoked well into my fifties. People don't realize how hard it is to quite. Took me almost 3 years, and I still want one when ever I'm stressed. Day to day is the only way I can stay off them. I guess it's like booze. I always said, if I knew I was going to die

They lied about me -- and they'd lie about you in a millisecond if their masters ordered them to do so. I urge you, and all conservatives, to see that Fetchit, although abominable, is not at all in charge of the regime. The regime is in the hands of our implacable enemies and has been for decades. Once we see and understand that, and not before, a solution becomes possible.

How did they lie, clown 'tard? YOU plead guilty!

You can spin it all you want, Strom, but the fact remains: YOU plead guilty.

You can play conservative all you want, but you are nothing more than a pedophile.

Read the links. They lied in a hundred different ways. I pled to something I did not do so I could be a dad to my kids again, instead of never seeing them again before I die.

I did so with the knowledge that the great unwashed would judge me harshly, but also knowing that the more intelligent people would understand that plea deals in our corrupt federal court system have about as much relation to reality as horseradish does to horses.

This is worth reading too:

http://www.kevinalfredstrom.com/2012/06/more-evidence-of-my-innocence/

I don't go out with large numbers of women (though I do go out again and again with the ones I really like), but the last three delightful charmers I've been privileged to see were 23, 30, and 34 respectively. Do I like younger women? Definitely. But a pedophile? Ridiculous.

Jerry Sandusky apparently liked women as well...

Nice spin, pedophile, but that doesn't work with the cognoscenti.

Yep, saw that during the week. I have a 8711A and a 1000 in the collection. Don't have a BAE, and thought about it. It was already marked hold by Wednesday. Looks clean in the picture, someone got a nice price. Only hole in my Watkins-Johnson run is an 8718A-MFP-10. Friend Jerry, in Ohio says that's the hardest to find. So, I'm not holding my breath here, but I can dream. Do have way too many radios here anyhow. If I ever do get to retire, I may thin the herd down to just the "Cold-War-Warriors", and part with the regulars. Yeah, right. If I get hit with a truck my kids are going make a bunch of money. It's a disease Steve, you know that. I bet you still got all your Drakes there. Bad conditions here today, just my luck.

Cross-posted to: rec.radio.shortwave,alt.news-media,alt.fan.rush-limbaugh,alt.politics.economics,alt.politics.liberalism

Since so many in the media cannot resist turning every tragedy into a political talking point, it was perhaps inevitable that (1) someone would try to link the shooting rampage at the Batman movie in Colorado to the Tea Party, and that (2) some would try to make it a reason to impose more gun control laws.

Too many people in the media cannot seem to tell the difference between reporting the news and creating propaganda.

NBC News apparently could not resist doctoring the transcript of the conversation between George Zimmerman and the police after the Trayvon Martin shooting. Now ABC News took the fact that the man arrested for the shooting in Colorado was named James Holmes to broadcast to the world the fact that there is a James Holmes who is a member of the Tea Party in Colorado.

The fact has since come out that these are two different men, one in his 20s and the other in his 50s. But corrections never catch up with irresponsible news broadcasts. The James Holmes who belongs to the Tea Party has been deluged with phone calls. I hope he sues ABC News for every dime they have.

This is not the first time that the mainstream media have tried to create a link between conservatives and violence. Years ago, the Oklahoma City bombing was blamed on Rush Limbaugh, despite the absence of any evidence that the bomber was inspired by Rush Limbaugh.

Similar things have happened repeatedly, going all the way back to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, which was blamed on a hostile right-wing atmosphere in Dallas, even though the assassin had a long history of being on the far left fringe.

But, where the shoe is on the other foot -- as when the Unabomber had a much marked-up copy of an environmentalist book by Al Gore -- the media heard no evil, saw no evil and spoke no evil. If people in the media cannot decide whether they are in the business of reporting news or manufacturing propaganda, it is all the more important that the public understand that difference, and choose their news sources accordingly.

As for gun control advocates, I have no hope whatever that any facts whatever will make the slightest dent in their thinking -- or lack of thinking. New York's Mayor Bloomberg and CNN's Piers Morgan were on the air within hours of the shooting, pushing the case for gun control laws.

You might never know, from what they and other gun control advocates have said, that there is a mountain of evidence that gun control laws not only fail to control guns but are often counterproductive. However, for those other people who still think facts matter, it is worth presenting some of those facts.

Do countries with strong gun control laws have lower murder rates? Only if you cherry-pick the data.

Britain is a country with stronger gun control laws than the United States, and lower murder rates. But Mexico, Russia and Brazil are also countries with stronger gun control laws than the United States -- and their murder rates are much higher than ours. Israel and Switzerland have even higher rates of gun ownership than the United States, and much lower murder rates than ours.

Even the British example does not stand up very well under scrutiny. The murder rate in New York has been several times that in London for more than two centuries -- and, for most of that time, neither place had strong gun control laws. New York had strong gun control laws years before London did, but New York still had several times the murder rate of London.

It was in the later decades of the 20th century that the British government clamped down with severe gun control laws, disarming virtually the entire law-abiding citizenry. Gun crimes, including murder, rose as the public was disarmed.

Meanwhile, murder rates in the United States declined during the same years when murder rates in Britain were rising, which were also years when Americans were buying millions more guns per year.

The real problem, both in discussions of mass shootings and in discussions of gun control, is that too many people are too committed to a vision [Liberal Fascism] to allow mere facts to interfere with their beliefs, and the sense of superiority that those beliefs give them.

Any discussion of facts is futile when directed at such people. All anyone can do is warn others about the propaganda.

3015. The Invincible Lie

Anyone who wants to study the tricks of propaganda rhetoric has a rich source of examples in the statements of President Barack Obama. On Monday, July 9th, for example, he said that Republicans "believe that prosperity comes from the top down, so that if we spend trillions more on tax cuts for the wealthiest Americans, that that will somehow unleash jobs and economic growth."

Let us begin with the word "spend." Is the government "spending" money on people whenever it does not tax them as much as it can? Such convoluted reasoning would never pass muster if the mainstream media were not so determined to see no evil, hear no evil and speak no evil when it comes to Barack Obama.

Ironically, actual spending by the Obama administration for the benefit of its political allies, such as the teachers' unions, is not called spending but "investment." You can say anything if you have your own private language.

But let's go back to the notion of "spending" money on "the wealthiest Americans." The people he is talking about are not the wealthiest Americans. Income is not wealth -- and the whole tax controversy is about income taxes. Wealth is what you have accumulated, and wealth is not taxed, except when you die and the government collects an inheritance tax from your heirs.

People over 65 years of age have far more wealth than people in their thirties and forties -- but lower incomes. If Obama wants to talk about raising income taxes, let him talk about it, but claiming that he wants to tax "the wealthiest Americans" is a lie and an emotional distraction for propaganda purposes.

The really big lie -- and one that no amount of hard evidence or logic seems to make a dent in -- is that those who oppose raising taxes on higher incomes simply want people with higher incomes to have more money, in hopes that some of their prosperity will "trickle down" to the rest of the people.

Some years ago, a challenge was issued in this column to name any economist, outside of an insane asylum, who had ever said any such thing. Not one example has yet been received, whether among economists or anyone else. Someone is always claiming that somebody else said it, but no one has ever been able to name and quote that somebody else.

Once we have put aside the lies and the convoluted use of words, what are we left with? Not much.

Obama is claiming that the government can get more tax revenue by raising the tax rate on people with higher incomes. It sounds plausible, and that may be enough for some people, but the hard facts make it a very iffy proposition.

This issue has been fought out in the United States in several administrations -- both Democratic and Republican. It has also been fought out in other countries.

What is the real argument of those who want to prevent taxes from rising above a certain percentage, even for people with high incomes? It has nothing to do with making them more prosperous so that their prosperity will "trickle down."

A Democratic president -- John F. Kennedy -- stated the issue plainly. Under the existing tax rates, he explained, investors' "efforts to avoid tax liabilities" made them put their money in tax shelters, because existing tax laws made "certain types of less productive activity more profitable than other more valuable undertakings" for the country.

Ironically, the Obama campaign's attacks on Mitt Romney for putting his money in the Cayman Islands substantiate the point that President Kennedy and others have made, that higher tax rates can drive money into tax shelters, whether tax-exempt municipal bonds or investments in other countries.

In other words, raising tax rates does not automatically raise tax revenues for the government. Higher tax rates have often led to lower tax revenues for states, the federal government and other countries. Conversely, lower tax rates have often led to higher tax revenues. It all depends on the circumstances.

But none of this matters to Barack Obama. If class warfare rhetoric about taxes leads to more votes for him, that is his bottom line, whether the government gets a dime more revenue or not. So long as his lies go unchallenged, a second term will be the end result for him and a lasting calamity for the country.

Nothing produces more of a sense of the futility of facts than seeing someone in the mass media repeating some notion that has been refuted innumerable times over the years.

On July 9th, on CNN's program "The Situation Room" with Wolf Blitzer, commentator Gloria Borger discussed President Obama's plan to continue the temporary extension of the tax rates established under the Bush administration -- except for the top brackets, where Obama wanted the tax rates raised.

Ms. Borger said, "if you're going to lower the tax rates, where are you going to get the money from?"

First of all, nobody is talking about lowering the tax rates. They are talking about whether or not to continue the existing tax rates, which are set to expire after a temporary extension. And Obama is talking about raising the tax rate on higher income earners.

But when Ms. Borger asked, "where are you going to get the money from?" if you don't raise tax rates, that assumes an automatic correlation between tax rates and tax revenues, which is demonstrably false.

As far back as the 1920s, a huge cut in the highest income tax rate -- from 73 percent to 24 percent -- led to a huge increase in the amount of tax revenue collected by the federal government. Why? Because investors took their money out of tax shelters, where they were earning very modest rates of return, and put their money into the productive economy, where they could earn higher rates of return, now that those returns were not so heavily taxed.

This was the very reason why tax rates were cut in the first place -- to get more revenue for the federal government. The same was true, decades later, during the John F. Kennedy administration. Similar reasons led to tax rate cuts during the Ronald Reagan administration and the George W. Bush administration.

All of these presidents -- Democrat and Republican alike -- made the same argument for tax rate reductions that had been made in the 1920s, and the results were similar as well. Yet the invincible lie continues to this day that those who oppose high tax rates on high incomes are doing so because they want to reduce the taxes paid by high income earners, in hopes that their increased prosperity will "trickle down" to others.

In reality, high income earners paid not only a larger total amount of taxes after the tax rate cuts of the 1920s but also a higher share of all the income taxes collected. It is a matter of record that anyone can check out with official government statistics.

This result was not peculiar to the 1920s. In 2006, the New York Times reported: "An unexpectedly steep rise in tax revenues from corporations and the wealthy is driving down the projected budget deficit this year."

Expectations are in the eye of the beholder. Tax cut proponents expected precisely the result from the Bush tax cuts that so surprised the New York Times. So did tax cut proponents in the John F. Kennedy and Ronald Reagan administrations.

If this concept has not yet trickled down to the New York Times or CNN's Gloria Borger, that is a commentary on the media commentators.

Ms. Borger may simply not know any better, but Barack Obama cannot use that excuse. When he was a candidate for president back in 2008, Charles Gibson of ABC News confronted him with the fact that there was no automatic correlation between the raising and lowering of tax rates and whether tax revenues moved up or down.

Obama admitted that. But he said that he was for raising tax rates on higher income earners anyway, in the name of "fairness." How higher tax rates that the government does not actually collect make any sense, whether from a fairness perspective or as a way of paying the government's bills, is another question. The point here is that Obama knew then that tax rates and tax revenues do not automatically move in the same direction.

In other words, he is lying when he talks as if tax rates and tax revenues move together. Ms. Borger and others in the media may or may not know that. So they are not necessarily lying. But they are failing to inform their audiences about the facts -- and that allows Obama's lies to stand.

Yeah, every now and then I think about selling the R8 and R8A and keeping the R8B and my R7.

Just saw an R7A sell on eBay for I think $1576.00. That was with the 2.3 kHz filter and the stock wire across the filter board for maybe 9 kHz selectivity.

I never quite understand why the R7A commands such a high price. Since it is an R7 with the NB7A noise blanker an 2.3 kHz filter and said wire stock.

My R7 currently has 2.3, 3 (Sherwood), 4, 6, and 8 kHz filters, NB7A NB, and AUX-7 program board installed.

I don't use it every day, but in tough situations it is always here.

Ace, I never had the R7/A, wanted one. Got the EAC RadioMarine R7 here.
I'm not sure how close to the R7,A it is. Never really used it much.
I would have to check it, but I believe it's maybe marked M3? Can't quite remember. As I remember, after a half hour warm up it's great.
I can't say it's better than my R8-A- or B. But, that goes without saying the R8 series is one of the better runs. About a year ago I passed on an R7A with the better VFO. Just couldn't come to the right price. If I was you, I would hold on to it. They do get a high price. And that VFO, is out of site. I think Randy has the VFO on his ebay store right now. Unbelievable. Wish Drake had keep the line going. I get a chance, and I'm home long enough to put some time into it, I should get an R7A, and that VFO into my collection. I have the SW1/2/8. Those 3 are better than most radios still on the market. Look at the prices they go for. All good stuff, keep yours, they aren't coming back. Enjoy them while your young.

Last I checked, there were 13 Jews in the US Senate, an over-representation by a factor of about six and a half.

In the Congress, there are 32, an over-representation of nearly three times.

Of course, this overly large presence among "lawmakers," far beyond their proportion of the population, pales in comparison to their over-representation in the mass media, which is legendary and probably is on the order of 2,000 per cent. And it is largely the media that determine who will be elected and who will not.

With my best,

Kevin.

The R7A didn't have the better VFO. The only way to get the better VFO was to get a Drake R4245 which was a military version of the R7/A.

Other than that, one might obtain a RV75 vfo which was the same as that used in the 4245.

I had a RV75 at one time that I obtained at a ridiculously low price but I could not find the 1544 adapter to make it work properly with the R7. So I sold it at a ridiculously high price!

Since then, I've seen some 1544 adapter clones for sale.

But, not to worry. As long as you let the R7/A warm up, it's OK. If it drifts a bit, OK. That's what a damn tuning knob is for!

Liberty Net: July 21, 2012

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

WE LIVE IN A STRANGE country where you need to prove your identity and origin twenty times over to get a driverï¿½s license ï¿½ but not to be President; a country in which leaders and aspiring leaders fall all over themselves to promise to defend the eternal sanctity of Israelï¿½s borders ï¿½ but care not a whit for our own. But there are rational people who recognize the insanity for what it is, and speak out about it on amateur radioï¿½s Liberty Net, which has been serving the public interest, convenience, and necessity since 1974.

Here are just a few of the ideas introduced for vigorous debate during this weekï¿½s session:

ï¿½ In Germany and Switzerland, thereï¿½s a move to ban the barbaric Middle Eastern rite of circumcision. Will the law be directed only at one Middle Eastern religion, though, and exempt another? (13 minutes)

ï¿½ Saying that ï¿½gunsï¿½ killed people in that Colorado theatre is like saying that rolling pins and cast iron skillets commit domestic violence. In truth, if we had a more well-armed population, much individual and government violence and mischief against us would be eliminated ï¿½ the bastards simply wouldnï¿½t dare. (17 minutes)

ï¿½ Some corporate and government types are quietly floating the idea of robotic, computer-controlled cars as a means of limiting and recording the movements of travellers. But the idea will be sold under the banners of ï¿½safetyï¿½ and ï¿½security,ï¿½ of course. (20 minutes)

ï¿½ If we should be blaming any aspect of contemporary America for these repeated, seemingly senseless, MK-Ultra-style violent incidents, it should be alien-controlled Hollywood and its twisted, sociopathic anti-heroes who are the negation of everything Western Civilization once stood for. (36 minutes)

ï¿½ Are we seeing the rise of a media-addled generation so empty, so blank, so lacking in values and empathy that literally millions of them must resort to vicarious, or real, thrill-killing just in order to feel alive? (40 minutes)

ï¿½ The military-industrial complex has now evolved into a much more virulent military-media-industrial-financial complex that rules us here, and aspires to rule humans everywhere. (46 minutes)

ï¿½ Itï¿½s great to welcome Greg, K1YW, back to the net after a number of yearsï¿½ absence. The very first Internet presence of the Liberty Net was the message board that Greg operated back in the 1990s. (49 minutes)

ï¿½ Itï¿½s reported that the Colorado gunman, or a possible accomplice of his, received a cell telephone call a few minutes before beginning his killing spree. Did the caller suggest to him that it would be a good idea to ï¿½pass the time by playing a little solitaireï¿½ ï¿½ or something like that? (51 minutes)

Thanks to Marty, N2IRJ, youï¿½re able to listen to these Liberty Net recordings at home, at work, in your car, or while hiking or jogging with your portable mp3 player. And remember the live feeds during Net times that let you hear the Liberty Net via multiple receivers ï¿½ and have a real-time discussion too.

Remember that all our Internet adjuncts are intended just to enhance the real purpose of the net, which is live and free communication between amateur operators. So please check in to the Liberty Net every Saturday night, usually to be found somewhere in that part of 75 meters above 3950 kHz ï¿½ we have to be flexible to evade jammers and intruders ï¿½ starting at 10PM Eastern Time. Once heard, the sound of W1WCRï¿½s distinctive and powerful signal is unmistakable and youï¿½ll have no trouble finding us and checking in.

Kudos and thanks go to Vic, W1WCR, for his decades of hard work for free speech and amateur radio, and to all of you for checking in!

I'll tune in when they condemn you, ya f00kin pedophile!

And for Israel, why don't you condemn the f00kin 'slims for lobbing rockets into their territory?

Have you ever been to Israel, you f00kin pedophile?

Wait......! Haven't you stated in the past that you HAD to plead guilty so you could be with your kids (or not get butt-fked in prison)?

Now you're saying you didn't plead guilty?

Strom, you need to be deported!

You and Obama will do quite well in Kenya!

I've been to Kenya, and I'm certain you'll both fit in.

Strom, you (a f00kin clown 'tard) can "address" the court all you f00kin want.
That does not necessarily make your "address" factual.

And, that is a fact.

You could be right, as you know more about the Drakes than I would. I'll have to dig it out when I have the time here. I have 2 manuals for this, and they both say Drake ON THE COVERS, so I need to look at this. And, yes they do drift on warm-up. not a big deal, that's why it's called warm up. When i bring one from storage for use in the shack here, it may be on for a few days. If I'm going to dig it out, I want to enjoy it for a while. When I said the better VFO, I meant the RV75, out board unit.

Big bucks for that. Got me thinking here. I looked at the Radiomarine R7 (EAC), natz, says Drake on the rear. The 2 manuals state MSR-2, made for EAC, main receiver- marine use. I know it's Drake, and not the R7, as you state. Feb., 1977, so does this pre-date the R7 line?
I need to check the link you provided on the updated museum site.
Always good info Steve, thanks. It's a cool receiver, love the nixies.
That takes me back. Anyhow, you have a great day, I gotta get moving

According to the time line on the museum site it looks as though the R7 came out in 1977, and the MSR's of some sort began in 1971, MSR-2 in 1974.

Nope - not sticking up for pedophiles. In fact I propose a 3 cent (permanent) cure for it.

Under my plan, there would be NO repeat offenders and lawyers who knowingly defended them would ... well ... be ... disbarred and sentenced to scrubbing rest-rooms at Sam's club ... for LIFE.

With that said .. what concrete proof do we have of Kevin's involvement in pedophilia?

The only thing I know is he's involved in NatVan, and his pet project, The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net.

Why Mitt Romney is Unlikable.

A lot is being said in the media about Mitt Romney not being "likable" or that he doesn't "relate well" to people. Frankly, we struggled to understand why. So after much research, we have come up with a Top Ten List to explain this "unlikablility."

Top Ten Reasons To Dislike Mitt Romney:

1. Drop-dead, collar-ad handsome with gracious, statesmanlike aura. Looks like every central casting's #1 choice for Commander-in-Chief.

2. Been married to ONE woman his entire life, and has been faithful to her, including through her bouts with breast cancer and MS.

3. No scandals or skeletons in his closet. (How boring is that?)

4. Can't or wouldn't speak in a fake, southern, "black preacher voice" when necessary.

5. Highly intelligent. Graduated cum laude from both Harvard Law School and Harvard Business School... and by the way, his academic records are NOT sealed.

6. Doesn't smoke or drink alcohol, and has never done drugs, not even in the counter-culture age when he went to college. Too square for today's America?

7. Represents an America of "yesterday", where people believed in God, went to Church, didn't screw around, worked hard, and became a SUCCESS!

8. Has a family of five great sons....and none of them have police records or are in drug rehab. But of course, they were raised by a stay-at-home mom, and that "choice" deserves America's scorn.

9. Oh yes.....he's a MORMON. We need to be very afraid of that very strange religion that teaches its members to be clean-living, patriotic, fiscally conservative, charitable, self-reliant, and honest.

10. And one more point.....pundits say because of his wealth, he can't relate to ordinary Americans. I guess that's because he made that money HIMSELF.....as opposed to marrying it or inheriting it from Dad. Apparently, he didn't understand that actually working at a job and earning your own money made you unrelatable to Americans.

My goodness, it's a strange world, isn't it?

He may have a "statesmanlike aura"; too bad he doesn't have a statesmanlike brain. There is nothing more "soft ball" in diplomacy than in dealing with England. Yet Romney managed to piss off the British people, the Prime Minister and the mayor of the City of London with his "statesman-like" comments.

Furthermore, when he met with the head of Brit intelligence, MI 6, he was asked to keep the meeting private. Yet at his next public press conference, he blabbed about the MI 6 meeting. What part of "keep-it-private" didn't he understand? Some statesman that boy is...

Hmmm...the original founders of Mormonism said they were allowed to have sex with church member wives. Oh, did I say wives? They said "wives AND daughters". Look it up!

Yeah, according to FELLOW REPUBLICAN Rick Perry, Romney made it by himself by VULTURE capitalism (Perry's word). Romney busted up companies, sold off divisions and raided their pension funds. After he raided the pension fund of one company, the (former) employees had to go to the Federal government, the Pension Benefit Guarantee Corporation (PBGC) so you and I, the taxpayers, had to cover the pensions that he raided. Again, look it up!

Finally, you forgot Item 11 on your "Love Romney" list...

11. Romney is a master, world-class flip-flopper.

-He has been for and against abortion.

-He saved the auto companies and he wanted them to go bankrupt.

-He was for govt. health care (and individual mandates). He was against govt. health care and individual mandates.

-Referring to meals on the campaign trail, he said "I'm not a catfish man". A different time he said "I LOVE catfish!".

I will show you the actual newsreels to back up every single statement above.

This is an excellent example of state terrorism. So many people are rotting in American gulags because they were coerced into pleading guilty. "Would you rather plead guilty and do five years or fifty? It's your choice." Such a cruel gambit.

Leon Trotsky provided many great insights into the use of terrorism in his treatise "Terrorism and Communism", a few examples:

"But terror can be very efficient against a reactionary class which does not want to leave the scene of operations. Intimidation is a powerful weapon of policy, both internationally and internally. War, like revolution, is founded upon intimidation. A victorious war, generally speaking, destroys only an insignificant part of the conquered army, intimidating the remainder and breaking their will. The revolution works in the same way: it kills individuals, and intimidates thousands. In this sense, the Red Terror is not distinguishable from the armed insurrection, the direct continuation of which it represents. The State terror of a revolutionary class can be condemned “morally” only by a man who, as a principle, rejects (in words) every form of violence whatsoever – consequently, every war and every rising."

"The problem of revolution, as of war, consists in breaking the will of the foe, forcing him to capitulate and to accept the conditions of the conqueror. The will, of course, is a fact of the physical world, but in contradistinction to a meeting, a dispute, or a congress, the revolution carries out its object by means of the employment of material resources – though to a less degree than war. The bourgeoisie itself conquered power by means of revolts, and consolidated it by the civil war. In the peaceful period, it retains power by means of a system of repression. As long as class society, founded on the most deep-rooted antagonisms, continues to exist, repression remains a necessary means of breaking the will of the opposing side."

"Even if, in one country or another, the dictatorship of the proletariat grew up within the external framework of democracy, this would by no means avert the civil war. The question as to who is to rule the country, i.e., of the life or death of the bourgeoisie, will be decided on either side, not by references to the paragraphs of the constitution, but by the employment of all forms of violence. However deeply Kautsky goes into the question of the food of the anthropopithecus (see page 122 et seq. of his book) and other immediate and remote conditions which determine the cause of human cruelty, he will find in history no other way of breaking the class will of the enemy except the systematic and energetic use of violence."

"The degree of ferocity of the struggle depends on a series of internal and international circumstances. The more ferocious and dangerous is the resistance of the class enemy who have been overthrown, the more inevitably does the system of repression take the form of a system of terror."

The complete treatise can be read online at http://www.marxists.org/archive/trotsky/1920/terrcomm/index.htm Chapter Four: Terrorism is quite insightful and applicable to current circumatances. The title could quite aptly be "Terrorism and Capitalism".

Lastly, don't let the loud mouth moron in the peanut gallery get you down. As you stated, the intelligent folks here understand that you were railroaded. I thought we established that fact a long time ago. Keep posting, your insights are among the few worthy of reading in this withering newsgroup.

JERUSALEM (AP) - Standing on Israeli soil, U.S. presidential candidate Mitt Romney on Sunday declared Jerusalem to be the capital of the Jewish state and said the United States has "a solemn duty and a moral imperative" to block Iran from achieving nuclear weapons capability.

"Make no mistake, the ayatollahs in Iran are testing our moral defenses. They want to know who will object and who will look the other way," he said. "We will not look away nor will our country ever look away from our passion and commitment to Israel."

The presidential election hovered over the speech. The Old City formed a made-for-television backdrop behind Romney, while some of his campaign donors listened in the audience.

Romney's declaration that Jerusalem is Israel's capital was matter-of-fact and in keeping with claims made by Israeli governments for decades, even though the United States, like other nations, maintains its embassy in Tel Aviv. Story continued at http://apnews.myway.com/article/20120729/DA0AQGP80.html

Not to be outdone, President Obama on Friday signed a bill increasing military aid to Israel by $70 million.
http://www.timesofisrael.com/obama-approves-70-billion-in-military-aid-to-israel/
I had to chuckle when reading various news reports regarding this, all used the verb "sailed" through Congress when the vote for approval was taken. Isn't it interesting that they have unlimited funds for the parasite state of Israel but continue to cut funding for America's senior citizens who have payed taxes all their working lives.

Obama and Romney; errand boys. Congress: errand boys. Supreme Court: errand boys.
What a nauseating collection of empty suits.

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
23 - 29 July 2012

Solar activity was at very low to high levels through the period.
The summary period began at very low to low levels from 23 - 26
July, with multiple low level C-class events observed. An increase to moderate levels was observed on 27 July, as Region 1532 (S22, L= 183, class/area Fho/510 on 28 July) produced an M2/Sf x-ray event at 1726 UTC. Associated with this event were distinct radio frequency bursts as well as a Type II (estimated shock speed of 2099 km/s) and Type IV Radio sweeps, as well as a coronal mass ejection (CME).
After careful analysis, the associated CME was determined to not be Earth directed. On 28 July, and increase to high levels was observed as Region 1532 produced an M6/2n x-ray flare at 28/2056 UTC.
Associated with this event were both Type II (estimated shock speed of 1387 km/s) and Type IV radio sweeps, discrete radio frequency spikes, and a 370 sfu Tenflare. Imagery supported a CME liftoff with this event, however due to the location of Region 1532, very little effects are expected at Earth. On the last day of the forecast period, 29 July, a return to moderate levels was observed, as Region 1532 produced an M2/1n x-ray event at 29/0622 UTC.

A greater than 10 MeV proton event at geosynchronous orbit began at 23/1545 UTC, reached a maximum flux of 12 pfu at 23/2145 UTC, and ended at 24/1800 UTC. This event was due to flare activity from old Region 1520 (S16, L=086) which was almost 40 degrees beyond the west limb.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at high levels from 23 - 28 July. A decrease to moderate levels was observed on 29 July.

Geomagnetic field activity was at mostly quiet to unsettled levels throughout the summary period with isolated periods of minor storm levels observed at high latitudes on 23, 24, and 28 July. Activity on 23 July was at quiet to unsettled levels with solar wind speeds, as measured by the ACE spacecraft, hovering around 450 km/s. On 24 July, solar wind speeds increased to almost 600 km/s, as a coronal hole high speed stream (CH HSS), became geoeffective. With these elevated solar winds, quiet to unsettled levels were observed with an isolated period at minor storm levels observed at high latitudes. As effects of the CH HSS waned, solar wind speeds declined and remained between 380 and 500 km/s for the remainder of the period. With solar wind speeds around nominal levels, mostly quiet to unsettled levels also prevailed through 29 July.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
30 July - 25 August 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at low to moderate levels from 30 July - 15 August as Region 1532 and old Region 1520 (S16, L=086) rotate across the visible disk. A decrease to mostly low levels is expected from 16 - 23 August. As Region 1532 rotates back onto the visible disk on 23 August, an increase to low to moderate levels is expected for the remainder of the forecast period.

A greater than 10 MeV proton event at geosynchronous orbit is possible from 30 July - 18 August as Region 1532 and old Region 1520 traverse the visible disk.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at normal to moderate levels throughout the period since most of the coronal hole structures have dissipated.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be at predominantly quiet levels from 30 July - 19 August and 22 - 23 August. Quiet to unsettled levels are expected from 20 - 21 August and 24 - 25 August as weak CH HSS become geoeffective.

I know quite a few people, all quite sucessful, who smoked and some still smoke, a shitload of pot in high school/college. It did nothing for me but make me slighlty sleepy and cough a lot for a day afterwards.

Big deal. Better a pothead than a drunk.

If you are monitoring for one of the intelligence agencies, I guess they write home about, especially considering the outrageous price they command. Your mileage may vary.

For a third of the price I would much rather have a top-drawer ham

hi,

Miracles in the Holy Qur’aan : MOUNTAINS ARE LIKE PEGS (STAKES)

In Geology, the phenomenon of ‘folding’ is a recently discovered fact.
Folding is responsible for the formation of mountain ranges. The earth’s crust, on which we live, is like a solid shell, while the deeper layers are hot and fluid, and thus inhospitable to any form of life. It is also known that the stability of the mountains is linked to the phenomenon of folding, for it was the folds that were to provide foundations for the reliefs that constitute the mountains. Geologists tell us that the radius of the Earth is about 3,750 miles and the crust on which we live is very thin, ranging between 1 to 30 miles.
Since the crust is thin, it has a high possibility of shaking. Mountains act like stakes or tent pegs that hold the earth’s crust and give it stability. The Qur’aan contains exactly such a description in the following verse: “Have We not made The earth as a wide Expanse, And the mountains as pegs?” [Al-Qur’aan 78:6-7]
The word awtad means stakes or pegs (like those used to anchor a tent); they are the deep foundations of geological folds. A book named ‘Earth’ is considered as a basic reference textbook on geology in many universities around the world. One of the authors of this book is Frank Press, who was the President of the Academy of Sciences in the USA for 12 years and was the Science Advisor to former US President Jimmy Carter. In this book he illustrates the mountain in a wedge-shape and the mountain itself as a small part of the whole, whose root is deeply entrenched in the ground.(5) Accordingto Dr. Press, the mountains play an important role in stabilizing the crust ofthe earth.
The Qur’aan clearly mentions the function of the mountains in preventing the earth from shaking: “And We have set on the earth Mountains standing firm, Lest it should shake with them.” [Al-Qur’aan 21:31]
The Qur’aanic descriptions are in perfect agreement with modern geological data.

Just in case you didn't see this on Faux News...

Mitt Romney, when giving a speech in Israel, highly praised the Israeli health care system.

Uh, Mitt, how come you or your staff didn't realize that the Israeli health care system is highly socialized, way more so than Obamacare or Romney care.

Tim Pawlenty, when giving a speech yesterday, twice brought up that tired old saw about Obama using a Teleprompter(tm).

Could somebody please tell Timmy that EVERY president of both parties since the mid-fifties has used a Teleprompter, including both Bushes and Ronnie Reagan.

Or at least have him explain why it's bad for Obama to use a Teleprompter but it's OK for Republicans to use one.

Kind of makes you wish for the days of GW, doesn't it.

The more I hear from Romney, the more I'm convinced he's not The Guy.

I have mine which dates back to 1969 or so.

I was first licensed in 1970.

Yeah, back in the old 5 WPM Morse code days. But, my license lapsed as shortly later I had other things to do.

But the Morse helped and at one time I could actually do Russian Morse (Cyrillic), and had some understanding of it, though I am certainly not a Russian speaker.

I was re-licensed back around 1990 or so, but still had to do 13 (I think) WPM to get the General Class ticket.

The great thing was I didn't practice, study, or whatever to pass the 13 WPM.

I learned it once, and never forgot it.

OK, then degrees of honesty.

Ya want the guy currently in the office to continue?

I have not found anything that can beat a Perseus SDR - not as convienent as a stand alone receiver but if you cut off the AGC and enable the sychronous detector it can make the weakest AM signals readable. Unfortunately, it puts my ham transceiver to shame.

Yes, I caught it and as you may recall I posted a link here to a WJ (BAE) receiver a short time ago.

It's pretty much a throwback to primitive times when men were men and women were chattel.

Summed up in a sentence, 'Women's place is in the kitchen, not the Olympics.'

Yes, I can relate to that in a way. But, at the time, there was little real knowledge of the results of nuclear blasts.

And yes, I've read the books, and realize that those who developed nuclear weapons faced a lot of issues, even death, in perfecting the weapons.

As an aside, I've been on the phone in the last two days with the VA (our Veterans Administration), with regards to Radio Frequency radiation from radar equipment.

Fortunately, I got a prompt response and am awaiting word about a Compensation and Pension Exam in Battle Creek.

Having said that, I've expressed my concerns over the past few days about the "compensation" part, as I'm very much aware that every dollar that is given to me (or others) must be extracted from someone else.

That bothers me.

I would also like to thank your uncle who served in the RAF. Many fine individuals served in the RAF, and kept the UK the great nation that it is.

God Save the Queen.

Based upon my experience, I would strongly advise you to pick up the phone, call the VA, and get some answers,

I know full well, that many times, that phone is a very heavy device, and we are afraid to pick it up, much to our detriment.

Thanks for your service to our country, and good luck.

Compensation for what?

Typical RF issues are thyroid cancer and cataracts.

LOL!!! That is a great editorial cartoon! Ridicule is a very effective tool, the ruling elite and their flunkies in the media have used it brilliantly for over a century.

I love the open toilet on Romney's head and many of the reader's comments posted below the story are excellent as well. And the drawing could be transposed into many settings. For example, students sitting in a class all with open toilet seats on their heads while a University professor lectures them. Brilliant. Thanks for posting the Yes that is the point we are all making. I guess we should add the "Reverend" Michael Luther King to the list of luminaries. After all, he did make more love than war. The FBI has the undercover tapes from

NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

TOP LEFT: Mitt Romney meets Prime Minister David Cameron, who, after hearing GOPer criticize Olympics, sniped anyone could hold Games in 'middle of nowhere.' TOP RIGHT: GOP hopeful plans Cold War-style 'Liberty' speech targeting Russian Prez Vladimir Putin and his undoing of democratic reforms. BOTTOM LEFT: Romney visits Western Wall in Israel, where he was hit for setting fund-raiser on Jewish holy day and dissing Palestinians with talk of God favoring Israel and its 'culture.' BOTTOM RIGHT: Candidate meets with former Polish President and labor hero Lech Walesa on Monday in Gdansk. Walesa hailed Romney, but some folks in crowd chanted 'Obama!'

Mitt
Romney's trip to the United Kingdom, Israel and Poland was to be his introduction to the world, proof to America that he would be a steady hand on the foreign policy tiller.

Instead, all
I can say is: Oy, Mitt. Oy.

Romney, as always, looked the part of President. But then he ad-libbed his way to insulting the British on the eve of the Olympics and, more seriously, denigrating the Palestinians in prepared remarks while in Israel.

Flubbing a question on the London Games? Embarrassing, but no harm, no foul. In the tinderbox that is the Middle East, though, every careless spark runs the risk of doing lasting damage.

Romney, speaking to a group of donors, meant to praise Israel's success. In the process, he demeaned Palestinians - pointing to "a dramatically stark difference in economic vitality"☐ between the Jewish state and the occupied territories. His diagnosis:
"Culture makes all the difference." Then, among other factors playing to Israel's favor, he cited "the hand of providence."☐

Yikes. If
Romney becomes President, he will have to work with both sides. It is no small thing to suggest you view one group as culturally inferior. It is no small thing to suggest that God plays favorites.

Obviously culture matters. It has helped make Israel a global engine of innovation. For years, Arab nations have been soul-searching about why they've struggled to keep up; that's part of what fuels the Arab Spring.

But in the delicate context of the Mideast, it is tone-deaf to bring this up with no recognition of the legitimate gripes of Palestinians. They struggle under occupation. They have been shunned by Arab neighbors. That, and cycles of terror and war against Israel, is what holds them back - not some ingrained handicap.

Indeed, look at how well the West Bank is doing economically of late, in contrast to Gaza, and you see that it's governance that makes the difference, not culture.

For Romney to attribute Israel's success partially to providence is damn near dangerous. Imagine how it'll play in translation in Muslim-majority countries: The would-be President thinks the Lord made Israel rich. Nevermind the logical fallacy. Is it also God's will that the Arabs got most of the oil, which is why Qatar and Brunei are far richer than Israel per capita? If they're twice as wealthy as mostly Catholic Poland, is that because Allah made them so?

To complete the trifecta, Romney hailed Israel's health care system as a model of delivering quality care for less money. Guess what? Israel has a national mandate and heavily regulates every aspect of care. Mitt Romney wants to project himself as a Reaganesque commander-in-chief - in contrast to conservatives' caricature of Obama as President Carter. The truth is, he is struggling to define himself against Obama, who has overseen a successful foreign policy. He got Osama Bin Laden. He wound down one costly war and has begun extracting us from another. He put tighter economic sanctions than ever on Iran. Drones are pounding terrorist strongholds.

Romney won't acknowledge any of that. All he'll do is keep trying to look the part.

Maybe you should ask Henry directly what he did with the money?

You might be surprised.

I don't want to brag but it might be insructional.

Just a few days past a year ago, I found two 100 dollar bills. I tried as best as I could to find the owner. Thought I found him this morning, but no dice.

I called the local Boys and Girls club of Holland, Michigan and donated the $200 to them.

Right near the same time, I walked across the street, and gave $20 to a neighbour who I could see after a long period of just watching, was trying to help out other, handicapped, disadvantaged, folks from his church.

I am so damn sick and tired of you clown 'tard liberals, I could just puke.

I knew the REAL reason the Jews want to attack Iran would finally surface. No sleazy banksters stealing working people's money? No usuary? Absolute blasphemy according to the Jews.

"If toothless federal regulations is your pet cause, look to Iran for inspiration: It just sentenced four bankers involved in a billion-dollar financial scandal to death. On Monday, an Iranian court dished out sentences in the country's biggest bank-fraud scandal to date: The embezzlement of $2.6 billion. Besides the four death sentences, 39 people were tried, two people were sent to life in prison and the others received jail sentences of up to 25 years. By comparison, Bernie Madoff, who defrauded investors of more than 20 times that amount, will live to see another day and not a single top finance exec has faced U.S. criminal charges since the economic collapse began. While Wall Street critics in this country aren't literally blood thirsty, it's a bold crackdown on financial malfeasance nonetheless."

Out of date study so actually the cost is higher today. Small wonder Jews contemptuously refer to us as "stupid cattle" (goyim).

Economist tallies swelling cost of Israel to US
http://www.csmonitor.com/2002/1209/p16s01-wmgn.html
By David R. Francis, Staff writer of The Christian Science Monitor / December 9, 2002

Since 1973, Israel has cost the United States about $1.6 trillion. If divided by today's population, that is more than $5,700 per person.

This is an estimate by Thomas Stauffer, a consulting economist in Washington. For decades, his analyses of the Middle East scene have made him a frequent thorn in the side of the Israel lobby.

For the first time in many years, Mr. Stauffer has tallied the total cost to the US of its backing of Israel in its drawn-out, violent dispute with the Palestinians. So far, he figures, the bill adds up to more than twice the cost of the Vietnam War.

And now Israel wants more. In a meeting at the White House late last month, Israeli officials made a pitch for $4 billion in additional military aid to defray the rising costs of dealing with the intifada and suicide bombings. They also asked for more than $8 billion in loan guarantees to help the country's recession-bound economy.

Considering Israel's deep economic troubles, Stauffer doubts the Israel bonds covered by the loan guarantees will ever be repaid. The bonds are likely to be structured so they don't pay interest until they reach maturity. If Stauffer is right, the US would end up paying both principal and interest, perhaps 10 years out.

Israel's request could be part of a supplemental spending bill that's likely to be passed early next year, perhaps wrapped in with the cost of a war with Iraq.

Israel is the largest recipient of US foreign aid. It is already due to get $2.04 billion in military assistance and $720 million in economic aid in fiscal 2003. It has been getting $3 billion a year for years.

Adjusting the official aid to 2001 dollars in purchasing power, Israel has been given $240 billion since 1973, Stauffer reckons. In addition, the US has given Egypt $117 billion and Jordan $22 billion in foreign aid in return for signing peace treaties with Israel.

"Consequently, politically, if not administratively, those outlays are part of the total package of support for Israel," argues Stauffer in a lecture on the total costs of US Middle East policy, commissioned by the US Army War College, for a recent conference at the University of Maine.

These foreign-aid costs are well known. Many Americans would probably say it is money well spent to support a beleagured democracy of some strategic interest. But Stauffer wonders if Americans are aware of the full bill for supporting Israel since some costs, if not hidden, are little known.

One huge cost is not secret. It is the higher cost of oil and other economic damage to the US after Israel-Arab wars.

In 1973, for instance, Arab nations attacked Israel in an attempt to win back territories Israel had conquered in the 1967 war. President Nixon resupplied Israel with US arms, triggering the Arab oil embargo against the US.

That shortfall in oil deliveries kicked off a deep recession. The US lost $420 billion (in 2001 dollars) of output as a result, Stauffer calculates. And a boost in oil prices cost another $450 billion.

Afraid that Arab nations might use their oil clout again, the US set up a Strategic Petroleum Reserve. That has since cost, conservatively, $134 billion, Stauffer reckons.

Other US help includes:

• US Jewish charities and organizations have remitted grants or bought Israel bonds worth $50 billion to $60 billion. Though private in origin, the money is "a net drain" on the United States economy, says Stauffer.

• The US has already guaranteed $10 billion in commercial loans to Israel, and $600 million in "housing loans." (See editor's note below.) Stauffer expects the US Treasury to cover these.

• The US has given $2.5 billion to support Israel's Lavi fighter and Arrow missile projects.

• Israel buys discounted, serviceable "excess" US military equipment. Stauffer says these discounts amount to "several billion dollars" over recent years.

• Israel uses roughly 40 percent of its $1.8 billion per year in military aid, ostensibly earmarked for purchase of US weapons, to buy Israeli-made hardware. It also has won the right to require the Defense Department or US defense contractors to buy Israeli-made equipment or subsystems, paying 50 to 60 cents on every defense dollar the US gives to Israel.

US help, financial and technical, has enabled Israel to become a major weapons supplier. Weapons make up almost half of Israel's manufactured exports. US defense contractors often resent the buy-Israel requirements and the extra competition subsidized by US taxpayers.

• US policy and trade sanctions reduce US exports to the Middle East about $5 billion a year, costing 70,000 or so American jobs, Stauffer estimates. Not requiring Israel to use its US aid to buy American goods, as is usual in foreign aid, costs another 125,000 jobs.

• Israel has blocked some major US arms sales, such as F-15 fighter aircraft to Saudi Arabia in the mid-1980s. That cost $40 billion over 10 years, says Stauffer.

Stauffer's list will be controversial. He's been assisted in this research by a number of mostly retired military or diplomatic officials who do not go public for fear of being labeled anti-Semitic if they criticize America's policies toward Israel.

Handy Shortwave Chart
Bill McFadden
billmc@agora.rdrop.com

Band allocations and time zone conversions for the USA. Includes broadcast bands used outside the USA. For multi-use bands, primary usage is shown.
Some stations operate outside official bands. Information is from Oct 2008
FCC rules and Sep 2009 NTIA manual, see Chapter 4 of:
http://www.ntia.doc.gov/osmhome/redbook/redbook.html

Frequencies are in kHz. Usual spacing in shortwave broadcast bands is 5 kHz. Frequencies above 10000 kHz tend to propagate better during the day;
frequencies below 10000 kHz tend to propagate better at night.

Please e-mail suggestions and corrections to billmc@agora.rdrop.com.

Phone line as SW antenna

Changes preceded by "|".

WARNINGS AND DISCLAIMERS

Connecting unapproved devices to phone lines may be illegal in your area. Telephone lines present a potential shock hazard. Do not use this antenna for transmitting. Use at your own risk.

INTRODUCTION

This article describes how to use a phone line as a shortwave receiving antenna. Performance will vary depending on the kind of phone line you have. Overhead lines usually make okay antennas, while underground lines
| usually don't. Phone lines carrying DSL service may be unsuitable because | DSL operates over a wide spectrum. A phone line antenna will generally pick up more power line noise than a dedicated antenna, so don't expect to | use it for DX work. Nevertheless, I found that it outperformed the
| telescopic whip antennas built into many portables.

A reader sent in this suggestion: If you're concerned about connecting the phone line directly to the receiver, try wrapping the phone cord several times around the receiver's telescopic whip antenna instead. Performance may not be as good as a direct connection, but it will probably be better than the whip antenna by itself.

Someone else wrote asking about lightning protection. I haven't thought much about it because thunderstorms are rare in my area. Most phone lines have lightning arrestors on them where they enter the house, but the lightning arrestors may pass enough energy during a lightning strike damage a receiver. My suggestion is to disconnect the antenna when not in use if you experience frequent thunderstorms.

HOW TO DO IT

The simplest connection is a single capacitor between the phone line and receiver. The capacitor eliminates all phone line voltages, including | ringing, so that they will not harm the receiver. The capacitor should | be rated 250 volts or higher.

Phone line RF connector
red .01 uF center cond. / \ or o--------||-----------------------------|-o | To receiver
green \ /
50 ohm coax |
ground |
or o-----------------------------------------+ N.C. shield

N.C. = no connect. I originally connected the phone line ground (yellow wire) to this terminal, but reception was better without it (if you do this, play it safe and put a .01 uF capacitor in series). If another ground is available, you can connect it to this terminal.

If you are picking up local AM or FM radio stations on the shortwave bands, it is likely that your receiver is overloaded. Inexpensive and portable receivers usually lack the filtering needed to eliminate this interference, but you can make your own filters. Filters can also be | purchased from shortwave dealers (see below for recommendations).

A high-pass filter can be used to remove signals below the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from local AM stations and presents a high impedance to the phone line at audio frequencies so that the phone line remains balanced.

A low-pass filter can be used to remove signals above the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from FM and TV stations, as well as VHF 2-way radio transmitters. If you use both filters, connect the output of the first filter to the input of the second (don't forget to connect their ground terminals together). It doesn't matter which filter is connected first.

These filters also work well with random wire antennas. Just connect the antenna in place of the phone line.

The filter(s) should be connected to the phone line in this manner:

Phone line RF connector
red -------- center cond. / \
or o----| |-------------------------|-o | To receiver
green | | \ /
| FILTER | 50 ohm coax |
ground | | |
or o----| |----------------------------+
N.C. -------- shield
```

FILTER PLANS

The original credit for the high-pass and low-pass filters goes to Paul Blumstein and John Shalamskas, respectively. Edited versions of their articles are included here:

Date: 09 Jan 91 00:54:08 GMT
From: paulb@harley.TTI.COM (Paul Blumstein)
Subject: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

The following ascii-schematic diagram is a high pass filter that will filter out Broadcast Band (MW) stations. I found it a great boon to my shortwave listening since local MW stations overload my ATS-803A front end & appear in SW, especially with a long antenna.

If you remember my antenna saga, I went from 50 feet to 150 feet & had overload problems causing me to cut back to 50 feet. (Even at 50 feet, I still have some MW interference). I took the advice of Gary Coffman and looked up filters in the ARRL Handbook. With the filter in place, I intend to try to increase my antenna length again.

Anywho, here is the filter, for interested parties.

--------||---+----||-----+----||-----------
} }
{ {
} }
-------------+-----------+-----------------
```

The outer capacitors are 1500 pf ceramic disks.
The inner capacitor is 820 pf ceramic disk.
The squiggly things are coils (two total). Each one is 2.7 uh.
(a close value will do).

From: bill@videovax.tv.tek.com (William K. McFadden)
Subject: Re: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

I built the filter that Paul Blumstein posted recently and measured it on a gain-phase analyzer. Here are its characteristics:

100 kHz -120dB
500 kHz -68dB

1000 kHz -38dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2100 kHz -3dB

The source and load impedances were 50 ohms. Because the filter has five elements, the attenuation is 30dB per octave. The measurements confirmed this.

This filter seems to be a good compromise between interference attenuation and passband response. There is very little attenuation in the 120m band and above. It could use a little more attenuation at the upper end of MW, which could be done with more stages or a higher cutoff frequency. Alternatively, you could build two of these filters and put them in series. (Since two 1500pF capacitors in series are really 750pF, you could eliminate one cap.)

Just for fun, I put 470 ohms in series with the input to see how the filter performed with an antenna mismatch. The response was:

100 kHz -105dB
500 kHz -60dB
1000 kHz -35dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2300 kHz -3dB

These figures are normalized to the passband response of -15dB, which is due to the impedance mismatch between the source and load and would have been there without the filter. Hence, the filter works almost as well in spite of the mismatch, which is good news to those who use long-wire antennas.

From: johns@uhunix.uhcc.Hawaii.Edu (John Shalamskas)
Subject: Construction of filters for SW reception

Several people have asked for construction details of the filters I built for my DX-440.

The high-pass filter helped some, but in my location the VHF/UHF broadcasters are also causing problems. So, I dug out the ARRL handbook and chose a 7-element Chebyshev low-pass design that is -3 dB at 35 MHz, -20 dB at 43 MHz, and -50 dB at 64 MHz (all calculated; it works well in practice!)

LOW-PASS FILTER (Rejects FM, TV, etc.)

chassis ground

I had to do a little more improvising at this point. I used .33 uH instead of .36, and .66 uH instead of .42, but it works fine.

The 5-lug terminal strips were perfect for these circuits, since there are 4 lugs plus a grounded lug. All "ground" connections go to the lug that is mounted to the chassis, and the other 4 lugs are used for each of the connections on the signal line. One terminal strip is used per filter. Since both filters were necessary to clean up the hash, I am going to put them both into one box when I get the time.

The proper way to connect them is in series, i.e.

signal in ------- filter 1 -------- filter 2 -------- signal out

There is no difference between ends. They are "bilateral" which means you can't possibly hook them up backwards. (In the above schematics, left and right ends are interchangeable.)

COIL WINDING

You can make the coils yourself using this formula:

L = 0.2 * B^2 * N^2 / (3B + 9A + 10C)

L is the inductance, in uH
A is the length of the coil, in inches
B is the mean diameter of the coil, in inches
C is the diameter of the wire, in inches
N is the number of turns

For small wire, you can assume C = 0.

Where was the lie?

That you're a clown 'tard?

Or me being a bald face liar?

Well, I thought it was pretty clear.

1) You said you were applying to the VA for compensation for an ailment presumably related to radar exposure.

2) Then I said:

3) As a side issue, I commented on common ailments caused by microwave exposure:

Sorry, didn't mean it to be complicated or to confuse you, nor do I necessarily poke into people's medical issues...but YOU posted in a public forum, YOU said you were applying for compensation for a microwave related ailment. The logical follow-up question is "what ailment?", as some people on this radio related forum may also have had microwave exposure.

Well, I'm not certain what the ailment might be as I suffer from many. Eye problems, bone problems, you name it.

My real intent was not to obtain compensation, which would be nice I guess, but I'd simply be faced with the burden of trying to get rid of a good part of it to some good causes.

My real intent is to hopefully be able to add to the medical record so that others might be able to avoid problems in the future in the service of our country.

And, the reason I was applying was because it was recommended to me by a VA service rep. I picked up the phone, called the VA, and without hesitation they were going to set me up with an exam. They must be far more well versed in this type of thing than I am.

To add to this, I highly encourage any individual here who is here, and thinks they may have some problem that is a result of their service to our nation, to not hesitate, pick up the phone and call the VA.

There are a lot of experienced people there who want to help.

I absolutely love the reference "shine box".

I have a few old shoe shine boxes. One of them is an antique, it is beat up and raggity looking. Oviously home made, by a guy in New Orleans. Another one I have is made sort of like a foot stool/cabinet. A hinged door on one side, and the hinged top opens up, there are some old tacks on the top, I reckon originally there was a padded seat.There is a cast iron foot rest and a round hollowed out place for a can of shoe polish. If you want to hear some part of the circus that is currently going on in Illinois, tune into WLS 890.

The highly publicized trial of Drew Peterson is underway, and it is a laugh a minute.

No, I'm not laughing because several people are dead, but simply because of the way the court system there seems to be handling the case.

Now it's my turn to be confused...

It seems like:

1) You are saying you have a variety of general ailments with unknown cause(s).

2) The VA graciously said to come on in for a check up.

All well and good for both parties...but where I get confused is how microwave/radar got in the picture. Any reason to specifically suspect microwave or just fishin' and speculating?

We certainly don't need to see you entire medical chart (none of our business), but please let us know if they can relate anything specifically to microwave.

Well, I can say that due to the nature of my job, I was certainly exposed to high levels of RF radiation.

I'm not fishing, but perhaps I am speculating, because I just don't know.

Simply looking for answers.

Thanks for asking, and after I get some definitive answers I'll make sure I get back here and perhaps answer your concerns more specifically.

And in doing so, perhaps I might be able to help others.

You might have heard them at some time even later than that when they go into the "Spice FM" programming.

Much different music, more modern I suppose. I've heard them as late as 2115 or so within the the last couple of months or so.

Most times I listen because I like their regular music, they have something they use, and I'm not sure if it is a keyboard type instrument or not, but I am always intrigued by the melodic nature of it.

Think they had just gone into the Spice FM part and they cut the transmitter after starting another song.

I just started listening to them and I do like some of the music. I think that is some sort of keyboard instrument that they play - or maybe its one of those lamellophones. Have to look on Youtube.

Good luck. Hope it all works out for you.

I was specifically interested in RF being a possible cause. In a former life I was responsible for EMI and EMC for a large corporation and in the course of that job, I did quite a bit of research on the biological effects of RF.

I only came up with a couple of things: cataracts and thyroid cancer from microwave radiation...and that was mostly anecdotal.

The only documented scientific study of biological RF effects available at the time showed that maple and birch trees near Project ELF in your Upper Peninsula experienced a mildly accelerated growth rate. [Project ELF was the use of extremely low frequencies, < 60 Hz, for submarine communications.]

If they can relate your ills to RF, the VA will be plowing entirely new ground.

One of my kids ran a VA clinic in the Midwest for a couple of years treating WW II vets on up and quite frankly, many of their ills were self inflicted -- obesity, drinking, smoking, lack of exercise (to say nothing of just getting old). Unfortunately, all that "fun" stuff we did in our youth has a way of catching up with us.

Again, best of luck!

The jet stream has brought your rain here. We've had the wettest April and June on record, and July had double the recent average rainfall. The last few days have been mostly dry, but the forecasts all say more rain on the way, and it looks like it's just arrived.

All our monsoons have been shifted north by several hundred miles, resulting in flooding and deaths in N. Korea, and very very hot, very dry weather in S. Korea. Our temps have been in the high 30's C (over 100F) here.. which is totally unprecedented, as normally it can never get above 32C (about 90F) before offshore winds kick in and cool it down a few degrees. I'm gonna REALLY hate to see our electric bill this month... normally it's around US$800 for all our properties, but I expect it to be well over $1000 this month, possibly significantly more... :(Just to keep our office and one other room down to 28C.

Using binoculars, I saw a huge sunspot at sunrise this morning, which for me was right after 6:00 a.m. outside Washington, DC. It looked like the transit of Venus. Really, it was that large and noticeable.

The atmosphere was so humidity-laden that I could look at the sun through the binoculars without any needing any glass from a welder's mask. YMMV.

Do you remember the giant sunspots during the 1960's you could see with the naked eye? Solar flux over 200. I used to pick up WWV on 25 MHz on my cheap walkie-talkies. New Zealand used to blast in around midnight local time just below 18 MHz. Good times.

I'm surprised you could hear 25MHz WWV on a cheap walkie talkie. Surely band conditions opened up that you'd get all the CBers first, so they'd wipe out WWV. The superregenerative receivers were wide band, but the CBers were a lot more plentiful.

I remember when I got my first shortwave receiver in 1971, I'd tune up and down the CB band, and when conditions were good, it was one big squeal, all the heterodynes and just solid signal from all the stations packed into such a small space, and conditions good so even 3.5watts out would come booming in from elsewhere.

72. WWV would have been what? About 50KW? At any rate, a lot more powerful than a 3W CB.

I didn't think there was that big a difference between "the sixties" and 1971 in regards to CB. It was a small number of channels, and almost from the start some were trying to DX. But even without those attempts, people realized early on that it was the wrong place in the spectrum, because with the skip in, you did get everyone else. I don't know what it was like when the boom hit a few years later, but with a crummy Hallicrafters
S-120A receiver that had little selectivity and little sensitivity in 1971, when conditions were good, it wsa a solid whine across the CB band.
I'm pretty sure that would have been the case even a few years earlier.

The issue isn't so much density, but that skip might come in from multiple places, and each place was using those channels, so added up, it made the whine.

Remember a superregen has virtually no selectivity, which is why he could hear WWV at 25MHz when CB started just below 27MHz. But that also meant no real selectivity, just a multitude of stations coming in when conditions were good.

People forget, it was relative. There had been demand, there had been dreaming, of "personal radio" for a long time. If nothing else, all those people who wanted to be hams but didn't want to take the test.

And I gather the rules or the public knowledge was ambiguous to begin with. I've seen early issues of Popular Electronics where CB was promoted as a hobby band, not just peripheral things like 'build your own monitor scope" but outright columns about DXing.

And it was no wasteland. They soon learned it was a lousy place in the spectrum for something like that, since even without people trying to work long distance, the long distance signals came in when conditions were good. One reason the Heathkit Sixers (supreregen receivers with simple transmitters, a variant of the CB version) did so well at 50Mhz was that when the band opened up, 5watts input was more than enough for DX, even witha lousy antenna. At 27MHz, the same thing applied, except the band opened up even more often.

These were cheap crystal controlled transmit walkie talkies. The receive as mentioned was wideband and in the late afternoon during peak solar conditions (late 60's) WWV would fade in and out. I don't know what path the signal took,or even what frequency I was hearing - I assume it was 25 MHz - but I could hear it pretty well from northeast Detroit, MI.

All I remember was that in the early years, there was no CB radio equipment for sale, and the couple that the manufacturers came out with - were pretty poor excuses for a CB radio.

Especially the mobiles - they might have only had 1 - 5 transmit channels and the same receive.

At that time, the way i remember it, it was probably illegal for the manufacturers to sell Amateur Radio Equipment to anyone that did not possess a license.

The next generation of transceivers to come out was mostly kit form - Knight Kit, Heathkit, Lafayette, Eico - etc...
To put it in today's perspective - if a kit transceiver cost $80 - $160, and a fully assembled transceiver or any quality was $265 - $600/ and Gasoline was $.20 a gallon, and mininum wage was probably around $.50 a hour!

A new CB radio / by the time you bought the crystals - doubled the cost, and would be like $1000 - $7000 in todays money..

The Part 15 / now Part 95 rules was that you were not allowed to transmit more then 155 miles.
Unless you had a really good transceiver - Browning, Tram, Courier, Regency - you didn't have to worry about that anyways...
AND - the technology was there - as far as antenna's were concerned, that you just bought the largest antenna you could find and it was a very good substitution for the loosers with the amplifiers today...

Just think how much transmit and receive power a person had with a Long John - (HY Gain) or Duo 6 Beam antenna had...
Even a Duo 3 - was enough to turn your 5 watts - (when all the tubes were new) transceiver, into a signal which was perceived like a 120 watt transceiver...

In Western PA, if you wanted to talk Skip to Australia, you had to get up early in the morning - around 5 AM and listen to the SSB portion of the lower frequencies - channel 1 - 12.....

At that time, there was a observed band plan - channel 11 was the call channel, you called your CQ on 11 and then when you made contact with someone - you jumped up to another channel...
Hence my handle was the Channel Jumper..

We all had call signs and we all had to act like ladies and gentlemen.

Then the manufacturers got the bright idea that there was more money to be made by manufacturning solid state transceivers - since the tubes did not last long in a mobile enviroment with the spring / solid axle trucks and the fact that there was a million big rigs on the road and they could make a killing by selling everyone a CB radio....

After a couple of CB radio movies, it wasn't long before the truckers felt that no one could tell them what to do, and what not to do, and the call signs were dropped, the enforcement of the rules was dropped, the idiots from Texas and the southern states took over with their tall towers and huge amplifiers, and soon it wasn't possible to find a quiet place to talk...

By the 1980's = most people just shut them off and took down the antenna's and put it all away.
By that time, it was easier to get a Amateur Radio License and people had more money into their pockets and more disposable income and the price of CB radio got to the point of where it became disposable - $25 for a mobile / and the Amateur Radio equipment got cheaper - when Yaesu, Kenwood / Icom got into the business and all the quality went by the wayside..

Hammerlund, Eico, Johnson, National , Heathkit, Hallicrafters, Collins all saw the handwriting on the wall..

At the same time, no one was willing to spend hundreds of dollars on the Browning , Tram, Courier , Regency - when you could do the same thing with a $50 Teaberry, Kraco, Cobra, Midland, Pierce Simpson.....

The golden age of CB radio was probably the 1960's due to the fact that there was several good band openings in 1965 - 67 and again in 1971 - 74..

As I remember, and don't take my memory to the bank, 11M came about 1958. I built a 5 crystal/channel Heath around 1960, I believe. Ch 9 was the call channel, this was before REACT came about. The only radios out there were a Halli, Courier, and Heath. Near as i recall, Allied came out with a rig around 1962. I remember taxi and some truck company's on ch23. It was a real mess. Hams were pissed, but most I knew were in there with the rest of the noise. Lots of medical inside ch22A and B. Which became ch24 and 25 when they opened up to 40. As I said, 9 was call, 10 to 15 was to anyone, other channels were inter-ticket only. It was fun, but when it got busy, I walked away. Did make some nice local friends on it. Lafayette, and then Allied/Radio Shack really got it moving with reasonable priced radios. I still remember my Allied with tunable receive and a spot for TX/RX. I was a 20Q call. And that's about all I remember from back then. Or, I could be wrong on some of this info.

I am talking about a cheap 100mw output crystal controlled (ch 14 transmit only), hand held walkie talkie. Japanese made (I seem to remember the Alaron brand name). I don't know what it used for receive but you could listen to a large part of the 11 meter band. There was no tuning adjust. And once and a while, if you were lucky enough to catch someone on channel 14, you could make a contact.

Of course I used to hook up 500 feet or so of transformer wire to the whip antenna to try and improve reception. It did, overloading the cheap receiver, but I heard all kinds of stations including WWV.

Now you know the rest of the story......

The point is that you are already collecting money for suspicious soft tissue injuries. What are the other two insurance payouts you are receiving?

Liberty Net: July 28, 2012

http://3950.net/2012/08/liberty-net-july-28-2012/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

DESPITE SUMMERTIME STATIC at the highest levels weï¿½ve seen this season, and despite the temporary loss of the N2IRJ phone patch (Marty is repairing his transceiverï¿½s power supply as I type), the Liberty Net had numerous new check-ins and extremely interesting discussions this week.

Hereï¿½s a small selection from the many ideas brought forward during this weekï¿½s Liberty Net:

ï¿½ Many people are saying that being forced to choose between Mitt Rob-me and Fetchit is a matter of picking the lesser of two evils. But is it really better to pick the ï¿½less evilï¿½ and hope that a smaller amount of damage will be done? Isnï¿½t it better to let the more obvious evil reign so that no one will be lulled into complacency that ï¿½things are getting betterï¿½ ï¿½ and to ensure that more and more people will be radicalized and build an overwhelming consensus for revolution? (14 minutes)

ï¿½ We have a system in which politicians are buying votes with stolen wealth and charging the bill to the future. The fact that we have a degraded electorate that canï¿½t figure that out, and reject it, illustrates the total failure of one-man one-vote mass democracy, which isnï¿½t what the founders intended anyway. (35 minutes)

ï¿½ Thereï¿½s a lesson for all of us in the Greek situation. On the one hand, an aware minority there is rebelling against the banking scam which impoverished them ï¿½ the rise of the Golden Dawn party is evidence of that. On the other hand, the majority of Greek voters continually elect smiling liars that plunge them ever deeper into debt. The lesson is that the perceptive, intelligent minority must take power away from the mediocre majority if we are ever to be free. (42 minutes)

ï¿½ Some say ï¿½America has survived a depression before,ï¿½ pointing to the 1930s. But the demographics of the country have changed so much since then that a deeper depression would certainly trigger riots, if not a race-based civil war. (56 minutes)

ï¿½ Why is it that even with the Washington regimeï¿½s hugely bloated military and ï¿½socialï¿½ budgets (which allow them to interfere in every aspect of our daily lives, and kill thousands of innocents in pointless wars for Israel that even the rubes have forgotten the ostensible reasons for), they are apparently unable to do two things that government has an absolute duty to do ï¿½ protect us from predatory financiers and fraudsters, and protect us from invasion on our southern border? (1 hour 12 minutes)

ï¿½ The behavior of Blacks and Mestizos in Americaï¿½s schools is so bad that the Washington regime has now declared ï¿½discipline quotasï¿½ for each racial group, so future statistics wonï¿½t be so embarrassing for multiracialism. Apparently the regime doesnï¿½t care at all about the violence and terror they are enabling. (1 hour 50 minutes)

ï¿½ When a career killing innocents is portrayed as ï¿½defending our countryï¿½ and when thrill-killers and lawless, murdering police are glamorized by the entertainment media, barbarity is no longer something in the distant past or something to worry about in the future. No indeed. It is here now. (2 hours 15 minutes)

ï¿½ A lot of ï¿½hate Russiaï¿½ propaganda has been creeping into the controlled media lately. And no wonder ï¿½ Putin is positioning Russia to checkmate the Washington regimeï¿½s Zionist wars and end the financial depredations of the bankers. (2 hours 37 minutes)

Donï¿½t be shy ï¿½ check in to amateur radioï¿½s historic Liberty Net every Saturday night ï¿½ on some clear frequency near (usually above) 3950 kHz SSB starting at 10PM Eastern Time. The net has to be frequency-agile to avoid receiving or causing interference. And check out our Internet feeds which can help you copy, and communicate with, weak stations.

Kudos and thanks go to Vic, W1WCR, for his decades of hard work for free speech and amateur radio!

What killed CB in the US was the trucker's strike. Every trucker had one by then and they did not want to be tacked down and prosecuted, either for using the CB to organize their activities, or for the activities themselves, so they started using "handles" that were not close to their name, and not their real callsigns or names.

It became a free for all, as there was a perception that the FCC and the other police were powerless to stop them.

The FCC responded by raising the price of a CB license to $25 per year. Someone sued them claiming the price was excessive and won. So for a few years you could get a CB license for free. You could get permission for up to 25 radios on your license, so everyone did.

If you had a radio and no license, in order to get on the air you could use a temporary callsign, which I think was something like KBG and your zip code. I don't know what they did in a big city the day after christmas when there were hundreds of new owners. :-)

By that time no one was using their callsigns anyway, so the FCC changed their policy that any existing licenses would be valid "indefinately", and anyone who had a radio was licensed by posessing the radio.

Current FCC regs require you to identify yourself, but don't specify how to do it except that if you already have an FCC issued call sign, you may, but are not required to use it.

I recently moved, and in the process found my old CB licences, one for voice and the other for remote control, so I have added them for nostalgia to my signature.

Geoff.

Geoff.

The system you are referring to was the use of the letter K or W (depending on geography), followed by the first and last initials of the user, followed by the zip code in which the user lived. e.g. KBD97214 (this was technically only valid for a short time while an actual license was acquired.. but it never worked out that way.)

But it has to get worse, probably much worse, before it can get

Anyway, to hear The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net, you need to tune in somewhere between 3950 and 3970 LSB at 10pm every Saturday night and listen to intense discussions about topics like ..

Clinton's a crook
Bush is a crook
Gore is a crook
Biden's a crook
They're all crooks

You'll want to have a good supply of ice cold co-cola and Jiffy-Pop popcorn on hand for this blessed event.

As a bonus, you might even hear some "jammers" making comments like ..

Not sure if there is a memorial for all the American service men who had they testicles and penises sliced off and stuffed in their mouths while still alive by the "honorable" Japs but do pause and remember all those poor souls as well. They number into the tens of thousands.

And lastly, swing by the U.S.S. Liberty Memorial while you are at it. After all it was your Gramps who made the bastard state of Israel possible. He was paid $2,000,000 in cash for according to JFK as told to Gore Vidal. Vidal even named specifics - delivered to Truman on his campaign train by a Jew named Wiseman. Talk about "a day of infamy", the world is still suffering the consequences of his dirty deed. In fact, it will very likely be the cause of the next nuclear nightmare.

Sadly this net has gone down in entertainment value. It's nothing like it

Yes, his real name was Michael King. The "Martin Luther" part was just something his preacher father added years later, and without ever legalizing it, because he thought it sounded impressive.

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
30 July - 05 August 2012

Solar activity was at low to moderate levels. The summary period began at moderate levels due to an M1/Sn flare at 30/1548Z from Region 1536 (S22, L=173, class/area Eao/100 on 01 August). Later on 30 July, Region 1538 (S22, L=117, class/area Eso/220 on 04 August) produced a C6 x-ray event with Type II (730 km/s) and Type IV radio signatures and an associated non-Earth-directed CME. From 31 July through the remainder of the summary period, solar activity was at low levels. On 04 August, Region 1539 (S22, L=099, class/area Cro/030 on 02 August) produced a long duration event (LDE) that began at 04/1104Z, peaked at 04/1500Z and ended at 04/1649Z.
Associated with this event was an Earth-directed, partial halo CME with an estimated velocity of 905 km/s. Other activity of note included an LDE from Region 1535 (N18, L=135, class/area Eai/150 on 01 August). At 31/1130Z, the region produced a C5/Sf with Type II (880 km/s) and Type IV radio signatures and an associated non-Earth-directed CME. Later in the day, Region 1536 produced a C4/Sf at 31/1727Z with a Type II (592 km/s) radio signature. On 02
August, a C1 x-ray event was recorded in the vicinity of old Region 1526 (S17, L=273) which rotated around the west limb on 01 August.
Associated with this event was a non-Earth-directed CME. Region 1539 produced a C2/1f flare at 03/0600Z with a Type II (622 km/s) radio signature and a non-Earth-directed CME.

A greater than 10 MeV proton enhancement at geosynchronous orbit was observed late on 02 August through midday on 03 August with a peak of 1 pfu at 02/1820Z. This enhancement was most likely associated with the 02 August limb event.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at moderate levels throughout the summary period.
```

Geomagnetic field activity ranged from quiet to minor storm conditions. The period began at quiet to unsettled levels with isolated active intervals due to a period of sustained southward IMF Bz to -8 nT from about 30/ 0600 - 1800Z. From 31 July to midday on 02 August, quiet levels were observed. At about 02/1000Z, the 28 July CME arrived at the ACE spacecraft producing active to minor storm periods from 02/1200 - 2100Z. During this time frame, IMF Bz was negative multiple times, peaking at about -12 nT at 02/1220Z while solar wind readings indicated a slight increase from near 450 km/s to about 500 km/s. For the remainder of the summary period, quiet to unsettled conditions prevailed.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
06 August - 01 September 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at low to moderate levels through 14 August as Regions 1539 and 1540 (S27, L=087, class/area Dso/110 on 05 August) rotate off the visible disk. From 15 - 20 August, mostly low levels are expected. A return to low to moderate levels is expected from 21 August - 01 September as Regions 1532 (S20, L=185, class/area Fho/510 on 28 July) and 1536 rotate back onto the visible disk.

A greater than 10 MeV proton event at geosynchronous orbit is possible through 14 August as Regions 1539 and 1540 traverse the visible disk and again from 21 August - 01 September as Regions 1532 and 1536 rotate back onto the visible disk.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at normal to moderate levels throughout the period.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be at predominately quiet levels from 06 - 07 August. Quiet to unsettled conditions with isolated active intervals are expected on 08 - 09 August due to glancing blow effects from the 04 August CME. Predominately quiet conditions are expected from 10 - 18 August, 21 - 23 August, and 27 August - 01 September. Quiet to unsettled conditions with isolated active intervals are expected from 19 - 20 August and again from 24 - 26 August due to weak coronal hole high-speed stream effects.

hi,

Islam and Terrorism

First ,

Who began the first international war ??? Muslims ??
Who began the second international war ??? Muslims ??
Who killed 20 million human residents of the same indigenous Australia?! Muslims?!
Who sent the bombs to hit Hiroshima and Nagasaki? Muslims?!
Who killed more than the 100 million Indians from the Red Indians in North America? Muslims?!
Who killed more than 50 million Indians of Indians in South America? Muslims?!
Who has Pastrakkak about 180 million Africans had died as slaves and about 77% of them and been thrown in the Atlantic Ocean? Muslims?!

No, they are not Muslims!!

above all, you have to specify the meaning of terrorism is well; that if a non-Muslim has to do something wrong then it just be a crime, but while the Muslim of committing the same mistake then it is described to terrorism!!!
So first you do not double standard and you will know who are the real terrorists

I hope you realize that amongst the rods and cones on your retina, there are NO pain receptors.

It is really easy to damage your retina and not realize it -- and looking through a telescope or binoculars without a solar filter (not depending on clouds) can quickly cause serious damage.

NEVER look at the sun without a solar filter. Do NOT depend on clouds or fog.

Oh, did I mention NEVER?

That was why during the eclipse of 1970, everyone was told the safest method was to pit a tiny hole in a box and watch the projection against

We have been informed by the readers of rec.radio.shortwave that a | recent (2008) attempt to update these documents and post them (or links |
to them) at regular intervals, has since been abandoned, so the project |
is once again open to a sincere and motivated volunteer. |

We are interested in offering any technical support necessary to get

Thanks for the information. When I observed the transit of Venus back in June, I used a really dark piece of glass from a welder's mask. Whatever the number was, it was dark enough that I could not see surrounding terrain.

Humph! Even an 8 or 10 is "dark enough that I could not see surrounding terrain."...but that is not a high enough number.

The recommended number is #14...and they are additive if you can't find a 14.

For the recent transit, my welding supply shop did not have a #14 but they did have a #10 and #4, which I taped together.

Additional note: Put the #14 glass in FRONT (input side) of your binoculars. If you put it on the output side, the concentrated heat could leave you with a face full of shattered glass.

If you're near an observatory, they'll have viewing glasses, certified for solar events, in the gift shop for about a buck.

They'll also have a public viewing on site.

Yes, there were local viewing sites, but the lines went on forever. Because of the clouds, the transit could be seen only sporadically. Typical:

There was a Background Briefing on Radio Australia in the last year or three about what happened back in the '70s when some weed control program there bought some surplus herbicides left over Vietnam.
What they got wasn't 2-4-D or 2-4-T or whatever that "Agent" were supposed to be. It was just random crap chemical stuff.

Which made the people using it really sick.

Back in the 1990s, an elected official offered a fiery speech on why we need to peel back the layers of Federal Reserve secrecy.

This scene was repeated again in 2009 and 2010.

You may think this is another email about my dad's quest to Audit the Federal Reserve and reveal how much money it prints and whose pockets it gets stuffed in.

But it's not.

The elected official in question is none other than Harry Reid.

I'm not pulling your leg; it's long past April Fool's Day.

I'll even provide you a link to the video after I take a moment to explain why this fight is so crucial.

You would think given his past support for Audit the Fed, he would be more than happy to schedule a vote on my dad's bill which passed the House by a massive 327-98 vote margin.

Audit the Fed is an easy opportunity for all those Democrats to put their money where their mouth is on "working across the aisle."

But media reports indicate that Harry Reid wants to kill this bill in the crib.

They say he won't even allow a vote.

He doesn't care that you deserve an answer as to where your money vanished to during the bailouts.

What could have changed?

He can sense the political wave building this fall. And he's is terrified his majority will be swept away if vulnerable Democrats are forced to choose between voting to Audit the Fed or thwarting your effort to uncover the truth.

Protecting his perch as Senate Majority Leader means more to him than stopping the bailouts or restoring the value of your dollar.

You see, the Federal Reserve is one of the most secretive institutions in our nation.

And the Fed's economy-wrecking policies have rolled unchecked long enough.

I think it’s high time you and I crack open the Fed’s books and catalogue the damage done to our economy.

But Harry Reid thinks otherwise.

He is just fine with the Obama Administration endangering national security by leaking every last detail of the raid that killed Osama Bin laden to Hollywood movie studies, but the mere suggestion of openness and transparency at the Fed pushes him into “nothing to see here folks” mode.

With the election less than 100 days away, I can’t imagine any senator in a competitive race would be eager to explain to the voters why they couldn’t be bothered to figure out where all our money went.

I see nervous Democrats every day slinking around the Capitol.

They are terrified of this bill.

Either they will have to cast a vote forcing Ben Bernanke to come clean about the true amount of the, or they will expose themselves as unyielding supporters of policies that ground our economy to a near standstill.

And that is a recipe for certain defeat in November.

That’s why I hope you’ll watch the video of Harry Reid defending Audit the Fed.

I have a plan to force a vote on Audit the Fed in the Senate.

But I am going to need your help to shove aside Harry Reid’s roadblocks.

First, I hope you’ll watch the video of Harry Reid’s speech backing Audit the Fed.

http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=oXOsZ7Ad7dM

After you watch the video, I hope I can count on you to sign your “Vote on Audit the Fed Now!” petition right away.

P.S. Audit the Fed passed the House by an overwhelming 327-98 majority.

But news reports indicate Harry Reid refuses to schedule a vote on this crucial legislation.

A filmmaker whose full-length documentary, "Dreams from My Real Father," presents a compelling case that Communist Party USA propagandist Frank Marshall Davis is Barack Obama's biological father, is challenging the U.S. media to begin reporting the truth about the likely Democrat nominee for president in 2012.

[via wikipedia] ...Davis used his newspaper platform to call for integration of the sports world, and he began to engage himself with community organizing efforts, starting a Chicago labor newspaper, The Star, toward the end of World War II. In 1947, the Spokane Daily Chronicle called the paper "a red weekly" saying that it "has most of the markings of a Communist front publication."[7] The Chicago Star had a goal to "promote a policy of cooperation and unity between Russia and the United States"[8] seeking to "[avoid] the red-baiting tendencies of the mainstream press."[9]

In 1945, he taught one of the first jazz history courses in the United States, at the Abraham Lincoln School[10] in Chicago.

In 1948, Davis and his second wife, who had married in 1946, moved to Honolulu, Hawaii. It is frequently reported that the move was at the suggestion of Davis's friend Paul Robeson who praised its multiracial culture,[11], although in a in a 1974 interview with Black World/Negro Digest, Davis states that the move was because of a magazine article his wife had read.[12]During this time Hawaii was going through a non-violent revolution between colored labor workers and the white elite known as the Democratic Revolution. There, Davis operated a small wholesale paper business, Oahu Papers, which burned in March 1951. In 1959, he started another similar firm, the Paradise Paper Company.

Davis also wrote a weekly column, called "Frank-ly Speaking", for the Honolulu Record, a labor paper published by the International Longshore and Warehouse Union (ILWU) headed by Harry Bridges.[13] Davis' first column noted he was a member of the national executive board of the Civil Rights Congress,[14][citation needed] The paper had been founded in 1948 by Koji Ariyoshi , and closed in 1958. Davis's early columns covered labor issues, but he broadened his scope to write about cultural and political issues, especially racism. He also included the history of blues and jazz in his columns.

While in Hawaii, Davis broadened from a Black Power philosophy to include what Dinesh D'Sousa calls "a wider currents of oppression and subjugation."[11] He became one of the first promoters of the concept of a "raceless" society based on his belief that race as a biological or social construct was illogical and a fallacy.

Frank Marshall Davis was a Communist Party USA activist in Chicago and Hawaii. In Hawaii he was a mentor to a young Barack Obama.

The FBI file on Davis, consisting of 601 pages and covering the years 1944-1963, means that Davis was under investigation or surveillance for at least 19 years. One document refers to Davis having Communist Party USA affiliations dating back to 1931. He was included in the FBI's security index, meaning that he could be arrested or detained in the event of a national emergency.

hi,

Miracles in the Holy Quran :The Components Of The Fetus

What Are The Components Of The Fetus?
In the past, humans knew nothing about the components of the fetus. Aristotle was the first one who has specified a special research about embryology. He summarized the beliefs of the people in his time in two theories.
The first theory states that the fetus exists in the semen. When the semen reaches the womb of a woman , it grows up typically as the seed grows in the ground and it takes its food from the womb.
The second theory states that the fetus is created out of the menstrual blood and the sperm works only as an agent(it congeals the menstrual blood, typically as the rennet that congeals milk to transfer it into cheese) . Actually, Aristotle preferred and supported this one.
Another group of scientists thought that the fetus is created as the dwarf inside the ovum. It is only in the 18th century when doctors started to consider the importance of both the sperm and the ovum in the creation of humankind. In the 19th century, the components of the fetus have been known.
After the human fertilization where one sperm penetrates the ovum, the cortical reaction of the ovum takes place, preventing other sperm from fertilizing the same egg. With the entrance of the sperm in the ovum, the ovum becomes a Nutfah of mixed semen which is a fertilized ovum. The fertilized ovum includes both the sexual secretions of the male and female.
The resulting mixture (drop), composed of the ovum and the penetrating sperm, becomes a Nutfah. Allah the Al Mighty says: ((Verily, We have created man from Nutfah (drops) of mixed semen (sexual discharge of man and woman), in order to try him: so We made him hearer and seer.)) Surat Al-Insan (Man) 2
Before one thousand and four hundred years ago, Ibn Abbas said about Allah's saying ((from Nutfah Amshag (drops) of mixed semen)) : " It means semen of man and semen of woman when they are mixed. Then, it transfer from one phase to another , from one situation to another, and from color to another."
Similarly, Al hasan Al basry, Moujahid, Okrama, and all Muslim scholars agreed that the meaning of Nutfa (Drops) of mixed semen is the mixed Nutfah (drops) from both the semen of man and the semen of woman.
Allah the Al Mighty says: ((O mankind! We have created you from a male and a female, and made you into nations and tribes, that you may know one another. Verily, the most honorable of you with Allah is that (believer) who has At-Taqwa [i.e. he is one of the Muttaqun (the pious. See V.2:2)]. Verily, Allah is All-Knowing, All-Aware.)) Surat Al-Hujurat (The Dwellings) 13
Muhammad Ibn Jarir Al-Tabari said in his interpretation of Qur'an : " Allah the Al Mighty says: We have created you from a male and a female which means that We have created you from masculine semen from man and feminine semen from woman". Ibn Qayyim Al-Jawziyya (dead in 751 H /1350 AD) said in his book (At-tebiyan fi Aqsam AlQur'an) The Explanation of The Sections of Quran : " And the semen of man alone could not bring child unless it mixed with another liquid from the woman." Also, he said : " The organs, parts, and the feature have been created from the combination of both semen. This is the truth."

All the scholars have agreed that ((Amshag)) is the mixture of the man's semen with woman's semen. Thus, Who has told Muhammad (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) that??

Liberty Net: August 4, 2012

http://3950.net/2012/08/liberty-net-august-4-2012/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

AFTER SEVERAL WEEKS of absence due to a power supply failure and subsequent parts requisition and repair, N2IRJ was finally able to rejoin the Liberty Net this week. Welcome back, Marty! Special thanks to Al, N2SAG, for his extra effort in keeping the conversation lively and on a high level despite the absence of Marty and the phone patch callers.

Hereï¿½s a small sampling the many subjects brought up during this weekï¿½s Liberty Net:

ï¿½ Up until recently, solar energy has required a prohibitively high investment. But subsidies have brought the costs down, and the payback time is now much shorter. Whether we approve of subsidies or not, it is a fact that those who take the plunge also greatly increase their independence. This week WD8PAV was the first high-power check-in to the Liberty Net using power obtained entirely from solar panels. (38 minutes)

ï¿½ Cass Sunstein, who advocated creating a sort of ï¿½Ministry of Truthï¿½ to censor the Internet and specifically to punish writers who questioned the official 9/11 narrative, is leaving his position with the Washington regime. His replacement has Soros connections. (1 hour 8 minutes)

ï¿½ Perhaps one reason that our illegitimate rulers hate Iran so much is that Iran punishes financial criminals, like our rulers, with severe penalties when they are convicted. (1 hour 26 minutes)

ï¿½ What a low estate we have fallen to if, to save ourselves from Obamacare, we think we must support the man who imposed a very similar system on the state of Massachusetts. (1 hour 41 minutes)

ï¿½ When the CEO of General Motors opines that GM is now ï¿½basically a Chinese company,ï¿½ the finance-capitalist betrayal of America and the West is now complete. (2 hours 33 minutes)

ï¿½ ï¿½Everything is cash ï¿½ all else is mere balderdash.ï¿½ This seems to be the credo of the new ruling elite of the West as they betray their nations to Zionism and the Communist Chinese ï¿½ two major holders and recipients of American cash for many decades. (2 hours 47 minutes)

ï¿½ The real fulcrum of power in this world is race and ethnicity ï¿½ and those peoples who make a fetish or ï¿½moralityï¿½ out of denying this will soon cease to exist on planet Earth. (2 hours 50 minutes)

ï¿½ One very encouraging sign in this declining world is the effort by the Russian government to increase the White birth rate. (4 hours 24 minutes)

ï¿½ In one of the most shameful episodes in scientific history, James Watson ï¿½ the co-discoverer of the structure of DNA ï¿½ was forced to resign from his positions at Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory, merely for stating the incontrovertible truth that the average intelligence of Africans is not the same as that of other races. (4 hours 25 minutes)

Thanks to Marty, N2IRJ, youï¿½re able to listen to the Liberty Net on your computer ï¿½ or download the file and listen on your portable mp3 player. And he and Al, N2SAG operate live feeds and chats during Net times (see the links in the left column of this page) that let you make an end run around jammers and a fickle ionosphere.

Please check in with your call sign, and add your voice to the most exciting net on the amateur bands ï¿½ every Saturday night, starting at 10PM Eastern Time. The frequency varies to avoid causing interference, but is almost always somewhere above 3950 kHz LSB, quite often on or near 3967.

Our deepest thanks go to W1WCR for his hard work and courage in running the Liberty Net, which is now in its 38th year.

Davis acted directly against the interests of Black people's freedom and self-determination by promoting the poisonous, suicidal idea that society should not be based on race. Kinship-based societies are free, natural, and are the kind of societies people naturally tend to form unless goons with guns stop them. Enforced multiracial societies inevitably result in tyranny and (with the exception of the overclass) the disappearance of all distinct races, including Davis's. One would expect no less of a Marxist.

Race, by the way, is not a social construct. Society, on the other hand, is indeed a racial construct.

With every good wish,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

No problem -- not really an issue because the flip-flopper, shape-shifter Romney disavows and distances himself from the Massachusetts insurance issue.

Finally, let me say...

...Huh? "save ourselves from Obamacare" ?

"Obamacare" is basically Medicare for those under the age of 65, especially the millions who lost their health care along with their jobs through no fault of their own.

And I have not seen anyone, not even the mad-dog tea baggers, volunteer to cancel their Medicare.

Just more hypocrisy, I guess.

P.S.

You also seem to be overlooking one simple fact:

The health care program is quite popular with the citizens of Massachusetts, even the "individual mandate" that Romney originally fought for -- and now disavows.

But at least we're getting 16,000 new IRS agents to enforce payment. Neat way for Obama to claim he created jobs.

How do they propose to administer medical care to 20 million more people with fewer doctors in the system?

Maybe Obama can import a few thousand Kenyan witch doctors.

I was Army, so, I don't know about this stuff. With all the rivers here in Western PA, I have spent time on a few boats. I was under the though that boats always passed to the left. True? Like I said, I don't know. Saw the news item from the Middle East. Looks bad for us. Who do you feel was in the wrong. Good no one was hurt.

Yes, generally, large ships pass each other port-side to port side. (port is left).

Yeah, could have been much worse.

Maybe I should clarify: The above would be true for ships approaching one another. If one is overtaking another ship I think that letting the other vessel know which side one would pass them on is done by horn blast, one blast to let them know you'll pass on their port side, two blasts for starboard.

In the Straight of Hormuz, like many other places, there is probably a common radio channel for ships to also let their intentions be known.

Well, considering the tanker was Japanese, it could have been any anything. I know it takes a lot of room, and the straight is only 2 miles wide. Those ships are huge.
As far as the head guy, I'm sure it was not his first trip there. I hate to see anyone lose a command. Lets see where this goes, we still don't have all the info on this. No one was hurt, but this is serious. Thanks

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
06 - 12 August 2012

Solar activity was at very low to moderate levels. The summary period began at moderate levels due to an M1 x-ray event at 06/0438 UTC from Region 1542 (S14, L=030, class/area 190/Dai on 09 August).
Associated with this event were both Type II (estimated shock speed of 552 km/s) and Type IV radio sweeps and a non-Earth-directed CME.
Activity levels decreased to low from 07 - 10 August with only low-level C-class solar flares observed. On 11 August, an increase to moderate levels was observed as Region 1540 (S27, L=087, class/area 110/Dso on 05 August) produced a long duration M1/2n flare at 11/1220 UTC. The CME associated with this event was determined to not be Earth directed. A return to very low levels was observed on 12 August.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at normal levels during most of the period.

Geomagnetic field activity was at quiet to active levels.
Predominantly quiet to unsettled levels prevailed from 06 - 09
August as solar winds speeds, as measured by the ACE spacecraft, varied from 275 - 450 km/s. An isolated active period was observed during 08/0000 - 0300 UTC in response to slightly elevated solar wind speeds and extended periods of negative IMF Bz. Field activity decreased to predominantly quiet levels during 10 - 12 August.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
13 August - 08 September 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at predominantly low levels from 13
- 21 August. An increase to low to moderate levels is expected from 22 August - 05 September as an active sunspot region complex returns to the visible disk. A return to low levels is expected from 06 - 08 September.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at normal to moderate levels through 15 August. An increase to moderate to high flux levels is expected during 16 - 24 August. Normal to moderate flux levels are expected during 25 August - 08 September.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be at predominantly quiet levels during 15 - 18 August, 21 - 23 August, and 27 August - 08 September. Quiet to unsettled levels are expected during 13 - 14 August, 19 - 20 August, and 24 - 26 August due to recurrent coronal hole high-speed streams.

Thanks but no thanks for the extravagant comparison.

As for us disappearing and being absorbed by the Chinese: That's genocide -- and some of us oppose that.

The Firedrake or music jammer is on 11785 kHz now (1925 UTC) for anyone that has not heard it. It is kind of weak here in the midwest but you can hear the drums pretty well even with the weak signal.

In a restricted channel, the "burdened" vessel always has the right of way. In none of the reports have I seen any mention whether the tanker was southbound and loaded, i.e. "burdened" and therefore with poor maneuverability, or whether it was northbound and presumably empty. In any event, passing port-to-port is the flexible rule, which would be assumed unless there was radio traffic indicating some other course.

Burdened, or unburdened. Was that tanker Ship sitting low, or high on the water? Seeee, Moonshiners put heavy duty springs on those cars so that they don't look like they are hauling Moonshine. Load up a Ship and that Ship sits low.

http://www.bloomberg.com/news/2012-08-12/u-s-navy-ship-collides-with-oil-tanker-near-strait-of-hormuz.html says the tanker was loaded, i.e. low in the water. It also says it was going from Qatar to the UAE "for refueling". So I checked a map. They are both inside the Gulf. So what was it doing in the Strait? Something is missing in this story, or someone is lying.

Most tankers these days are double-hulled, so I'm not surprised there's no spill.

The driver of a hearse heading to a funeral with a body in a casket was found dead behind the wheel of the vehicle near the Beverly Hills Hotel on Monday afternoon.

About 3 p.m., Beverly Hills police were called to the hearse, parked near the hotel on Crescent Drive, north of Sunset Boulevard, after a passerby reported a person slumped behind the wheel, according to a statement from the department.

Officers determined the body to be that of a woman. No foul play was suspected in her death.

Police were still investigating where the driver was headed.

Neither the name of the mortuary, nor of the driver or the body in the casket, were immediately released.

HEALTH CARE

Paul Ryan's dangerous vision

August 11, 2012|By Donna Brazile, CNN Contributor

The most important decision Mitt Romney has made in his campaign so far, the selection of Wisconsin Rep. Paul Ryan for his running mate, tells us two things -- and neither bears good news for the middle class.

First, Romney has fully and unequivocally embraced the extreme Ryan budget plan. Earlier this year, he called it "marvelous" -- now he's made it his own. The Romney-Ryan plan would throw seniors under the bus and undermine their health security by ending Medicare as we know it. It would increase health care costs for seniors, including those on fixed income, by thousands of dollars a year.

The extreme plan proposed by this year's Republican ticket would bring huge tax breaks to millionaires, paid for by tax hikes on the middle class, and massive cuts to investments that strengthen the middle class -- priorities like education, health care, energy and scientific and medical research. Whether you are a college student trying to pay for school, a veteran worried about your health benefits, or a senior worried about retirement security, the Romney-Ryan plan is bad news. It would have devastating real-world effects on people young and old across the country.

Romney and Ryan have put ideology ahead of what's right. They refuse to increase taxes on the wealthiest Americans under any circumstance -- not another dime, ever. Unlike the Bowles-Simpson deficit reduction plan or the president's balanced plan to reduce the deficit that include asking everyone to pay their fair share, the Romney-Ryan budget would reduce the deficit on the backs of seniors and the middle class.

Even the U.S. Conference of Bishops admonished the Romney-Ryan plan. So did a group of nuns who recently traveled by bus across the country with the message that our budget is not just our country's fiscal map, it is our moral one. They rightly pointed out that, as it says in Corinthians, "If one part suffers, every part suffers with it, if one part is honored, every part rejoices with it."

On the political front, Ryan's selection is yet another sign that Romney is running to the far right and is the most extreme conservative candidate we have had in generations. The embrace of an ideologue like Paul Ryan may appeal to the Republican Party's Tea Party base, but it will completely alienate independent voters, especially in battleground states.

Seniors in Ohio and Florida have every reason to worry what a Romney-Ryan administration would do to them when Medicare is handed over to private insurance companies and Social Security is subject to the whims of Wall Street. Voters should also consider that, even as our nation faces threats of terrorism and remains at war, for the first time in modern presidential history the Republican ticket lacks any national security credentials. It's no coincidence, then, that its views on national security are dangerous and ill-considered.

Any voter wondering about our leaders' values should consider what they do in the room when the tough decisions are on the table. While President Obama was in the Oval Office, making the toughest calls any president has had to make -- how to save the economy from depression, rescue the American auto industry, bring affordable health care to millions of Americans or take out Osama bin Laden -- Paul Ryan was in a different room.

He was sitting side-by-side with fellow House Republican ideologues John Boehner and Eric Cantor as they risked the full faith and credit of the United States, regardless of what it would mean for the middle class, jobs and women's rights.

If there ever was a question about what this election is about, today's announcement answers it. Throughout this campaign, Mitt Romney has lacked a clear vision. Now he's embraced a radical ideologue with a dangerous one. This election is absolutely a choice between two visions for our country's future. Mitt Romney and Paul Ryan have solidified their roles as rubber stamps for the reckless and failed economic theories of the past.

Sub commander fakes heterosexuality to end affair

Relieved of duty after getting male sex slave into STD clinic.

Navy Cmdr. DxAce, who has been accused of having an affair with a 23-year-old Chesapeake, Va., man and faking heterosexuality as a means of ending it, has been relieved of his duties as the commanding officer of the USS Michigan, just one week after he was put in command.

The man said he met DxAce, 61, on a male dating website in October. He said DxAce, who has never married, told him he was separated and that he worked in “special Anal ops.” He said he got him diseased, then, in an effort to end the relationship, faked heterosexuality in an email communication in July.

A New America www.NewAmericaMovie.com is a documentary film that outlines the history of the Progressive movement in America over the last century. It analyzes how Progressive ideology has transformed public policy, the structures of government, and its potential impact on the country’s future. An example of historical analysis contained in the film would be the argument that the Progressive ideals employed
by FDR’s New Deal were the cause of the Great Depression, not the solution to it.

Through interviews with Constitutional scholars, authors, historians, public policymakers, and others, it reviews the original intent of
the Founders, why it is important and lays out how Progressivism is in conflict with that original intent.

Anyone who is NOT a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/
Communist is a Fascist according to Useful Liberal JackAss Idiots.
Anyone who refutes a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/
Communist is a moron according to Useful Liberal JackAss Idiots.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010
complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it.
Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as
"text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan "Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show." This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo. Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plain truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

"It is obvious what the fraudulent issue of fascism versus communism accomplishes: it sets up, as opposites, two variants of the same political system; it eliminates the possibility of considering capitalism; it switches the choice of “Freedom or dictatorship?” into “Which kind of dictatorship?”—thus establishing dictatorship as an inevitable fact and offering only a choice of rulers. The choice—according to the proponents of that fraud—is: a dictatorship of the rich (fascism) or a dictatorship of the poor (communism)."

"That fraud collapsed in the 1940’s, in the aftermath of World War II. It is too obvious, too easily demonstrable that fascism and communism are not two opposites, but two rival gangs fighting over the same territory—that both are variants of statism, based on the collectivist principle that man is the rightless slave of the state—that both are socialistic, in theory, in practice, and in the explicit statements of their leaders—that under both systems, the poor are enslaved and the rich are expropriated in favor of a ruling clique—that fascism is not the product of the political “right,” but of the “left”—that the basic issue is not “rich versus poor,” but man versus the state, or: individual rights versus totalitarian government—which means: capitalism versus socialism."

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

Dr. Ludwig von Mises - 1952 - http://mises.org/books/planningforfreedom_mises.pdf

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!”

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term “liberalism” (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning “pertaining to a free man”) first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

Who the hell is Liberal Fascist Donna Brazile? From CNN - the Communist News Network.

A Democratic Party consultant and campaign manager.

President George W. Bush once described political operative Donna Brazile as a Democratic Party “attack dog” because of her relentlessly aggressive modus operandi. Brazile has played a prominent role in the management of a number of political campaigns.

Born in New Orleans in 1959, Brazile earned a degree in industrial psychology from Louisiana State University. After graduating, she worked for a number of advocacy and lobbyist groups in Washington, DC, including the National Student Education Fund and the Community for Creative Non-Violence. She first drew widespread public notice in 1981 as the National Student Coordinator for the Martin Luther King, Jr. Holiday Committee, which petitioned to make the late civil rights leader's birthday a national holiday. In 1983 Brazile helped Coretta Scott King organize a 20th anniversary commemoration of the historic 1963 March on Washington.

In 1976 and 1980, Brazile worked on the presidential campaigns of Jimmy Carter. In 1984 she served not only as deputy campaign manager for presidential hopeful Jesse Jackson, but also as a Director of Jackson’s Rainbow Coalition. After Jackson dropped out of the race for President, Brazile worked on the campaign of the Democratic nominee, Walter Mondale (and his running mate Geraldine Ferraro). In 1988 Brazile worked for Representative Richard Gephardt's presidential campaign. When that was derailed, she went on to assist in the campaign of that year's eventual nominee, former Massachusetts Governor Michael Dukakis.

Brazile’s often volatile, impudent manner has repeatedly gotten her into trouble. In 1988, for instance, Dukakis fired her for making unfounded accusations that George Bush, Sr.’s presidential campaign discriminated against minorities, and for spreading unsubstantiated rumors that the soon-to-be-President was having an extramarital affair.

From 1990 through 1999, Brazile was a consultant to the Democratic National Committee. She also served as chief of staff to Washington, DC Delegate Eleanor Holmes Norton.

In 1996 Brazile was a Regional Director for the Democratic presidential ticket of Bill Clinton and Al Gore. Three years later, she began working for Al Gore’s 2000 presidential campaign -- first as Gore’s national political director and deputy campaign manager, and later as his chief campaign manager, making her the first African American woman to head a presidential campaign.

http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/individualProfile.asp?indid=1083

In 2009 Donna Brazile was listed as a member of the Advisory Board of Wellstone Action, http://www.keywiki.org/index.php/Wellstone_Action a Minnesota based organization based on the political legacy of that state’s late ‘progressive” Senator Paul Wellstone from.

http://www.keywiki.org/index.php/Paul_Wellstone

Wellstone Action and Wellstone Action Fund combine to form a national center for training and leadership development for the progressive movement. Founded in January 2003, Wellstone Action's mission is training, educating, mobilizing and organizing a vast network of progressive individuals and organizations.

The selection of Wisconsin Rep. Paul Ryan as Mitt Romney's running mate is sure to excite the Left almost as much as it does the Right.

Ryan, 42, has been considered a rising star in the party for years. He's been the chairman of the House Budget Committee since Republicans took back control of the House in 2010, and he's known for his keen fiscal knowledge. Plus, he hails from an important state. The GOP has been hoping to take Wisconsin this cycle. Although the state hasn't gone red in a presidential race since 1984, Republicans have been buoyed by the successful gubernatorial race of Scott Walker, who became the first governor to face a recall election and win last June.

Read More About Romney's Selection of Paul Ryan

Ryan is an exciting pick, but there's no such thing as a perfect candidate, and Ryan brings his own set of political risks to the table. Here's a list of five things that Mitt Romney might not want highlighted about his VP candidate (hint: most of them have to do with his budget proposals).

1. His budget plans include big cuts, and there's ample room for Democrats to continue with their "Romneyhood narrative." The nonpartisan Center on Budget and Policy Priorities estimates 62 percent of Ryan's cuts are to programs for the poor.

2. Ryan's budget proposals have included big changes to Medicare - including gradually replacing the program with a voucher program for private health care, and gradually raising the retirement age. That could scare older Americans, a crucial voting bloc.

3. He voted for the Troubled Asset Relief Program, or TARP. While a lot of other Republicans did too, and it was proposed by the Bush administration, some have viewed it as a rejection of the conservative economic values Ryan and hard-line fiscal conservatives espouse.

4. He's easily pegged as Washington insider. He's been in Congress since 1999, and before that he worked as a congressional staffer. Congressional approval ratings are abysmally low- a recent CBS News/NY Times poll showed that only 12 percent of voters approve of the way Congress is doing its job.

5. This is both a pro and a con to Ryan, depending on who you ask, but he's notably further to the left on the issue of lesbian, bisexual, gay and transgender rights than the base of the party. He broke with a lot of his party to support the Employee Non-Discrimination Act in 2007. He explained his reasoning for the vote in this way: "They [his gay friends] didn't roll out of bed one morning and choose to be gay. That's who they are."

I will try during US gray line. Conditions were kind of poor today on 40 M. Things are improving though. Reception from Florida is picking up so maybe later...

Yes.

I heard the IARU beacon from Finland a short time ago. But I only heard it at 100 watts.

I'm not sure why you say "Folks in the US will need exceptional conditions and receiving equipment to hear this...".

It really isn't as bad as you may think. Many hams -with average equipment- work Europeans running less than 10 watts all the time. A few years ago, from the USA Midwest, I worked a fellow in Indonesia who was running 10 watts on 80 meter CW.

But thanks for the post -- a very interesting set up!

I heard fast CW. slow CW, RTTY, PSK, and some type of OLIVIA on the frequency but nothing at the propertiming.

Will listen again tonight. The best time would probably be mid-week at about midnight local time I would guess. Sure is a busy frequency to run a 10 watt beacon.

Latest Liberty Net via WB4AIO

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

ONE OF THE EXPERIMENTS taking place at WB4AIO and N2IRJ is the introduction of software defined radios (SDRs) into the Liberty Net technological arsenal. Look for improved reception, streaming, and recordings in the near future!

Here's a tiny selection of the many, many subjects discussed and debated during this week's Liberty Net:

ï¿½ The Washington regime is opening a "data collection center" in Utah, which is supposed to become operational next year, explicitly for the illegal and unconstitutional purpose of aiding the regime's efforts to spy on our email, telephone, and other private conversations. (19 minutes)

ï¿½ Predictably, Mitt Romney has selected yet another neocon warmonger as his running mate. The "mainstream," billionaire-media-approved candidates of both parties all support the Zionist murderers and bankers who misrule us and a good part of the world. (23 minutes)

ï¿½ Some analysts predict that the day on which the Washington regime declares martial law to "put down" awakened patriots will also be the day on which the regime will be deposed by the military they tried to use against us. (25 minutes)

ï¿½ Lack of intellectual curiosity spells mental and spiritual death for the individual, though physical death may not supervene for many decades. If widespread enough, it will also spell death for our nation and civilization -- though the name and flag of the former country may still be used by an alien successor population. (27 minutes)

ï¿½ The Kept Right, like the Kept Left, is only allowed to address symptoms and personalities, while leaving the root problems not only untouched but unmentioned. Thus, the Kept Right claims that the banker bailouts and other sins of the current administration are the results of "incompetence," when nothing could be further from the truth. Anyone who can seriously utter memorized phrases like "we need a president with more foreign policy experience" and choose between Smiling Liar #1 and Smiling Liar #2 on such a basis is so moronic, so naive, and so accepting of so many false premises that he might as well fill his pockets and SUV cup holders with ball bearings and take a long scenic drive off Lido Pier right now. (32 minutes)

ï¿½ Any candidate -- like Romney or Obama -- who does not openly call for an Iceland-style prosecution of the parasitic banking elite is utterly worthless and unworthy of support. (37 minutes)

ï¿½ Which is a better use of your lifetime: Working for the candidate or party you like best from among the choices pre-approved by the oligarchs? -- Or working to overthrow the oligarchs? (48 minutes)

ï¿½ Why are the advanced European nations, and their derivatives like America and Australia, constantly being derided as "hateful" and "intolerant," when in fact they are almost the only places on Earth where there is a semblance of -- and a true feeling for -- tolerance of underdogs, minority ideas, and a refuge for those who have been oppressed elsewhere? (1 hour 9 minutes)

Remember, you can actually participate in these Liberty Net discussions by checking in Saturday nights at 10 pm Eastern Time, somewhere above 3950 kHz (lately 3967 has been used quite a bit) on the 75 meter phone band, or by logging on to one of the live streams right here at http://3950.net/ or at N2SAG's Stickam page, linked in the left column of our site. See you on the air!

This week we got a break from the steady stream of blah blah blah that typically issues forth on 75m LSB from 10pm EDT till the wee hours.

Never in a million years did we expect The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net to suddenly come up with a whole list of new topics like ..

Clinton's a crook
Bush is a crook
Gore is a crook
Biden's a crook
They're all crooks

I hope Loose Orifice and the other departed members of The Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net were listening from that happy ham shack in the sky. I know their hearts would have swelled with pride.

It just ain't the same now that those who made the listning worthwhile are gone on to their eternal reward.

"Moan Faggots Moan" .. "Hellooooooooooo Loose Orifice" ... it just ain't the same no more. No way.

I hope Sir Sidney has a gold plated Alpha 77SX in his heavenly ham shack, going to a ten wave rhombic that is tuned flat match on the frequency with that week's Great Liberty Nit-Wit-Net.

Ditto for Arky Bob.

Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
13 - 19 August 2012

Solar activity has been at very low to high levels. Two active sunspot regions dominated the summary period. Region 1543 (N21, L=21, class/area Hhx/360 on 16 August) was the most active region from 13-16 August, producing multiple C-class solar flares. Many of these events were associated with discrete radio frequency bursts, Type II and Type IV radio sweeps, suggesting CME liftoff. Due to the location of Region 1543, many of the CME&rsquo;s were Earth-directed but very little effects were forecast upon arrival at Earth. Region 1543 decayed from a beta-gamma to a simple beta group during the summary period. On 17 August, from around the east limb, multiple M-class solar flares were observed, including an M2.4 x-ray event at 17/1319 UTC as well as an M1 x-ray event at 17/1720 UTC. On18 August, five more M-class solar flares were observed, the largest being an M5/Sf x-ray flare at 18/0102 UTC with an associated 120 sfu Tenflare. As the day progressed, Region 1548 (N20, L=232, class/area Cso/120 on 18 August) was numbered and determined to be the active region responsible for all of the M-class events. From 16-18 August, multiple CME&rsquo;s were observed in LASCO C2 imagery, all appeared to originate from Region 1548. Due to the location around the east limb, none of these CME&rsquo;s were forecast to arrive at Earth.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at normal to moderate levels during the period

Geomagnetic field activity was at predominantly quiet to active levels throughout the summary period. Quiet to unsettled levels prevailed from 13-16 August as solar wind speeds, as measured by the ACE spacecraft, remained at nominal background levels. An increase to quiet to unsettled levels with isolated active periods were observed from 17-19 August. Weak CME effects were observed on 17 August and late on 18 August, measurements from the ACE spacecraft indicated a solar sector boundary (SSB) crossing. Following the SSB, coronal hole effects were observed on 19 August with solar wind speeds, increasing from below 400 km/s to almost 600 km/s

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
20 August - 15 September 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at low levels with a slight chance for more M-class events from 20-31 August as Region 1548 continues to evolve and rotate across the disk. A return to predominantly low levels is expected to prevail from 01-15 September.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be normal levels from 20-21 August. An increase to high flux levels is expected from 22-26 August. A return to normal - background levels is expected to prevail for the remainder of the period.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be at mostly quiet levels with a few brief periods of quiet to unsettled levels due to recurrent coronal hole high speed stream effects. From 20 - 22 August, 25-25 August, 08-09 September, and 15 September quiet to unsettled levels are expected. For the remainder of the forecast period, mostly quiet levels are expected to prevail.

"A Republican congressmember has apologized to his constituents after a report emerged saying he had gone skinny dipping in the Sea of Galilee during a fact-minding trip to Israel last year. Several Republican members of Congress took a late-night swim in the sea, some reportedly motivated by religious fervor. But Rep. Kevin Yoder of Kansas apparently went a step further by jumping into the sea naked. The late-night incident, which also involved alcohol, drew a strong rebuke at the time from House Majority Leader Eric Cantor and reportedly prompted the FBI to investigate for inappropriate behavior. More than 80 members of Congress were on the trip, which was sponsored by a charity affiliated with the pro-Israeli government lobbying group the American Israel Public Affairs Committee, or AIPAC."

The national media slobbered over the news of the vicious anti-gay hate crime for days on end. Now I haven't heard anything about the story being made up by the deranged "victim" other than in the local newspaper. Interesting.

Police: Ex-Neb. hoops star faked anti-gay attack

By GRANT SCHULTE
Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) -- A former University of Nebraska women's basketball star faked an attack in which she allegedly carved anti-gay slurs into her skin because she felt it would spark change, police said Tuesday.

Four days before Charlie Rogers crawled naked and bleeding from her Lincoln home, screaming for help, she outlined in a Facebook posting what investigators believe was her motive for faking the July 22 attack, Police Chief Jim Peschong said at a news conference.

"So maybe I am too idealistic, but I believe way deep inside me that we can make things better for everyone. I will be a catalyst. I will do what it takes. I will. Watch me," read the July 18 posting, according to police.

Furthermore, genetic testing on evidence gathered at the crime scene undermines Rogers' account of what happened, Peschong said.

Charlie Rogers, 33, pleaded not guilty Tuesday to making a false police report and was released on her own recognizance. She didn't respond to a message seeking comment left Tuesday at a number listed as hers, but her lawyer, Brett McArthur, said she maintains the attack happened and plans to vigorously defend herself.

"This has been a very traumatic event for her, and having the focus of the investigation turn toward her has been really hard," said McArthur, who described Rogers as reserved and soft-spoken, and not the type to seek attention.

"She has no reason to lie about what happened. She's pretty devastated, when you go to authorities and things kind of get turned around on you," he said.

Rogers, a lesbian who ranks second all-time in blocked shots for the Cornhuskers, reported the attack amid a charged debate in Lincoln over the city's proposed "fairness ordinance," which would ban discrimination against gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender people. The City Council approved the ordinance in May, 5-0, but two conservative groups gathered enough signatures to force a popular vote on it before it can take effect.

According to police, Rogers said three masked men broke into her home, and that one of them pinned her down while another sliced a cross into her chest, cut the front of her thighs and shins and carved derogatory words in her arms and abdomen. She said they then rolled her onto her stomach and cut her buttocks, the back of her thighs and the back of her right calf. She also said they tried to burn down her house.

Rogers crawled from her home naked, bleeding and screaming for help, a neighbor told police. The community's gay community responded swiftly, and hundreds turned out for a rally that weekend outside the state Capitol.

On Tuesday, four Nebraska gay-rights groups that followed the case released a joint statement crediting police for conducting what they believe was a balanced and thorough investigation.

"It is important not to focus on the actions of any single individual," the groups said in the statement. "As residents of Lincoln we must continue to bring our community together to declare that violence and hate are not the values of our city."

According to Peschong, police found a pile of clothes, white knit gloves and a red box cutter on the living room floor after the alleged attack. Rogers said the gloves didn't belong to her, but investigators determined that a lot of the DNA found inside the glove was Rogers' and that none of it came from a male.

Peschong said investigators discovered that Rogers deleted numerous text messages she had sent the evening of the alleged attack, and that she bought cotton gloves, a box cutter and zip ties from an Ace Hardware Store in Lincoln on July 17. All of the items were later found in her house, he said. When confronted about the evidence weeks later, he said, Rogers admitted to purchasing all of the items except the gloves.

She also sent a photo of a cross-shaped cut on her chest to a friend a few days before the reported attack, Peschong said.

Investigators say they found no apparent sign of a struggle in the living room where Rogers said she was attacked, and no blood on the sheets where the cutting allegedly took place. An FBI forensic pathologist concluded that Rogers either cut herself, or allowed someone else to do it.

Peschong said the department spent thousands of dollars investigating the case, but he stressed that the case will not undermine the department's trust in people who report hate crimes.

"The FBI, the Bureau of Fire Prevention and the Lincoln Police Department have spent an exorbitant amount of time and personnel resources investigating this," he said. "We aggressively investigated this. Every day since this incident has happened, there have been investigators working on trying to identify who these assailants were."

A Powerful Movie

Years, and sometimes decades, pass between my visits to movie theaters. But I drove 30 miles to see the movie "2016," based on Dinesh D'Souza's best-selling book, "The Roots of Obama's Rage." Where I live is so politically correct that such a movie would not even be mentioned, much less shown.

Every seat in the theater was filled, even though there had been an earlier showing that day, and more showings were scheduled for the rest of the afternoon and evening. I had to sit on a staircase in the balcony, but it was worth it.

The audience was riveted. You could barely hear a sound from them, or detect a movement, and certainly not smell popcorn. Yet the movie had no bombast, no violence, no sex and no spectacular visual effects.

The documentary itself was fascinating, as Dinesh D'Souza presented the story of Barack Obama's life and view of the world, in a very conversational sort of way, illustrating it with visits to people and places around the world that played a role in the way Obama's ideas and beliefs evolved.

It was refreshing to see how addressing adults as adults could be effective, in an age when so many parts of the media address the public as if they were children who need a constant whirlwind of sounds and movements to keep them interested.

Dinesh D'Souza's own perspective, as someone born in India who came to America and became an American, provided a special insight into the way people from the Third World often perceive or misperceive the United States and the Western world.

That Third World perspective is Obama's perspective, D'Souza demonstrates in this documentary, as in his book -- and it is a perspective that is very foreign to that of most Americans, which may be why some believe that Obama was born elsewhere.

D'Souza is convinced that the president was born in Hawaii, as he claims, but argues that not only Obama's time living in Indonesia and his emotionally charged visits to his father's home in Africa, have had a deep and impassioned effect on his thinking.

The story of Barack Obama, however, is not just the story of how one man came to be the way he is. It is a much larger story about how millions of Americans came to vote for, and some to idolize, a man whose fundamental beliefs and values are so different from their own.

For every person who sees Obama as somehow foreign there are many others who see him as a mainstream American political figure -- and an inspiring one.

This D'Souza attributes to Barack Obama's great talents in rhetoric, and his ability to project an image that resonates with most Americans, however much that image may differ from, or even flatly contradict, the reality of Obama's own ideological view of the world.

What is that ideological view?

The Third World, or anti-colonial, view is that the rich nations have gotten rich by taking wealth from the poor nations. It is part of a much larger vision, in which the rich in general have gotten rich by taking from the poor, whether in their own country or elsewhere.

Whatever its factual weaknesses, it is an emotionally powerful vision, to which many people have dedicated their lives, and for which some have even risked their lives. Some of these people appear in this documentary movie, as they have appeared throughout the formative phases of Barack Obama's life.

The Reverend Jeremiah Wright is just the most visible and vocal of a long line of such people who played crucial roles in Obama's evolution. When Jeremiah Wright thundered about how "white folks' greed runs a world in need," he captured the essence of the Third World or anti-colonial vision.

But many of the other mentors, allies, family and friends of Barack Obama over the years were of the same mindset, as this documentary demonstrates.

More important, the movie "2016" demonstrates how so many of Obama's actions as President of the United States, which D'Souza had predicted on the basis of his study of Obama's background, are perfectly consistent with that ideology, however inconsistent it is with the rhetoric that gained him the highest office in the land.

True, but few people read the raw feeds on the wire services. (For example, who here is aware of the UPI stories on Israeli death squads being deployed in Western nations?)

There is a huge difference in the way national editors treat stories with Politically Correct perpetrators versus those with Politically Incorrect perpetrators. One often results in major network and front page coverage for weeks -- the other almost never does so.

With every good wish,

The truth is that almost no one is committed to being informed, in this country, anymore. They take what they're spoonfed, and ignore much of that. To be truly informed requires work, and there just isn't that much effort being put into by the public. And editors know this.

In school, I sat through class after class telling me that the public will know what we WANT them to know, because we're the media, and they're ignorant (although the presentation was much less direct than that statement). At CBS, I sat through meeting after meeting after meeting, (until I could no longer stand it and left), where we were told what we'd talk about, how we'd cover it, and what our position was to be on that subject. And when I spoke up and said that the 'official' position isn't true, was told...and this is a direct quote from my GM..."this is what we stand for. And we will make the case, without reservation, or we'll no longer work here. The subject is not open for debate."

I walked out in utter disgust not long after. Put my key on the table, and never went back. Not even to clean out my office. I left my mics, preamps, and compressors there, as well as nearly 12 years of material and properties.

Andy Warhol, of whom I was never really a fan, made a significant point with his Empire State building film: that the truth, in media, is what's given to you. And that everything you see, hear, read, or experience in media is from a point of view selected by the producer, editor, writer, or presenter. Doug Urbanski said that in Hollywood, EVERYTHING is staged. The topic is selected. The presentation is crafted, and everything...every inflection, every pause, every facial muscles' twitch is carefully selected to imply a judgment about the topic. There is no unbiased coverage, or presentation. Not in Hollywood. Not anywhere.

Even something as simple as 8 hours of a single shot of the Empire State Building is biased. You see the perspective of the camera. A perspective that's chosen for you, unchallenged, and uncontrasted, by the person who chose the shot. The unbiased truth isn't what's on the screen, it's what's standing at 5th Ave and West 34th. The unbiased truth is the Empire State Building seen from all sides, and all angles all times of the day or night. And experienced in totality.

Media doesn't do that. Media selects. Media edits. And the truth is often the things that Media never presents, never reveals.

I am considering buying a DX-440 off someone for $40. It requires a 9V 300mA AC adapter. The one with it is a 9.6V AC adapter. The radio seems to work fine. I have a correct 9V adapter, but I was wondering whether this should put me off the purchase because it may have shortened the life of the radio.

If the voltage is AC and not DC on the transformer I wouldn't buy the radio. Otherwise 9.6 volts DC is well within the tolerance of the radios voltage. Voltage should be no more then 10% above or below the required voltage.
9V * .10 = 0.9 volts so the range of the radio input voltage is from 8.1 to 9.9 volts DC.

The wall transformer should be 110-120 volts AC input and 9 volts DC output.

Evidently the larger point is lost on you. Nonetheless, I think the U.S. taxpayers care about the results of such vacations considering Israel has cost them about $1.6 TRILLION since 1973. See

Is not expected to live much longer due to illness (Addisons disease), death could come within days. He hosted an overnight radio program on WLW Cincinnati for 20 years aimed at truckers. Most recently he did an afternoon gig on XM radio (RoadDog trucking).

An abrasive personality but a talented and entertaining radio broadcaster nonetheless. He lived quite an interesting life. It is a shame he didn't compile all of his stories into written form for posterity.

The working voltage input to the radio is dependent on the load capacity of the adaptor, and the draw of the radio. With an unregulated adaptor, sufficient load will draw down the voltage input to the radio, so if the adaptor's output is rated at 9v for that radio, the open circuit voltage can be considerably higher. As much as 12v, in some cases. So, when evaluating an unregulated adaptor, both the rated current and rated voltage should be considered against the drain of the radio.

The bad news is that if the adaptor is unregulated, and the capacity is sufficiently large, that the voltage draw down will not be sufficient to bring the voltage input to the radio down to the radio's specs. Most radios, today, are diode protected so any reasonable overvoltage won't harm the radio. If the radio is not diode protected, the overvoltage of the adaptor when load is not sufficient can damage the radio.

My recommendation would be to see if the radio works on batteries. If so, make the purchase. Life of the radio is rarely affected incrementally by an over voltage, or an incorrect current. It's either damaged, and stops working, or it's not and works properly. But don't use the supplied adaptor. Find another one, either regulated at the correct rated voltage, or unregulated at voltage and current ratings that are correct for the radio.

DX-440, is a common enough radio that you'll be able to find a correct adaptor easily.

And a lot of hypocrisy has been making the rounds lately in the Republican party, Paul Ryan for example.

Ryan is on record as being strongly against the "stimulus funds". Fair enough -- if he would stick to his guns. Unfortunately, he got caught with his pants down when two letters came to light on HIS stationery and with HIS signature asking for stimulus funds. This incident got him a "two fer"...he was shown to be a liar AND a hypocrite in one fell swoop.

On second thought, maybe he and the Mittster are made for each other -- both are master flip-floppers.

If the radio works fine and you like it, buy it. Normal variations on the AC line (115 to 125 volts) can cause a few tenths of a volt variation in the output voltage even on the factory adapter.

Also, you say you have "a correct 9V adapter". If it was specifically made for the radio, that's great. If not, make sure the voltage AND polarity are correct for the radio.

A politician that is a hypocrite! What a shocker! Only fools care about what a politician says and does. You probably vote, too. Voting is opium for the masses. Voting gives the masses the illusion that their vote actually means something.

Yes, Well if I ever murder someone I won't cry when they throw me in jail and later execute me. Of course, a jackass like you would cry, "I'm a mental case. Let me go."

The fourth-best showing of the year for any documentary ($2 million).
The best showing of the year ironically belongs to Chimpanzee ($29 million) - ROTFL

Anti-Obama Film Already No. 2 Grossing Documentary This Year

[...] supporters of the documentary have reported instances that media outlets are trying to dampen enthusiasm about the movie and in some cases, making it more difficult for people to find showtimes and information about the film. Yahoo! Movies, one of the largest movie listing sites on the web, does not list theaters, showtimes, or even general information about the film.

I was interested in seeing the new movie, 2016: Obama's America so I went to Yahoo! Movies as I usually do to find the time and showing. I found that you cannot search for it on Yahoo! Movies, asserted one irritable moviegoer. I checked the movie's site and found out where it was opening on August 24th and so I checked those theaters for that date
and it does not show up. Is it possible that Yahoo! is trying to keep people from watching this movie?

Yahoo! deflected such criticisms. "Yahoo! only displays movies that we have received information about from distributors or representatives of films," a company spokesperson disclosed. However, reports Fox News:

The movie's distributors have yet to comment on whether or not they sent information to Yahoo!, but a source close to the film points out that if you search Yahoo! Movies for a smaller movie opening in a small number of theaters that may not be in Yahoo!'s film database, like the new movie
"Compliance," which opened last weekend in a single theater, Yahoo! Movies defaults to a web search for that title, which yields multiple results. The same search for "2016" yields no search results, even though it has been widely discussed and covered online.

Co-director John Sullivan said that when typing a film's name in Yahoo! s movie site, generally hundreds of search results are listed, yet when searching for 2016: Obama s America, not a single result is found. The movie s website is pulling in nearly a million page views per day, Sullivan added, so it s not as though the information traffic is not out there.

Speculation has been stirring that several other paper and online publications have neglected to publish theater locations and showtimes for the movie. The Christian Post, for instance, reported that someone in Orange County, California, grumbled in an e-mail that none of the local papers were publishing listings for the movie, despite the fact it was playing in a number of theaters.

Commenting on the debacle, Molen called the situation disturbing and revealing.

Disturbing because the film has exploded on the American scene and every American with the desire should be afforded the opportunity to see it, he suggested. Yet forces are seemingly at work trying to stop it. Revealing because it demonstrates how far some will go to stop the flow of information they feel might be against their agenda, be it political or ideological.

I guess even PeTA can do something right once in a while. Now if they'd go throwing kittens on a barbeque, etc., they might make it off my total shit Bush’s Vacation Get-Away in Paraguay?

By Deanna Spingola

"Every country must surrender their sovereignty in order to establish the One World Order. This is facilitated by the globalists and their American minions, abetted by the obedience-trained U.S. Congress. Economic destabilization, with or without military blitzkriegs (a.k.a. major acts of terrorism) is an effective method for taking over a vulnerable country. The play-for-pay political puppets are installed or replaced according to their compliance to the globalist handlers. The elite affluent men behind the curtain remain the same: big banks and multi-national businesses. The privatization of so many government functions has stripped Congress, with their compromised consent, of congressional approval and oversight which is mandated by congressional law. Paul Ryan's Medicare Plan Still Deeply Unpopular

The Huffington Post | By Sam Stein
Posted: 08/21/2012 2:01 pm Updated: 08/21/2012 2:38 pm

A number of top Democratic strategists have wondered why, exactly, the Obama campaign let Mitt Romney launch the first attacks on Obama's handling of Medicare, rather than the other way around.

Among the explanations offered is the theory that the president's campaign wants to preserve its cash (which has been dwindling), that it is waiting until after the conventions to make this a major issue, and that it thinks the public so distrusts the GOP on the topic that it doesn't mind having the conversation center there, even if the Obama campaign is on the defensive.

That later point was bolstered in a Pew Research Center poll released on Tuesday, which showed that the public opposes the idea of changing "Medicare into a program that would give future participants a credit toward purchasing private health insurance coverage" by a margin of 49 percent to 34 percent. Moreover, 72 percent of respondents have heard a lot or a little about the idea, while just 29 percent say they heard nothing.

The margin between those opposing changing Medicare and those supporting a change is even greater among the elderly, with 55 percent of people 65 or older opposing the proposal and 24 percent supporting it. That is a large part of the reason that Romney and Ryan have pledged not to apply the changes to anyone 55 or older.

And yet, not all news is good news for the president on this front. While the public largely doesn't like a quasi-voucher system for Medicare, it also isn't entirely sure which politician has proposed it. As Pew notes:

At this point, most Americans do not associate Ryan with the proposal to change Medicare. Just 23% of those who have heard about the idea of shifting Medicare to a system of credits to buy private insurance identify it as Ryan's. Nearly as many (17%) say Barack Obama proposed this, while 44% do not know who proposed it.

This post has been updated to clarify the Obama campaign's response to Romney's attacks.

Was receiving both pretty well. No problem separating them. I was using the Perseus SDR. As long as the bandwidth of an adjacent (5kHz

Liberty Net: August 18, 2012

http://3950.net/2012/08/liberty-net-august-18-2012/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THEREï¿½S QUITE a bit of controversy on the Liberty Net ï¿½ lately thereï¿½s been strong disagreement between some net participants on the one hand who think that getting rid of the regimeï¿½s current figurehead would be much better for our peopleï¿½s future, those on the other hand who think that a Republican figurehead would be even worse, and those who believe that electoral politics make no difference whatsoever and we should be working to secede or to radically alter or replace the illegal regime in Washington.

Hereï¿½s a small sample of the hundreds of topics debated during the Liberty Net this week:

ï¿½ In Europe ï¿½ and in the Old America ï¿½ private home and apartment gardens were once encouraged as a means of increasing self-sufficiency and the citizensï¿½ ability to survive a money crisis. But would such a plan work in the gang-ridden, disunited, ignorant, violent Third World society that America is becoming? (16 minutes)

ï¿½ When President Zero, the current manager of the oligarchsï¿½ estate in America, makes public appearances, everyone in the audience has to be authorized and exhaustively analyzed as to identification and background. Strangely, the same standards are not ï¿½ and indeed cannot, if he is to stay in office ï¿½ be applied to Fetchit himself. (28 minutes)

ï¿½ Why did the Social Security Administration order millions upon millions of rounds of hollow-point ammunition recently? Why have similar non-police and non-military arms of the Washington regime done the same thing? Could it have something to do with the whistleblower at DHS who said the regime is expecting the economy to get much worse and possibly precipitate a patriotic revolution ï¿½ which they intend to suppress with violence? (40 minutes)

ï¿½ Local or state ordinances banning gardens should be overridden by a national policy promoting family and community gardens and absolutely tax-free barter between gardeners. A new patriotic national government could do this immediately ï¿½ but our dependence-loving and megacorporation-loving occupation government is unlikely to do so. (48 minutes)

ï¿½ A new virus called ï¿½Shamoonï¿½ has hit the Saudi Arabian oil company Aramco, and apparently targets oil producers in the Middle East, making Israel the primary suspect despite a previously unheard-of ï¿½Arab Youthï¿½ group taking credit. (1 hour 55 minutes)

ï¿½ Apparently one group ï¿½ the misnamed ï¿½Hispanicï¿½ invaders of our southern borders ï¿½ is immune from prosecution for their decades-long open and egregious violation of fundamental law. Why should others be required to obey it, then? (2 hours 11 minutes)

ï¿½ Is Romneyï¿½s warmongering just temporary pandering to the Jewish power structure, since he knows that that group largely controls ï¿½Americanï¿½ media and finance? Is he a man who really holds quite different beliefs ï¿½ beliefs that will show themselves once he has power (assuming that presidents really do have power)? Or is he a man utterly without beliefs or morals, who rises by pandering to groups with money and influence? (2 hours 26 minutes)

ï¿½ What is mentally and morally wrong with the millions of Americans who are not outraged by the Washington regimeï¿½s officially announced policy of murdering anyone they choose anywhere in the world, including American citizens? Obamaï¿½s supporters thought that their candidate would end the murders ï¿½ but he instead increased them. And Rob-me is if anything even more bloodthirsty. The oligarchs will not give us a choice in the matter. They want the right to slaughter their enemies, and we peons must never be able to overrule that. (2 hours 38 minutes)

ï¿½ A chef at a prestigious Iowa City restaurant was arrested and charged with a federal crime simply for looking up Obamaï¿½s college records while employed at a previous job. The attorney who represented him was a recent check-in to the Liberty Net. (3 hours 10 minutes)

ï¿½ John Corzine, who helmed MF Global as it ï¿½lostï¿½ billions in shareholdersï¿½ funds, is considering starting a brand new hedge fund. Whoï¿½s next? Bernie Madoff? (3 hours 14 minutes)

ï¿½ Social Security has been used by our rulers as a semi-covert way to funnel billions more to ï¿½minorityï¿½ groups through what is known on the street as ï¿½crazy moneyï¿½ ï¿½ large monthly payments made to families with a ï¿½cognitively impairedï¿½ child or three. Since the average IQ of Africans is only marginally above what is officially considered retarded, huge numbers qualify. Certain other groups arenï¿½t much different. If the ï¿½crazy moneyï¿½ ever stops flowing, maybe the Social Security offices will need those hollow-point bullets. (3 hours 30 minutes)

Remember that you can receive the Liberty Net in the area of 3950 kHz and above every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time ï¿½ or listen live on the Internet. And you can listen at your leisure via the mp3 files posted here at http://3950.net every week. Each Saturday nightï¿½s mp3 file is usually posted on the next morning ï¿½ Sunday ï¿½ and will be visible that day in the upper right column of this site.

Once again, thanks to W1WCR for running this important and historic discussion net ï¿½ now in its 38th year ï¿½ and thanks also to N2IRJ for making these recordings available.

Weekly Highlights and Forecasts
#
Highlights of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
20 - 26 August 2012

Solar activity was very low until 25 and 26 August. The largest flare of the reporting period was a C1/Sf at 25/0236 UTC from Region 1554 (N16, L=215, class/area Dsi/170 on 25 August). No coronal mass ejections observed during the reporting period were Earth-directed.

No proton events were observed at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit was at high levels from 21 - 24 August. Moderate levels were observed 20
August and again from 25 - 26 August.

Geomagnetic field activity was mostly quiet to unsettled with an isolated active period mid-day on 26 August. At the beginning of the period, solar wind speed, measured at the ACE spacecraft, indicated the presence of a coronal hole high speed stream (CH HSS). Solar wind decreased steadily from approximately 600 km/s to 400 km/s by early on 22 August. Quiet to unsettled conditions were observed on 20 - 21 August. By mid-day on 24 August, the phi angle changed from a positive to negative orientation indicating a solar sector boundary crossing. Solar wind speed began to increase early on 25 August from approximately 400 km/s to 610 km/s as another CH HSS moved into geoeffective position. Solar wind speed increased once more mid-day on 26 August and ended the period around 700 km/s.
Conditions were quiet on 22 August. Conditions remained at quiet to unsettled levels from 23 August until mid-day on 26 August as an isolated active period was observed.

Forecast of Solar and Geomagnetic Activity
27 August - 22 September 2012

Solar activity is expected to be at very low to low levels with a slight chance for M-class activity through the forecast period.

No proton events are expected at geosynchronous orbit.

The greater than 2 MeV electron flux at geosynchronous orbit is expected to be at high levels on 29 - 30 August, 09 - 10 September, 16 - 17 September, and again on 22 September due to effects from coronal hole high speed streams.

Geomagnetic field activity is expected to be mostly quiet to unsettled until 15 September as a recurrent coronal hole high speed stream moves into a geoeffective position. Unsettled to active conditions are expected on 15 - 16 September. Conditions are expected to be mostly quiet to unsettled again from 17 September through 21 September. Another recurrent coronal hole high speed stream is expected to become geoeffective on 22 September causing unsettled to active conditions.

I can tell you what became of Bush. He did such a poor job as Obama can only help to do so well, given his poll numbers.

Clinton did, Eisenhower did, Bush 1 didn't, Jimmy Carter didn't.

If you want to call having the 2008 Depression that started on W's watch and W lying us into two bogus, unfunded, decades long "wars" that cost

Interesting that Kerry's supposed flip-flopping, very minor league if it was even true, was enough to keep Kerry from being elected.

How will that play out with Romney's well documented world class flip-flopping?

It will irradiate the Columbia River Bridge in Portland.

But not the I-205 bridge? :)

Remember, there's a lot of territory for the radioactive material to end up attached to by the time it gets to Portland (and after, as well). I suspect that the John Day dam, et al, will end up backing a lot of it up (it's not gonna float very well, after all..)

So much specious reasoning in so little space - amazing. But yes, Asians as a whole are guilty of extreme cruelty to animals and thus deserve all the contempt that can be heaped upon them. It is not only "our place" to take a stand against evil, it is our responsibility.

You are correct Kevin, however I doubt the fellow from Mississippi possesses the ability to grasp your point, he is missing a few chromosomes. I like your cows/kittens analogy. Dick Gregory insists that meat eaters should be required to slaughter their own bloody meals instead of copping out and paying someone to perform their cruelty for them. I agree so became a vegetarian 10 years and 75 pounds ago. Been healthier and more energetic ever since. Best thing I've ever done for myself, animals, the environment and my spirituality.

"Animals and humans suffer and die alike. If you had on kill your own hog before you ate it, most likely you would not be able to do it. To hear the hog scream, to see the blood spill, to see the baby being taken away from its momma, and to see the look of death in the animals eye would turn your stomach. So you get the man at the packing house to do the killing for you."

Last week, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention released its annual report detailing obesity rates throughout the 50 states. For the SIXTH year in a row, MISSISSIPPI cinched the top spot:
according to results from the study, nearly 34.9% of its population are disgusting fat slobs.

Overall Dixie leads the way with the highest prevalence of fat asses – with several states among the 12 that are in the over-30% category of disgusting fat slobs: Alabama, Arkansas, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Texas and West Virginia.

An Israeli judge has cleared Israel’s military of responsibility for the killing of the U.S. peace activist Rachel Corrie. A 23-year-old college student, Corrie was crushed to death by an Israeli army bulldozer in Gaza nine years ago. She was standing in front of a Palestinian home to help prevent its demolition. Today’s ruling came in a wrongful death civil suit brought by Corrie’s family, with the judge rejecting any negligence on the part of the driver and finding that Corrie’s death resulted from "an accident she brought upon herself." Corrie family attorney Hussein Abu Hussein denounced the verdict.

Hussein Abu Hussein: "This verdict distorts the strong evidence presented in court and contradicts fundamental principles of international law with regard to protection of human right defenders. In denying justice in [the] Rachel Corrie killing, this verdict speaks to the systematic failure to hold the Israeli military accountable for continuing violation of basic human rights."

The ruling follows an earlier internal Israeli army investigation that also exonerated the bulldozer drivers. The Corrie family had been seeking a symbolic $1 in damages, as well as legal fees.

Republican candidate Mitt Romney unveiled a new plan that would radically alter the nation’s energy policy. On Thursday, Romney called for ending the longstanding federal regulation of oil and gas drilling and coal mining on government-owned lands, and instead transferring responsibility over to the states. The move would mark a huge win for oil and gas companies as states notoriously have weaker regulatory mechanisms than the federal government.

Romney unveiled his plan just days after taking in nearly $10 million from the oil and gas industry in two fundraisers. According to the New York Times, Romney’s staff drafted his plan with energy industry executives, including the billionaire oil tycoon Harold Hamm.

I will respectfully disagree with you.

Israeli story:

"We yelled at her several times to move and she didn't move. So we ran her over with the bulldozer".

What they should have done:

Hey, this is one 150 lb girl. Why didn't they send in 3 or 4 or 5 big, beefy soldiers and forcibly take her out of the way? That ain't rocket science...and it would have saved the Israelis an international black eye.

Shame on the Israelis. :-(

Huh? The same?

I thought the current administration was more or less trying to protect the environment, not giving away the store like Romney's plan above.

Shame on the girl for not being intelligent enough to move out of the way (as you say, that ain't rocket science). Because of her very stupid decision, she is dead.

Meanwhile, the Israelis are busy getting rid of the threat of rockets being fired into their territory.

Rockets and attacks go away, the Israelis go away. Pretty damn simple.

Paul Ryan and Mitt Romney were interviewed on '60 Minutes.'

Seems like just yesterday that the big Republican talking point was that Obamacare cuts $500 billion from Medicare. Now, it's $700 billion.

That's the number -- $716 billion to be precise -- that's gotten tossed around this week.

We've posted two fact-checks to explore the back and forth between the campaigns.

In an interview on the CBS program 60 Minutes, Mitt Romney said Obama "robbed Medicare" of $716 billion to pay for "Obamacare." We found that exaggerated what Obama had done in the health care law.

While the health care law reduces the amount of future spending growth in Medicare, the law doesn't actually cut Medicare.
Savings come from reducing money that goes to private insurers who provide Medicare Advantage programs, among other things. The money wasn't "robbed." We rated the statement Mostly False.

Responding to the Romney attack, Obama campaign spokeswoman Stephanie Cutter said Ryan's budget relies on the same $700 billion in savings from Medicare that Mitt Romney and other Republicans have been attacking Democrats about.

Ryan has confirmed that, and we rated it True.

AFSCME Member Discusses Retirement Security at White House

by Clyde Weiss | July 18, 2012

New York
AFSCME retiree Stuart Leibowitz participated in a White House panel discussion on senior issues Monday. (Photo by Jon Melegrito)

New York AFSCME retiree Stuart Leibowitz served as a panelist at Monday's White House Community Leaders Briefing on Senior Issues, discussing the importance of preserving Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security. Leibowitz warned against right-wing plans to privatize those social safety net programs.

Vice President Joe Biden opened the briefing, which was attended by AFSCME retiree members from Maryland, New York, North Carolina, Ohio and Pennsylvania. Leibowitz, one of three retiree panelists who spoke at the event, is president of AFSCME's New York City Retiree Chapter 37 as well as the New York City Alliance for Retired Americans.

In his remarks at the White House, Leibowitz made the point that his own brain surgery a few years ago would have been unaffordable without Medicare coverage.

"Who can afford the price of major surgery?" he asked in an interview after the White House event. "It is impossible for anybody ☐ unless you're in the top 1 percent ☐ to pay your own bills with respect to major surgery."

Medicare faces threats from the Rep. Paul Ryan budget bill passed in March by the Republican majority in the House of Representatives and supported by the presumed GOP Presidential nominee Mitt Romney. The Romney/Ryan budget would replace Medicare's guaranteed benefits package with a flat-payment subsidy (or "voucher"). With it, beneficiaries could purchase either private health insurance or traditional Medicare, but Leibowitz said the GOP bill stacks the deck against the traditional program and would soon lead to its demise. It essentially privatizes the program, he said. Learn more about the Romney/Ryan Medicare threat here.

Leibowitz said guaranteed coverage is "priceless" and that those who advocate privatization of Medicare "are doing the nation a grave disservice, especially the senior population, which is growing every day and living longer." Medicare vouchers will eventually fall behind the cost of coverage, requiring seniors to pay more and more from their own pockets.

Leibowitz praised Vice President Biden and President Obama for their commitment to preserving Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security. Social Security provides benefits for survivors and people with disabilities, as well as retirees, he noted. He said that, contrary to some reports, "the system is not broke and whoever says it's broke is a liar." The Social Security trustees say the system is in surplus and will be able to pay all benefits for another 25 years, and 75 percent of benefits after that. It needs some tinkering to fill-in the gap, but it can be sustained without major changes, he emphasized.

Paul Ryan's speech in 3 words

By Sally Kohn

Published August 30, 2012

FoxNews.com

Aug. 29, 2012: Republican vice presidential nominee Paul Ryan addresses the Republican National Convention in Tampa, Fla.
AP

1. Dazzling

At least a quarter of Americans still don't know who Paul Ryan is, and only about half who know and have an opinion of him view him favorably .

So, Ryan's primary job tonight was to introduce himself and make himself seem likeable, and he did that well. The personal parts of the speech were very personally delivered, especially the touching parts where Ryan talked about his father and mother and their roles in his life. And at the end of the speech, when Ryan cheered the crowd to its feet, he showed an energy and enthusiasm that's what voters want in leaders and what Republicans have been desperately lacking in this campaign.

To anyone watching Ryan's speech who hasn't been paying much attention to the ins and outs and accusations of the campaign, I suspect Ryan came across as a smart, passionate and all-around nice guy ☐ the sort of guy you can imagine having a friendly chat with while watching your kids play soccer together. And for a lot of voters, what matters isn't what candidates have done or what they promise to do ☐it's personality. On this measure, Mitt Romney has been catastrophically struggling and with his speech, Ryan humanized himself and presumably by extension, the top of the ticket.

2. Deceiving

On the other hand, to anyone paying the slightest bit of attention to facts, Ryan's speech was an apparent attempt to set the world record for the greatest number of blatant lies and misrepresentations slipped into a single political speech. On this measure, while it was Romney who ran the Olympics, Ryan earned the gold.

The good news is that the Romney-Ryan campaign has likely created dozens of new jobs among the legions of additional fact checkers that media outlets are rushing to hire to sift through the mountain of cow dung that flowed from Ryan's mouth. Said fact checkers have already condemned certain arguments that Ryan still irresponsibly repeated.

Fact: While Ryan tried to pin the downgrade of the United States' credit rating on spending under President Obama, the credit rating was actually downgraded because Republicans threatened not to raise the debt ceiling .

Fact: While Ryan blamed President Obama for the shut down of a GM plant in Janesville, Wisconsin, the plant was actually closed under President George W. Bush .
Ryan actually asked for federal spending to save the plant, while Romney has criticized the auto industry bailout that President Obama ultimately enacted to prevent other plants from closing.

Fact: Though Ryan insisted that President Obama wants to give all the credit for private sector success to government, that isn't what the president said. Period.

Fact: Though Paul Ryan accused President Obama of taking $716 billion out of Medicare, the fact is that that amount was savings in Medicare reimbursement rates (which, incidentally, save Medicare recipients out-of-pocket costs, too) and Ryan himself embraced these savings in his budget plan

Elections should be about competing based on your record in the past and your vision for the future, not competing to see who can get away with the most lies and distortions without voters noticing or bother to care. Both parties should hold themselves to that standard. Republicans should be ashamed that there was even one misrepresentation in Ryan's speech but sadly, there were many.

3. Distracting

And then there's what Ryan didn't talk about.

Ryan didn't mention his extremist stance on banning all abortions with no exception for rape or incest, a stance that is out of touch with 75% of American voters

Ryan didn't mention his previous plan to hand over Social Security to Wall Street.

Ryan didn't mention his numerous votes to raise spending and balloon the deficit when George W. Bush was president .

Ryan didn't mention how his budget would eviscerate programs that help the poor and raise taxes on 95% of Americans in order to cut taxes for millionaires and billionaires even further and increase ☐ yes, increase ☐ the deficit .

These aspects of Ryan's resume and ideology are sticky to say the least. He would have been wise to tackle them head on and try and explain them away in his first real introduction to voters. But instead of Ryan airing his own dirty laundry, Democrats will get the chance.

At the end of his speech, Ryan quoted his dad, who used to say to him, ""Son. You have a choice: You can be part of the problem, or you can be part of the solution."

Ryan may have helped solve some of the likeability problems facing Romney, but ultimately by trying to deceive voters about basic facts and trying to distract voters from his own record, Ryan's speech caused a much larger problem for himself and his running mate.

Handy Shortwave Chart
Bill McFadden
billmc@agora.rdrop.com

Band allocations and time zone conversions for the USA. Includes broadcast bands used outside the USA. For multi-use bands, primary usage is shown.
Some stations operate outside official bands. Information is from Oct 2008
FCC rules and Sep 2009 NTIA manual, see Chapter 4 of:
http://www.ntia.doc.gov/osmhome/redbook/redbook.html

Frequencies are in kHz. Usual spacing in shortwave broadcast bands is 5 kHz. Frequencies above 10000 kHz tend to propagate better during the day;
frequencies below 10000 kHz tend to propagate better at night.

Please e-mail suggestions and corrections to billmc@agora.rdrop.com.

WARNINGS AND DISCLAIMERS

Connecting unapproved devices to phone lines may be illegal in your area. Telephone lines present a potential shock hazard. Do not use this antenna for transmitting. Use at your own risk.

INTRODUCTION

This article describes how to use a phone line as a shortwave receiving antenna. Performance will vary depending on the kind of phone line you have. Overhead lines usually make okay antennas, while underground lines | usually don't. Phone lines carrying DSL service may be unsuitable because
